PRODIGAL TOMATOES.

Mr. S. W. Simmons, corner of Rubidge and King Streets, has showed the Examiner a sample of a tumultuous tomato yield achieved in the ordinary "back garden." It is a cluster on one stem, of four tomatoes, weighing 3¼ pounds. This is only a sample of the general crop from thirty plants, staked, and producing each four layers or "stories" of tomatoes, the upper of course not being yet so large. This would yield about ten pounds to each of the thirty plants, 300 pounds altogether.

Sensation Expected In Quebec

Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner:

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.— A Quebec despatch to the Star to-day says a special session of the Quebec Legislature will probably be had in a few weeks, when the government will deal with several important matters, including the Military Service Act, concerning which the despatch says the government will take a most sensational stand, and adds: "It is said Sir Lomer Gouin is to put before the province a most acceptable proposition even more the most ardent Nationalists." The despatch also says: This will be the last session for Sir Lomer Gouin, who is stated to be a successor to Sir Wilfrid Laurier as leader of the Liberal party in Canada. It is claimed that Ontario and the Maritime provinces, in addition to Quebec, have already accepted Sir Lomer as the future Liberal leader and the support of the western provinces is also expected.

THE BADGE OF SHAME AT THE EMPIRE

Clara Kimball Young To-day and To-morrow—One of Our Very Best Programmes

The peerless Clara Kimball Young, beloved of motion picture patrons throughout the world, will make her next appearance at the Empire to-night and to-morrow in "The Badge of Shame," a tremendous five-reel drama.

Beginning with a terrific Jewish massacre by the "Black Hundred" at Kiev, Russia, this notable picture builds scene upon scene of intense and appealing drama reaching its great climax amid the luxurious settings of a New York mansion. The story gets its title from the kind of passport issued by the Russian police to women of the town and it is through obtaining such a passport to protect herself against her enemies, that the heroine of the story is brought face to face with so many big situations.

WAGES CASE IS DECIDED

His Honour Judge Huycke with a jury tried a case brought by Stanley Paquin against the Canadian General Electric Company for wages, this morning. This case decided an interesting point to mechanics. Mr. Paquin is a young mechanic with two years' experience, and in his work, in the Plant of the Canadian General Electric he spoiled some work he was machining and the Company assumed to deduct it from his wages. The Jury found that the Company knew that he was not a fully skilled mechanic, and that he was not liable for the defective work turned out by him notwithstanding the rules of the shop, and that the Company should pay him the full amount due without any defective work.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. Paquin and Mr. B. D. Hall appeared for the Company.

Should Be Called The German Junkers' War Election Bill

Mr. Sinclair, of Guysboro, Makes Scathing Indictment of the Measure, Calling It Despotic and Unjust and Designed to Serve Party and Not National Lines—Closure Applied.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—Sir Robert Borden was back in the House this afternoon when it reassembled. Distinguished visitors in the tow of Mr. R. B. Bennett and Sir Edward Kemp and in the persons of Lord Northcliffe, Lord Richard Neville and Lt.-Col. Campbell Stewart, were given seats to the right of Mr. Speaker on the floor of the Chamber.

The motion of Sir George Foster to apply the closure to the War Election bill was carried by a majority of 25. Mr. Hugh Guthrie, Liberal member for South Wellington, voted with the government, and J. G. Turiff, of Assiniboia, did not rise. The vote was 48 to 23.

Conservatives Ashamed.

Sinclair of Guysboro, was the first to speak under the closure. He declared that he stood to gain politically by the measure. He would secure a large number of female votes, and there were no foreign voters in his county. But there were many decent Conservatives in his county who would resent and feel ashamed of the measure.

Mr. Sinclair declared that the bill should be called the "German junkers' war election bill." This Government, he said, had scoured the world for votes. It had extended the franchise to men who would never see Canada and was taking the franchise from men who had resided and been franchised here for fourteen years. Military rule in Canada, he said, was no better than military rule in Germany. (Cries of "order").

Once on a time there had been military rule in Scotland, and when men had been refused the right to worship as they pleased. They had had military rule in Ireland.

"They have it there yet," shouted Hon. Charles Murphy.

Canada, said Mr. Sinclair, was not preparing to create a military caste.

Purely a Party Measure.

The bill was designed to serve party and not national ends. It was despotic and unjust. What was to hinder the government going further and disfranchising everyone who was suspected of voting against the government. Why not disfranchise the labour unions.

Mr. Sinclair declared that the cause of the South African war was just such a thing as the modern Paul Kruger of Portage La Prairie was trying to put over on the "Outlanders" of Canada (laughter). Kruger of the Transvaal had given notice to "Murderers, burglars, thieves and outlanders" that they need hope for no consideration from him "and now let the storm burst."

"What does the Kruger of Manitoba say?" asked Mackenzie, of Cape Breton.

Canadians had fought because of Kruger's attitude, and many had left their bones on the veldt. "This bill," said Mr. Sinclair, "is an insult to the memory of these men." (Applause).

In the Commons at that time Sir Wilfrid Laurier had moved a resolution and Sir George Foster seconded it, condemning the stand taken by Kruger and advocating a policy of equal rights to all in the Transvaal. This resolution was carried unanimously and the House sang "God Save the King."

Among those who had voted for the resolution and joined in the singing were the present Prime Minister and the present Minister of Trade and Commerce.

"The civilized world and all its works must be disregarded when it stands in the way of the Tory party," concluded Mr. Sinclair.

Dr. Edwards declared that members who now talked of Krugerism had not moved against Krugerism when the war was on, until forced to do so by public sentiment. Then they had sent a few soldiers over on the C.O.D. principle.

Dr. Edwards drew a strict line between those women who had worked night and day at war work and those whose relatives were overseas. The former were not to be compared for a moment with the latter. The latter had a special interest in selecting the next government which would be appointed. It was for them to see that the efforts of their men were not put to shame by a government elected by all the disloyal and foreign elements of the country.

Stabbed Franchise in Back.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose amid the cheering of his followers. Sir Wilfrid declared that after long discussion it had been decided in Canada that there should be only one franchise for Federal or Provincial purposes. Such a principle was straightly laid down in the United States. In Canada there had been a Federal Franchise Act from 1885 to 1897. Since then the Provincial franchise had again been utilised for Federal purposes. He did not believe that any one would declare that the latter was not preferable to the first.

The Solicitor-General had declared that in this bill he was adopting the Provincial franchise. But he had proceeded to stab the Provincial franchise in the back in three different places. In all the West a man who was a British subject had the right to vote regardless of race.

Mr. Meighen denied this. He declared that the Chinese, though they might be British subjects, had not the right to vote.

"My honorable friend must know that his contention is a very specious one.

SAYS SIFTON HAS MADE A VOLTE FACE OVER CONSCRIPTION

Dr. Neely, M.P., Informs Meeting That He Advised Him in June to Go and Round Up Liberal Members and Try to Dissuade Them From Voting Against Laurier—A Sensational Charge.

At the re-nomination, as Liberal candidate for West Kent on Saturday of Mr. Archibald McCoig, M.P., Dr. Neely M. P. made the following important and significant statement:

"I am making a statement here today which this country will hear for the first time. I am taking this opport nity of making it, because I don't want my words to have the protection of Parliament. I want to say this: That since the first week in June Sir Clifford Sifton has had a right-about-face on this question of conscription. One day early in June, I met Sir Clifford on the street in Ottawa, and he called me into his office because he had heard that several Liberals were going to oppose their leader on the conscription bill. He talked to me for an hour and a half, strongly advising against any such action. His last injunction to me was to go and round up the boys and try to dissuade them from voting against Laurier.

"'Doctor,' he said, 'my boys are in the trenches. They have gone to the front like the others. But let me tell you this: that while we need men over there, this bill of Borden's will be the worst thing that could possibly happen to the country at the present time. We have spent 50 years in trying to build up a united Canada. This will spoil everything. It would take all the forces that we have in Canada just now to enforce conscription in Quebec. If it is practical results you want, you will get more recruits from Quebec under Sir Wilfrid Laurier's leadership than you will ever get from Borden (Applause.) Borden has alienated the people of that Province, and they will not trust him.'

"I am not asking you to accept this statement on my word alone. There are others who will substantiate what I have said. I will mention the names of two men, one of whom, at least, you all know well. They are: William Charlton, M.P. from Norfolk, and William Power of Quebec City. These men told me that before the second reading of the bill Sifton had approached them and expressed views similar to those which I have just outlined. Why, then, Sir Clifford Sifton's change of front? Why his letter to Senator Bostock? Why his trip to Western Canada? These are questions which he must answer and explain. He has never explained them to me from that time to this. I am sure that his reasons cannot be very patriotic, because his expressed opinions when he spoke to me in that first week of June were clearly that. Let him explain himself now."

The War Needs of Canada

THE NEED FOR A SYSTEM OF NATIONAL SERVICE

BY BENJAMIN ANTHORP GOULD

ELEVEN

Without a duly organized National Service it will be impossible for Canada to do her full part in the war. Such a service goes to the very root of marshalling the efforts of the people who cannot serve in the army itself, and by a proper direction of their abilities can make them effective in accomplishing our great purpose.

It is hardly worth while to consider at any length what has been done by the existing National Service organisation, because its futility has been so generally recognised that no one of any account is seriously maintaining that it meets our needs to any appreciable extent. Before it was put in operation it was pointed out that two fundamental faults existed in it which could not fail to destroy its usefulness, and experience has only too clearly proved the correctness of this prophecy. I therefore merely repeat again that no system of national service can possibly be effective which does not provide for a compulsory registration and for decentralized operation through local agencies.

In regard to registration no service can be national which enrols only those who choose to register. If we are to accomplish anything by the use of our human resources, we must know what these resources are, as otherwise we shall be acting in the dark. A registration ought to include all who are capable of rendering service of any kind, whether they be men, women or children of the age of fifteen and upwards. No plan which disregards women can be effective, for they have in this war, over and over again proved themselves just as patriotic and just as valuable as the men. The burden of war falls perhaps most heavily upon them, and if their strength be not made effective the total strength of Canada will be unequal to the performance of its full task.

There can be no defensible opposition to making compulsory the registration of our human power. No real exercise of governmental functions is other than compulsory; a government which should attempt to govern on the voluntary principle would at once cease to be a government at all. No requirement of individual liberty demands that a person be allowed to conceal age, sex, place of abode or personal qualifications, and enforcing of these matters is not inconsistent with that freedom which is our dearest possession. To make a registration compulsory does not mean that service will be compelled: the latter is undoubtedly an invasion of the rights of the individual and must be adopted only in time of grave necessity and undeniable need. But when it is evident that such need may at any time become critical, it is clear that the government ought to have full records of the strength of the country in human units which can be made available for such a crisis.

Another fundamental requisite to the success of a system of national service is that it shall operate through decentralized agencies. The Director of National Service attempted the impossible in seeking to obtain any comprehensive classification of manpower upon interrogatories sent out from Ottawa. Every lawyer knows it is impossible to get by interrogatories information which can easily be elicited by cross-examination. Consequently if a true knowledge of the availability of the man-power of Canada for our various needs is to be obtained, the people must be brought before an examining board, which can determine after proper questioning the possibilities of usefulness of the individuals examined.

It is evident therefore that while the system of registration ought to be coordinated and directed from Ottawa, the actual work must be done by numerous agencies in the different localities in the country. An organisation entirely suitable for such work is now being created in the establishment of about a thousand non-partisan tribunals for carrying out the provisions of the Military Service Act. The activities of these tribunals will be over as soon as the men required under the act are obtained, but they can to great advantage be continued to carry out a comprehensive plan of national service. Every person over fifteen years of age can be required to register with these tribunals, and to be subject to personal questioning, and the judicial nature of the tribunals will make them especially suited to ascertain the particular fields of greatest possible usefulness of the registrants.

From the results of these personal examinations the different human units can be classified according to their different abilities. Such a classification would not only serve as a basis for a comprehensive knowledge of what it is possible for Canada to accomplish through a proper organization on a business system, but could also be utilised if at any time it should become necessary to impose conscription of service other than that of men for the army.

In connection with such tribunals it is possible to organize local committees to bring about far more effective voluntary service than has hitherto been accomplished. Such committees would know the needs of the country, and in turn could tell those able to render service exactly what they ought to do to help in the war. It would be possible to increase enormously the effectiveness of the effort which is already being made by having it properly directed, and also to obtain effort from those who are perfectly willing to give service, but who do not know what concrete thing they can do to help.

In connection with such a system an accurate census of material resources and of wealth can be made, and each local tribunal can become the nucleus around which all the patriotic endeavour of its district can be concentrated.

It will also be possible and advisable with the knowledge available from a really effective registration of the population to establish labour bureaus and labour exchanges which will go far towards preventing unemployment and towards directing workers to the positions in which they can be most useful. Until some such plan is adopted, we shall remain at sixes and sevens, each of us carrying on the war to a certain extent as a private war, to which we may devote as much or as little energy as we see fit, and for which we may choose unguided from any direction from above the channels through which we attempt to make our efforts of value to our country. National service alone can put the square pegs in the square holes, and make every peg useful and no peg wasted.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

"My dear Jack," he protested. "isn't that rather a wild tale? I don't mean—" he hastened to add, "that I don't believe you exactly—I should hate to have to go so far as that—but—well, I'm afraid we must have some proof other than your bare word that you were carrying Hale's revolver."

"But," exclaimed Radnor, bewildered. "Ralph knows that I was armed. I was with him that night, and he knows I shot——"

"But have you no revolver of your own" persisted the Judge.

"Why,—yes," admitted Jack, utterly at sea. "Certainly I have one. But I don't carry it about with me on afternoon rides, though I think I'd better after this!"

He said the last words laughingly, but he was vaguely troubled. He could not imagine why Judge Denby should doubt his word—should, it seemed, almost want to doubt it. Was he—it was ridiculous and yet Jack instinctively felt sure of it—trying to fix some undeserved blame upon Martin Hale? He looked at his friend, but Ralph was scowling in a puzzled way. If Jack could have known it, he was just as much at sea as himself. "Why in thunder," young Denby was thinking, "should he try to shield Hale like this"

"Judge," said Martin Hale earnestly, "I was angry a minute ago and I was not going to ask anything of you all, but I reckon I was kind of selfish. There—there are people kind of looking to me, Judge, and so I reckon that I had better eat humble pie and tell the truth. I was right close in with a whole bunch of folks that you-all are after but a right smart lot of 'em weren't no worse than I was." He paused, for never in his life had he had to talk as much as he had to-night. "Some of us went in it for fun and the danger, and some because we were bred to it, and some because we were scared into it."

Again he paused, but this time the pause suggested poignantly some thing which he might have said. What was it?

"Come, come, my friend!" interposed Judge Denby not unkindly, but with a trace of testiness. "You are not going to pretend that you were bullied into becoming a crook!"

"No, sir," said Hale quietly, meeting his eyes. "I—don't reckon anyone was ever able to bully me much—and—I never was a crook. But there's a whole heap of things that can be said between those two facts. 'Tisn't bullying for a man to find out right soon where his safety lies; and 'tisn't bullying to——"

Jack Radnor suddenly sprang to his feet with a lifted hand. The Judge's servant was talking with someone just outside the library door. The sound of the voice had a curious effect upon the occupants of the roomroom. Everyone there recognized it. When the door opened they all knew the man that they were going to see. It was Malone.

Small, brown, wizened and ugly, he come forward laboriously, his arm in a sling, his face still seamed with lines of fretful pain.

"Just came to let you know, Judge"—he began. Then he caught sight of Martin Hale and his jaw dropped. "You've got him!" he exclaimed.

Jack Radnor felt the tingling excitement that presages revelations even before one knows precisely what they are going to be. Here was Malone, the outlaw, the confederate of Hale and the rest, coming to Judge Denby's house at one in the morning as though he were a detective reporting a case!

"Malone!" he gasped. "How on earth do you dare to come here?"

"Is that right?" said Jack, with an odd flutter of his pulse. Somehow a number of things were becoming plain to him. "Is that right, sir?" he repeated, looking at Judge Denby.

The Judge's face was rather a curious study. The fresh color and the pleasant look of it had somewhat disappeared and a mask looked at them instead—something which obstinately refused to give them a single secret.

"It's right, isn't it, your Honor?" he said with rather a sardonic intonation. "If I'm not your right-hand hand man, who is?"

"Malone is certainly in my employ," he said, but his voice did not sound like himself.

"Ah!" said old Heaton. "Sort of private detective, eh, Judge? But I guess he's double-crossed you." He shook his head as though in regret, and lifted his awkward angular length from his chair. "I'm afraid I have to arrest him just the same——" He produced a pair of handcuffs.

"Judge!" shrieked Malone, "tell him that I'm your man, in your pay! Tell him that I never double crossed you! Tell him I——"

"Mr. Heaton," said Judge Denby perceptibly paler, "I will vouch for Malone."

The Sheriff looked at him a moment, and again shook his head very gently.

"I wouldn't Judge, if I were you," he said. "We've got the goods. If I were you, I'd——"

Suddenly he stopped. For again there were voices at the door, women's voices this time in pressing eagerness to enter. Radnor recognized one of these voices and started toward the door. The Judge's voice stopped him.

"I think so," said the Sheriff dryly.

"And I dare say that Justice——" the Judge gulped—"may have miscarried. I confess that I had my suspicions of Martin Hale, but I think I may have been wrong. Suppose you let both him and Malone go—on the understanding that the outlaws of the Ridge disband?"

"On their word alone?" asked Heaton.

"Well," said Denby suavely, "purely as a magistrate and as a disinterested observer, I shall be willing to take a chance on them. I will guarantee their word, Mr. Heaton."

His magnificent air seemed to clothe him in purple and gold. The Sheriff stared at him in undisguised admiration. Then he uttered a cryptic remark:

"It's a good thing never to leave your nerve behind you when you go out—Judge, what you say goes!"

TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS.

Find Out Whether You Are a Promoter or a Caretaker.

In the American Magazine a writer says:

"All the world of men is divided into two classes—caretakers and promoters. The most important decision a man can make in his business life is to determine in which one of these two classes he belongs.

"Really I have come to believe that at least half of the sorrow and failure and heartache in the business world comes simply because men won't recognize that law. Square pegs in round holes—what are they? Just promoters in caretakers' jobs, that's all, or vice versa. Brilliant subordinates who fail utterly in business on their own account? Simple enough. They are caretakers—splendid, efficient, successful caretakers—and they get the wrong idea that they are meant to be something else. A great big business suddenly begins to stagger and fall apart, and everybody wonders why. But apply the same law and it's easy—too many promoters or too many caretakers, not the proper working mixture of each.

"Alexander was a promoter of the first order. He conquered the world. But where were the caretakers to conserve and consolidate and solidify? They just weren't, that's all, and Alexander's empire fell to pieces almost before his ashes were cold. A few hundred years later Caesar conquered the world, and his empire stood for generations. Why? Because Augustus, one of the great caretakers of history, followed Caesar."

EYES IN PORTRAITS.

Why Some Always Seem to Gaze Right at You and Some Never Do.

You probably have noticed that some faces in pictures seem to follow you; also that in other pictures there are faces which are not looking at you, but no matter where you walk, even though it be in the direction in which they seem to be looking, you will never find the face looking at you. Indeed, faces in pictures are either looking at us from wherever we look at them or else they never look at us from wherever we look at them. The same is true of photographs.

The rule is very simple. If the person who was being painted or photographed was looking at the painter or the camera, then wherever you stand he will seem to be looking at you. If he was looking on one side, then wherever you stand he will seem to be looking on that side of you. This works very queerly if you have a group of people who were all looking at the camera when they were photographed. If you look at the photograph from one side they all seem to turn to follow you and then to turn back if you look at it from the other side. But if they were not looking at the camera you can never get them to look at you.

Blind Dogs and Rats.

Canines born blind or that become blind by accident are able to smell and paw their way into the most inaccessible and out of the way places. It is practically impossible to starve them, lose them or trap them. Furthermore, blind dogs learn as quickly as those that see. Loss of sight in no way interferes with their ability to learn tricks, acquire habits or find their bed.

Rats, as a matter of fact, if they use their eyes at all—a doubtful matter—can see little or nothing of the world. The retina of these creatures has no point of perfect vision such as is found in the higher animals and man; hence their noses, muscles, touch and hearing give them information about the world they live in.

Rice Culture.

The culture of rice is alluded to in the Talmud, and there is evidence that it was grown in the valley of the Euphrates and in Syria before 400 B. C. It was taken into Persia from India and later into Spain by the Arabs. Thence its culture was introduced into Italy about 1468 A. D. The Spaniards are also responsible for its introduction into Peru and other sections of Spanish America during the early colonial period, but the exact date has not been definitely determined. The first introduction of rice culture in the Americas seems really to have been in Brazil.

His Worst Book.

In "A Last Memory of Robert Louis Stevenson," by Charlotte Eaton, this curious incident is recorded: "What do you consider your brightest failure?" the novelist was asked. "'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde,'" he replied without a moment's hesitation, adding, "That is the worst thing I ever wrote." Yet in a standard book of brief biographies this is the one book title given under the name of the author.

When Real Acquaintance Began.

"When did you first become acquainted with your husband?" asked one woman.

"The first time I told him that I had overdrawn my housekeeping account," answered the other.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Reason.

"Of course they do. Naturally they are miss-managed."

Penny Wise.

Be not penny wise; riches have wings and sometimes they fly away of themselves, sometimes they must be set flying to bring in more.

Cornmeal may be used with wheat flour about one-quarter of the first to three-quarters of the second, in making white bread.

THOUGHT CHILD WAS DYING

"Cholera Infantum"

DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry Cured Her

Mothers should look well after their children during the hot summer months, as this is the time of the year this trouble is most prevalent. It begins with a looseness of the bowels, diarrhoea, the stomach becomes irritated, vomiting and purging set in, and the child rapidly loses flesh, and becomes weak, prostrated and languid. Mrs. Wm. Hall, Bridgetown, N.S., writes: "I can recommend, most highly, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. A friend of mine whose little daughter was ill with cholera infantum was given up by the doctors. The little one's mother asked me to come in and see the child. I told her I had a bottle of Dr. Fowler's" and asked her if she would try it. When the bottle was half used the child was well. This cure was a miraculous one, for I thought the child was dying at the time."

There is nothing can take the place of Dr. Fowler's.

There is nothing just as good.

Sacrifice Unrecognized.

"Some of our greatest sacrifices bring us little credit."

"That's right," replied Senator Sorghum. "When I suppress my natural inclination to arise and waste time in speechmaking nobody ever takes me by the hand and congratulates me."

Supplanted.

"What has become of the old fashioned political boss who used to sit back and put people into office?"

"He has retired," said Senator Sorghum, "to make way for the man of dominating personality who insists on putting himself into office."

Their Quarrel.

Mrs. Dasher—No, dear, you really must not invite the Fannings and the Jeromes for the same evening. The two families don't speak. Dasher—Fell out over the children, I presume. Mrs. Dasher—No; their cook quarreled.—Life.

END OF A DYNASTY

FROM THE LION TO THE LAMB.

A Line of Czars, Mad, Bad, Liberal or Despotic, but All Strong and Daring, That Died When Nicholas II., Weak and Timid, Was Flung Aside.

When the house of Romanoff fell with the abdication of Nicholas II., the czar of Russia, there came to an end one of the most extraordinary dynasties in the history of the world, a dynasty that took a stretch of tundra and steppe and turned it into an empire flung across two continents and occupying one-sixth of the land space of the world. It was the hereditary line that produced Peter the Great and the remarkable Catherine and many other virile and vigorous characters, cruel, yet efficient; wanton, yet successful.

Probably no dynasty in Europe produced so many strong figures as the house of Romanoff. Yet when it fell it was not due so much to the wrath of downtrodden, betrayed people as to the inherent weakness and shrinking meekness of the czar.

Imagine Peter or Ivan the Terrible or even Alexander of recent memory speaking as Nicholas did when informed that an outbreak had occurred in Petrograd:

"Let it be so. Thank God. I will abdicate if that is what the people want. I will go to Livadia (the imperial estate in Crimea), to my gardens, if the people want. I am so fond of flowers."

While the first Romanoff to rule over Russia was not crowned until 1613, the family had become one of influence in Muscovy in the thirteenth century. At that time Ivan Divinovitch held an important post at the court of the grand duke of Moscow. A daughter of Roman, sixth in descent from Ivan, married Ivan the Terrible, whose chief amusement was to watch people dying between courses at his banquets. Roman's successors called themselves Romanoffs.

The old Tartar dynasty in Russia came to an end in 1598. During the next few years half a dozen pretenders ravaged the country. The Swedes cut in on the north and the Poles on the west. Then the common folk and gentry of Russia met in a convention at Moscow and elected Michael Romanoff czar of the Russias. It is a peculiar coincidence that an assembly of the people chose the first of the Romanoffs and deposed the last of them.

There followed a line of mad czars, bad czars, liberal czars, reactionary czars, Peters, Catherines, Elizabeths and Alexanders, all men and women of virility and strength of mind regardless of their other failings. They ruled by force of personal strength.

This is the descent of the recently deposed Czar Nicholas—a lamb foaled in a nest of tigers and lionesses. Count Paul Vassili, who spent twoscore years at the court of Petrograd and who had an intimate view of three czars, in his personal memoirs, composed shortly before his death a few years ago, had this to say of Nicholas:

"Nicholas II. is one of those timid, weak natures which nevertheless like to assert themselves at certain moments in matters utterly without importance, but which to their eyes appear to be vital ones. His mind is as small as his person. He sees the biggest events go by without being touched or being even aware of their great or tragic sides.

"He likes to be feared, but he cannot inspire respect, much less awe. He feels this, and, not knowing how to fight against this lack of consideration of his person, he becomes savage in his wrath and, though in appearance a quiet, inoffensive little man, is capable of the utmost cruelty and hardness.

"When the news was brought to him of the terrible disaster at Tsoushima, which cost Russia the greater part of her navy, the czar was playing tennis in the park of Tsarskoe Selo. He read the telegram that sounded the death-knell of so many hopes and then quietly resumed the game.

"When he found himself confronted with the revolution of 1905 it never occurred to him that he might avert it by putting his own person forward. On that dreadful day in January which ended in such bloodshed he never for a moment remembered the proud attitude of his ancestor, that other Nicholas who on an almost similar occasion came out of the palace and confronted the angry crowd, forcing the multitude by his mere presence to fall to their knees and submit.

"The only thought of the czar was to flee from danger and leave to others the task of smothering the revolution in blood."

An incident reported in 1916 gives an insight to the physical courage of the ex-czar, or, rather, the lack of it. The account at the time said:

"The emperor was reviewing the troops of General Brussiloff on the Bukowina front when an Austrian flier appeared overhead and dropped bombs some distance from the czar Nicholas entirely lost his self possession. In consequence General Brussiloff was bitterly reproached and General Ivanoff was put in command over him."

Nicholas II. ascended the Russian throne in 1894 and had therefore been czar of all the Russias for twenty-three years when his reign and the dynasty of the Romanoffs came to their sudden end.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Vision Your Sons, Mothers of Canada!

Vision them at early morning when through rising mists, there bursts a hurricane of fire---

See your valiant boys --- calm, grim, but cheerful --- "stand-to-arms" until the Hun's "morning hate" dies away.

Picture them at breakfast, the meal that must bring them the bodily sustenance to carry them through the strain of another day.

Then think of what might happen if, one morning, there was no breakfast---no food to be had, and the word went down the lines that Canada had failed them.

Vision all these things, and then—As Women of Canada—Mothers of Men—Answer this Call to Service.

Canada must send to Her Own, and to the Allies Fighting Forces, more wheat, more beef, more bacon, and more of such other foods as are non-perishable and easily exported.

Canada can do this, without depriving her own population of a fair share of any of these foods if You Women will but help.

All we ask of you is, that instead of buying so much white flour (if you do your own baking) you vary your baking by using one-third oatmeal, corn, barley or rye flour. Or, if you buy your bread, that you order a certain proportion of brown bread each day.

Second, instead of using as much beef and bacon as formerly, you vary your family's diet, by substituting for beef and bacon such equally nutritious foods as fish, peas, lentils, potatoes, nuts, bananas, etc.

Third, and this is most important —positively prevent the waste of a single ounce of food in your household.

They Must Be Fed

Statistics show that, everyday, in Canada, sufficient food is thrown into garbage cans, to feed the entire Canadian Overseas Army.

Travellers have often remarked that many a European family would live well upon the quantity and quality of food wasted in some Canadian homes.

Such waste is shameful at any time; but in these times it is criminal.

Our only hope is that with these truths before you, and in view of the vital issues at stake, we may count upon your earnest co-operation in stopping this appalling waste; and in substituting other foods for the wheat, beef and bacon that must be sent overseas.

Next week a Food Service Pledge and Window Card will be delivered to you. The Pledge is your Dedication to War Service. The Window Card your Emblem of Honour.

Women's Auxiliary, Organization of Resources Committee, In Co-operation with The Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller.

The Game Of Making Good

(J. R. Worden in "Simonds Guide")

In the game of making good, there's a time limit. When we were seventeen the future to us was a world unexplored with time unlimited. But at thirty-five or forty-seven, our perspective has changed. We look into the future through wiser eyes, and are startled—time has acquired boundary lines. We look back at opportunities lost—a thing done which we ought done—a things done which we ought not to have done—at things left undone which we ought to have done—at long hours and well-meant labour which proved profitless. And it shows in our score.

We stand at the crest of the hill—the game is half over—to win we must capitalize the future with experience gathered from the past. But we cannot afford to put off till to-morrow. We cannot afford to miss even one opportunity. There is a limit—a time limit—and every day, every hour, every minute is reducing just that much our chance of rolling up a good score in the game of making good.

We can't afford to go through the year not knowing whether we are winning, playing even, or going behind. A year is three hundred and sixty-five precious days — eight thousand seven hundred and sixty hours—the best days and hours of our life, and we can't coax them back. If we are losing, we want to know to-day, so that to-morrow we can "change the crump." And next week, we want to know how much we profited by the change.

If we [illegible] percentage of all failures is due, not [illegible] work, but rather to each man's ignorance of the actual condition of his own particular business.

Further investigation convinces us that the great majority of small retailers are capable, hard-working business men—working in the dark—waiting for the end of the year to find out if their score has gone up or down in the game of making good.

But we find the man who is making a "killing"—the man with the best score—is the man who labours less and thinks more—the man who systematizes—who installs a proper accounting system—the man who knows which clerk deserves a raise and which should be fired—who knows which lines should be discontinued and which pushed. He is the man who knows this week what he made last week. He is managing. We have the same opportunity. What he is doing we can do—we have the same ambition, ability and energy. But, we must be up and doing—we've reached the crest of the hill, and—in the game of making good, there's a time limit.

THRESHING WHEAT IN ALBERTA.

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 10.—According to reports received by the United Grain Growers, Limited, 75 per cent. of the wheat of Alberta has already been cut and threshing operations are in full swing in many sections.

Moses kept a second hand clothes shop, and on leaving it in charge of his son Ikey during the dinner hour imparted to him the fact that on the price ticket one dot represented $1, two dots $2, and so on. Returning Moses inquired of his son: "Haf you had any customers Ikey—vat?" "Yes, Fader. I have sold de grey coat and vest for $8." "Vell, vell, now, you did goot business, for it was only $5." "No, Fader, I kept the ticket; see, it has eight little dots here." The old Jew scratched his head, and, smilingly remarked "Jubilee Jerusalem! I vill never kill another fly."

ORCHARDS IN NOVA SCOTIA

GRANDMOTHERS of all orchards on this continent are those of Nova Scotia, between two great rolls, of mountains that used to be lava when the world was young, and now play at windbreaking for the hundred-mile long Annapolis Valley with the bright blue Annapolis River flowing through the centre of it. The Acadian French planted the first trees back in 1605, from seeds brought from Normandie in little sailing-vessels we'd be afraid to trust out of sight of the pierhead.

Who doesn't love apple-blossoms—miles of 'em, with a salt ocean breeze seeking out the sweetness, and a June sun flirting with every perfect tree at the same time? Who desn't love a baked apple, too—a big, red, juicy, baked apple like a melting island in a sea of cream? The Nova Scotians assert that there are no apples to compare with theirs, because the salt air gives them a taste that no inland-grown fruit can boast of.

Apple growing is a good proposition in Nova Scotia, for the trees live from 60 to 100 years in the valley as compared with 20 to 60 years in more trying climates. Cranberries, raspberries, strawberries and all other small fruits do well, to say nothing of the Digby cherries which make the most wonderful pies you ever tasted.

A motor trip through Nova Scotia is an ideal September holiday. The little towns nestle into their orchards like a violet under its leaves; the sparkling basin is an infinitely extended, sun-warmed bathing beach; all the farmhouses are painted white, and, as there are no factories, they stay that way, looking like stage scenery against the vivid green country. And finally, there is all the game and fishing you'd want in the rough country over South Mountain, where the hunting camps lure their September guests with a promise of moose.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Owner's Unexpected Return

Did He See a Ghost?

By PAULINE D. EDWARDS

"The Society For Psychical Research is doing some good work lately," said Gilbert to his friend Slade as they sat beside the open fire. "I believe the time will come when it will show a scientific relation between mortality and immortality."

"I do not believe in ghosts," said John Slade emphatically.

Daniel Gilbert drew his chair nearer to the crackling blaze.

"I never believed in ghosts—until last year," he said quietly.

"What happened last year?" Slade's tone was skeptical.

"I saw a ghost."

"Where had you been dining?" laughed Slade.

"I hadn't dined at all. I came down to the Elms quite unexpectedly. I wanted to look up some papers that I knew to be in the library. The house had been closed all summer, and at this time even the caretaker was away for a few days.

"My plan was to dine at the village inn, go up to the Elms, spend the evening searching for the papers, sleep in my old room and take the first train to town after breakfast. My train was several hours late, and when we arrived in Elmville the inn was shut up for the night. If you are acquainted with our village boniface you will understand that for neither love nor money nor 'auld lang syne' would he open his doors to a guest after midnight. So it meant a dinnerless tramp up to the house.

"It was nearly 1 o'clock when I entered the avenue, and I was surprised to find the iron gates of the drive wide open. That was against my orders.

"It was a dark night. The stars shone bright, and a young moon threw a thin silver veil of light in the open spaces. As I came in sight of the house I stopped still in my tracks.

"You may not believe me, John, but my house was a blaze of light from basement to cupola, and from behind the lighted windows came the strains of an orchestra, while forms floated to and fro in swaying rhythm to the waltz melody.

"As I stood rooted to the spot the church clock in the village struck once, and as if by magic the music ceased and all motion stopped behind the thin curtains. An instant later every light in the house died out as if extinguished by some mighty breath. I ran up the steps and fitted my key in the great lock. It yielded, and the heavy door swung outward to my touch.

"I threw a ray of light about the great entrance hall and reached for the button to switch on the electric lights. The button clicked without response. Again and again I tried, but in vain.

"A search of the drawing room and library revealed the same condition. The current was shut off and probably had been since the departure of the caretaker.

"I lighted the large oil lamp on the library table. It was an easy matter to dig out the documents I wanted and store them into my leather bag. As I set the bag on the floor I saw lying on the Turkish rug a white rose, fresh and fragrant, as if just plucked.

"This was no earthly blossom I decided as I laid it before me on the table. And then I had another shock, for [illegible] and [illegible] hand and in the very spot on which I had placed my bag when entering the room was a small lace handkerchief. Across one corner was embroidered in tiny letters a girl's name."

"And the name—the girl's name?" he asked quickly.

"Viola—just Viola," said Gilbert dreamily.

"That is not all of the story," said Slade impatiently. "Go on, old man."

"No; that is not all. I turned to the mantelpiece and leaned my head against the high shelf, trying to solve the mystery of my house, for to my knowledge no woman save the caretaker, an old black mammy, had darkened—or shall I say brightened?—my doors for several years.

"When I turned back to the table the handkerchief was gone!

"With hardly a thought as to whether I was seeking shadow or substance I thrust the rose in my pocket, and, snapping on my pocket electric, I hastened into the hall. There was a gleam of white in the distance, and I pursued it. It flicked around a corner and disappeared up a small spiral staircase that led to the second floor.

"When I reached the top of the stairs the bit of white became a woman's graceful form, with some ethereal garment of filmy stuff floating behind her. And as I followed I seemed to be walking among violets.

"Down the grand staircase she vanished, this time with little clicking heels on the polished floor. I held her steadily in my ray of light and was after her like a flash. We crossed the drawing room, and then she disappeared through the paneled door that leads into the west gallery—you know that long, glass inclosed gallery that my father used as a winter parlor? She flew down the length, and I hoped to catch her at the end, but at the door leading into the gardens she turned her face toward me for one instant, and, by Jove, John, she was the loveliest girl I ever laid eyes upon—and you know I don't care for women!

"Just a glimpse of her beauty, and the door opened and closed sharply, leaving me alone in the west gallery. I was fired out by the exciting adventure of the night and too wide awake to sleep, so I went back to the library, got my bag, put out the light and left the house. I spent the night sitting on a bench in the railroad station, and it is needless to say that I took the first train to town."

"Isn't it enough?"

"You didn't search the house, make any effort to discover whether the intruder was spook or human—didn't you do anything?"

"Nary thing. I went abroad the following week and at times forgot the incident. A few days ago it came back to me, and so I invited you down to spend this night with me at the Elms."

"Why this particular night?" demanded Slade suspiciously.

"Because it's the anniversary of my adventure with Viola," replied Gilbert coolly. "I want a witness to further demonstrations, you know."

John Slade sank back into the shadows of his chair and smoked thoughtfully. Once he burst into a reminiscent chuckle.

"I suspect you have lost your heart to this Viola, as you call her. Was she so lovely?"

"She was perfect," said Gilbert sincerely. "Her hair was that dusky black that frames the face mistily, you know; her eyes were almost golden and her brows fine and black like her hair; but her coloring, her features, her form—oh, I say, Slade, I can't get her face out of my mind!"

Slade lighted a fresh cigar. "I must tell you an incident of the same sort that happened to a friend of mine," he said solemnly, "and it may serve to throw light on your own affair."

"Out with it," said Gilbert briefly. "It's only 10 o'clock now. You have till midnight, John."

"This man owned a grand old place in the country, but he was a bachelor and never looked at it.

"There was a young cousin of the man's, a girl who was a beauty and a toast. Never mind her name. She has married and changed it for another. This girl was up to all sorts of mischief and pranks and carried a lot of scatterbrained young folk with her in many a harmless escapade.

"She conceived the idea of giving a ball in the old mansion of her cousin. Now, I have not the slightest doubt that the man would have gladly consented to turn the house over for such a merrymaking had they asked him. But, no; of course half the fun lay in the clandestine proceedings!

"And so one night when the moon was young and the aged caretaker off [illegible] several great automobiles rolled quietly up the long avenue, and the mischievous girl and her friends and their reluctant chaperons trooped through a side entrance and made their way to the great ballroom on the second floor.

"The room had been cleaned in some mysterious manner, and when the electric chandeliers were ablaze and the polished floor stretched forth an inviting surface the small orchestra they had brought tuned up, and the fun began. Several servants unpacked refreshments in an anteroom while the young people danced and between dances wandered over the grand old house lighted from top to bottom by Laura's"—

"Laura!" shouted Gilbert, but Slade interrupted:

"Hold on there, Danny! I didn't mean to make a slip! The house was lighted up and the dancing was going on and everything was going along smoothly when suddenly a messenger appeared among them. The station agent from the depot, who had known of the merrymaking, came to say that the owner had arrived at the station and was on his way to the house. He had jumped on his wheel and sped with the message.

"They worked fast and without judgment. One bright soul cut the electric light wires and plunged the house in total darkness. Before a search could be made for candles and escape made the front door was opened and the intruders heard footsteps below stairs. After awhile the library door opened, and all was silent.

"By aid of matches and the station master's bicycle lantern the party reached the ground floor and by stealth left the house. That was all part of the fun, don't you know. And then, just as they were going to leave, one of the girls discovered she had lost her pet handkerchief and was sure she had left it in the library. She recovered it, although she would not say how, and she was quite breathless when she climbed into the motor. And that is all."

Daniel Gilbert arose to his full height and laid his pipe on the mantel. "And that was Laura, who got up a party and everything. I shall bless your wife all her days, John, if she will introduce me to my ghost girl—Viola—Viola who?"

"Viola Blair. She happens to be visiting Laura now. I hardly think you'll find her in the west gallery tonight, Dan."

Gilbert pulled a time table from his pocket and looked at his watch. "She is quite free?" he asked abruptly.

Slade yawned and stretched his long arms luxuriously. "She was—er—until—we always thought she had met her fate just a year ago tonight. She has never been quite the same since. I can't say any more"—

"There's a train to town at 11:05. We'll take it. You and Laura owe me something, John."

"We'll pay it with compound interest. That will be Viola!" said Slade, grasping his friend's outstretched hand

PRINT SHOPS AFLOAT.

A necessary adjunct to Uncle Sam's big fighting ships is a printing plant. Ship orders radios and the like are now set into type and printed instead of the old method of making duplicate typewritten copies. Most typesetting had to be done my hand until recently a linotype machine has been perfected to do the work. Ordinary typesetting machine was found to be useless because of tendency of molten metal to spill in rough weather, but a patent metal box now remedies this. In their spare time printer-jackies get out a monthly magazine, with ads and serial stories and general ship news which compared favourably with land printed variety.—Wall Street Journal.

An enterprising Yankee went over to England and decided to open a shop in Birmingham. He obtained premises next door to a man who kept a shop of the same description, but was not very pushing in his business methods, preferring to jog along in the old conservative way. The methods of the Yankee, however, caused the older trader to wake up, and with the spirit of originality strong upon him, he affixed a notice over his shop with the words, "Established fifty years," painted in large letters.

THE LATEST METHOD

of grafting skin over a severe burn or scald is by the Zam-Buk process. Zam-Buk contains herbal ingredients that literally grow new skin. How much safer, simpler and cheaper than the old method, which was by surgery!

Mrs. George Currie, of 194 Waterloo Ave., Guelph, Ont., writes: "My baby sustained a very severe burn, and although he received medical attention for eight weeks, he got very little better. Finally the doctor told me that skin would have to be grafted.

"Meantime I had heard of Zam-Buk and decided to try it first. This soothing balm soon drew out the inflammation, and in a short time I could notice a great improvement. New skin began to form, and in three weeks' time the burn was quite healed over, without having to resort to surgery."

Zam-Buk is equally good for cuts and bruises, as well as for eczema, old sores, blood-poisoning and piles. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

GREAT VALUE OF TIN.

It Is Indispensable, and There Is No Substitute For It.

Nickel and tin are the only important metals that have not been found in paying quantities among our mineral resources, although the fact that we are the largest consumers of tin plate in the world has stimulated the search. Tin ore in small quantities has been found in several places in the United States, but most of what we use comes from Cornwall, in England; Banka, in the East Indies, and Malacca, in southern Asia.

Tin is a metal that has played an important part in the history of the world. Combined with copper to make bronze, it was doubtless the first metal that man converted to his use. Weapons, tools and utensils made of bronze were used during a long period before iron and steel came into use. The United States now uses in the manufacture of tin cans as much tin plate as all other countries together use for all purposes.

There is no substitute for tin. Price has little effect on consumption, which is not true of other metals. If tin cost 15 cents a pound we should perhaps put a thicker coating on our plates and make better solder and babbitt metal, but if it were a dollar a pound we should still have to use it for nearly every one of the purposes for which it is now employed.

The lack of tin is one of the few things that keep the United States from being self sufficient. If we were suddenly deprived of our supply of tin and solder we should soon have serious sanitary troubles.

EXPERTS IN THE WATER.

The Japanese Are Masters of Many Tricks of Swimming.

The Japanese are extremely fond of swimming, and among the younger generation of students and the coast population there are some splendid long distance swimmers. Schools of natation teach the art in a systematic manner, and, although the best racing records of Japan are not equal to the western, a Japanese expert can perform some truly wonderful feats. For example, he can jump into deep water and maintain his position with the water no higher than the loins, while he fires a gun, writes on a slate, paints a picture on a fan with a brush or moves freely in every direction as if he were walking on solid ground.

The expert, while he rarely emulates the graceful high dive of the American or the European, can leap from a great height and strike the surface of the water with his chest without sinking or wetting his face and head. In some mysterious way he contrives to escape the painful consequences which the impact would inevitably cause to the foreigner who should try this feat. It is said that the old time samurai frequently made use of this trick when crossing a river or stream. In such cases they carried their armor and weapons on their heads.

The famous "crawl" stroke, which occidental swimmers first acquired not very long ago, has been known and practiced in Japan for hundreds of years.

Superstitions of the Sea.

The persons who sail as passengers on a ship which does not regularly carry passengers are looked upon either with favor or disfavor by the crew. The presence of a child is thought to be a good omen, while women are believed to bring bad luck. Lawyers are looked upon with greatest dislike, for they are considered particularly unlucky. The name "sea lawyer" is the worst term one sailor can use toward another.

A cat on board ship is supposed to cause the vessel to meet with gales. The old saying is, "A cat carries a gale in her tail," and the average sailor believes that when a cat frisks about the deck she is raising a storm. Pigs also have a bad reputation on shipboard.

A Pathetic Benefit.

Perhaps one of the saddest of the many benefits which have been celebrated at Drury Lane was that given on June 27, 1828, for Grimaldi, the greatest clown the stage has known, when the heartbroken old man was wheeled on to the stage in an armchair and hopelessly broke down in his endeavor to sing his once famous ditty, "Hot Codlins."

The old man's memory had completely forsaken him. On that occasion a sum of £1,700 was realized, which for many years remained a record.

Pure Reason.

In his essay "Perpetual Peace," published in 1795, Immanuel Kant declared that we can never have universal peace until the world is politically organized, and it will never be possible to organize the world politically until the people, not the kings, rule. And he added that the peoples of the earth must cultivate and attain the spirit of hospitality and good will toward all races and nations.

LIBERIA, THE FREE.

Negro Republic in Africa Has Had Troublous History.

Liberia, the negro republic on the west coast of Africa, has a peculiar interest for the student of nationalism. It is true that, from the history of the country, no one would be inclined to pronounce the experiment of negro self-government a definite success. When, however, the origin of the country is considered, and the difficulties which the Liberians have had to contend with, it must be conceded that the outlook is, at any rate, encouraging.

Liberia has its beginnings something more than a hundred years ago. At that time, towards the close of the Eighteenth Century, the abolition of slavery was just beginning to be advanced as a concrete policy, and there came along with it, of course, the question of repatriation. The north-west coast of Africa was early regarded as a suitable district in which to form a colony for returned slaves, and after one or two experiments at other points, Cape Mesurado was finally chosen by the American Colonization Society as an appropriate site for the first detachment of American freed negroes. In the December of 1821, a treaty was concluded by Lieutenant Stockton with certain native princes, by which a tract of land, in the region, fit for the purpose was acquired, but several months passed before the hostility of the natives could be overcome. At length a start was made in the matter of organization, and the society assigned a thirty-acre tract of land to each man who had come over, also supplying him with the means of cultivating it. The society, however, seemed to be confronted, at every turn, by difficulties, and in a short time its agents went back to America, taking with them those of the colonists who desired to return. It was then that the future Liberians began to justify their existence. There arose amongst them a leader in the person of the negro, Elijah Johnson, and the little colony rallied round him, and straightway began to prosper. New tracts of land were acquired, new settlements were formed, and as the aims of the colony began to be better known, help came from sympathizers abroad. Thus, in the year 1834, a town was founded in the newly acquired Bassa Land, which was called Edina, in acknowledgment of substantial aid sent to the colony from Edinburgh.

Meanwhile, the name Liberia had been invented for the country by the missionary, R. R. Gurley, and as such, in 1847, it declared itself an independent republic, and was recognized by most of the Powers. It was during these early years that all the great emigrations took place. Freed slaves, negroes, and mulattoes, came over to the West African settlements in a steady stream, and the little state began to display considerable prosperity. Numerous churches and schools were founded, a regular postal system was introduced, newspapers were established, and slavery in the neighboring states was abolished.

Much of this prosperity Liberia owed to its presidents, for it has had several notable presidents, such as J. J. Roberts and the famous President Arthur Barclay, a man of unmixed negro descent. President Barclay was elected in 1904 and re-elected in 1907, and under his guidance the Liberian Government steadily extended its influence amongst the indigenous tribes of the country, which, up to that time, had been specially tenacious of local independence. During all these years, however, the ship of the Liberian state had ever been in more or less troubled waters. First it was a difficulty with France and the United Kingdom about boundaries, then it was the great financial question, and then again it was the "native question." So it came about that in July, 1910, the Government of the United States, acting in general agreement with the United Kingdom, France, and Germany, took charge of the finances, military organization, agriculture, and boundary questions of the republic. The policy was productive of the best results, but Liberia still continued to be a land of unrest. Thus when Daniel Howard was elected President in 1912, he immediately got into difficulties with Germany because of insults offered to German merchants. German gunboats forced an apology, but, next year, Liberia retaliated by granting special privileges to English traders. And now the little republic is in the war.

Great Are Nicknamed.

Popularity is the forerunner of a nickname in the British army.

Soldiers still think of Lord Roberts as "Bobs" and of Kitchener always as "K." or "K. of K."

Sir Douglas Haig to the British private is never anything else but "D. H."

General Maude rejoices in the title of "The Strafer."

DANGEROUS EYE STRAIN.

It Has Many Symptoms and May Affect the Whole System.

Chief among the symptoms of eye strain are watering of the eye, a gluing together of the eyelids on awakening in the morning, headache, the position and character of which vary with each individual. It may be neuralgic or it may be dis ply seated.

The headache is often replaced by an inflammation of the eyelids, especially in young and healthy persons who also have a little conjunctivitis with a feeling of tension or fullness in the eyes which may become real pain of a dull aching character, the eyeballs being very tender on pressure.

Sometimes there are vertigo and sickness, with dyspepsia, palpitation and even difficulty in breathing. Sleeplessness is a very frequent symptom, due in part to the excessive flow of blood to the brain and in part to the low tone of the whole nervous system.

The symptoms of eye strain appear sooner in those who lead a confined and sedentary life, who follow occupations which need a constant use of the eyes in bad or unsuitable light and in those who are debilitated from any cause. The symptoms appear later in those of coarser fiber, who pass much of their time in the open air or who follow occupations which do not need a prolonged use of the eyes for close work.—London Lancet.

Unworked Wealth in Siberia.

It is probable that Siberia will one day become an extremely rich country, for it has a natural wealth so diversified and as yet almost untouched that it has no rival in the old world. How vast this wealth is is described by A. Kammer in "La Nature." Before the war Siberia was producing from one million to one million three hundred thousand tons of flour a year. As a grazing country it has no limits, and it exports large quantities of leather, tallow, and butter. Its forests are almost inexhaustible, and it supplies furs to all the world. Its mineral wealth can only be guessed at, for the greater part of the country has never been prospected; but there are several enormous deposits of oil.

It does not make any difference whether you have one customer or fifty customers on Monday next, it is the boys who get the greatest number of new customers that win the prizes. Supposing you did not have any customers when you started, and at the end of the contest you had fifteen, another boy had fifty when the contest started, and at the end he had sixty-four, this boy would have only got fourteen new customers. SELL ONLY THE EXAMINER. Get your friends to try it for a few weeks and you will find they will be regular customers, and remember a gain of a few new customers each week may win you the $25.00 PRIZE. If there is anything you DO NOT UNDERSTAND drop into THE EXAMINER OFFICE this week and it will be explained to you.

The only condition is that Each Boy or Girl must buy their own Papers and no Prizes will be awarded to a boy who buys another boys papers and put them in as his own.

IN ADDITION THERE WILL BE A

WEEKLY CASH PRIZE OF $1.00

Which will be paid EVERY MONDAY to the NEWSBOY or GIRL who makes the BIGGEST GAIN DURING EACH WEEK. The Russian Situation Is Growing Worse

THE FRENCH TROOPS MAKE SUCCESSFUL RAIDS

NEWS OF BATTLE WITH KORNILOFF'S FORCES IS MOMENTARILY EXPECTED

Loyalist Russian Troops at Luga Are Expected to Give Battle to the Revolters---Cabinet Has Resigned To Give Kerensky "Full Freedom of Action"---Deputation of Cossacks Pledge Their Assistance to Prevent Civil War and Will Try to Affect a Settlement---French Troops Make Successful Raid.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William G. Shepard, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, September 11.—News of the first battle between the forces of militarism and of democracy at Luga, eighty-five miles' distant from Petrograd was momentarily expected in the capital to-day. General Korniloff's revolters, or at least an advance guard of his main column have reached Luga. A force of loyal Provisional Government troops is stationed there. They will fight Korniloff's further progress toward the capital, in his announced plan to seize government control. Meanwhile Petrograd was stirred with preparations for rigorous repression of the revolt.

THE CABINET RESIGNS.

The entire cabinet resigned, to grant Premier Kerensky "full freedom of action." Their resignations have not yet been accepted, and the members provisionally will continue to act.

The Cadet members, however, refused further participation in the Government. They expressed indignation that Kerensky had not consulted with them in preparations for putting down the Korniloff revolt. General Vasilovsky, the Military Governor of Petrograd, likewise formally resigned, apparently taking umbrage at the assumption of military powers by Kerensky.

The Premier rallied his forces to-day in the supreme crisis with which the new democracy is now faced. Firm confidence was expressed by his supporters.

COSSACKS ARE LOYAL.

Of foremost significance was the action of a deputation nof Cossacks in calling on Kerensky and pledging their assistance in the prevention of civil war. They promised to do all in their power to effect a settlement of the differences between the Provisional Government and General Korniloff. Since Korniloff's principal supporters as reported here, are Cossack regiments, the effect of this pledge was to revive hope here of an amicable adjustment of the revolt despite Korniloff's irrevocable stand. Korniloff intends serving notice on the Provisional Government that he would disregard all Kerensky's orders. The Cossack delegation left for front headquarters immediately after conferring with Kerensky, hoping to begin their mediation at once.

The Workmen's and Soldiers' Council in Petrograd held a hasty meeting to-day. The military section will send delegates to meet Korniloff and his revolting troops and endeavour to persuade them from their course. Eighty Korniloff supporters in Petrograd were arrested to-day in a dragnet set over the whole city by the Premier. Order continues on the streets, and the down-town crowds last night did not exceed the normal. The Provisionals Government is still continuing its efforts to have General Alexieff, formerly chief of staff under Grand Duke Nicholas, assumed the post of Commander-in-Chief.

Details of how Kerensky first learned of Kerniloff's revolt were made public to-day. The Premier received Vladimir Lvoff, former procurator of the Holy Synod, who brought the General's ultimatum. Kerensky was told in this communication that Korniloff's supporters were willing that Kerensky should take the portfolio of Justice in the new cabinet, which Korniloff was to form. The Premier was invited to headquarters to confer with a group there, including Guchkoff.

Kerensky replied to Ivoff: "I never expected Korniloff to insult me in such a fashion."

He then telephoned to the General warning him: "I cannot accept your conditions. I must do everything possible to break this movement."

Ivoff then started to leave, but Kerensky personally placed him under arrest. Subsequently it was stated Lvoff had given the names of a number of prominent conspirators in the plot. He was held in the fortress of St. Peter and Paul.

Petrograd grew noticeably uneasy to-day. There were reports of the arrest of a number of Duma members.

PETROGRAD, September 11.—According to reports from the Winter Palace where the Government Council was in session this afternoon, a considerable force of supporters of General Korniloff already have passed Luga on their way to Petrograd. The Government refuses to make a statement, but Foreign Minister Toreatchenko informs the Associated Press that he believes Korniloff's forces consist of only a few hundred men. The town and railroad station at Luga are in Korniloff's hands. By order of Premier Kerensky the railroad track between Luga and Petrograd has been torn up in places, gangs being engaged on the work all night. On the Petrograd side of Luga are forces which so far have stood firm for the Government. The Government last night made repeated efforts to induce General Alexieff, former commander-in-chief of the Russian army, to take command against Korniloff, but met with refusal. Members of the Government state that there is no prospect whotever of Korniloff submitting.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, September 11.—Members of the Provisional Government to-day discussed as an alternative or completement to the directory, the formation of a permanent national assembly on the lines of the Moscow conference which is to be summoned immediately. Alexander J. Guchkoff, the Octoberist leader, who formerly held positions of President of the Duma, Chief of the Munitions Bureau, and Minister of War and Navy, has gone over to General Korniloff. M. Guchkoff had left Petrograd on Saturday for the Russian field headquarters.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, September 11. — General Korniloff has ordered his troops to detrain at a railroad station at Dno and to march on and besiege the City of Petrograd. The Government still is moving out of the capital to oppose Korniloff's forces. General Denikino, commander of the Russian armies on the southwestern front, has telegraphed to Premier Kerensky that he intends to support General Korniloff. One Russian says all the Kerensky Cabinet have resigned to give him a free hand in dealing with Korniloff.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 11.—In the last few days owing to unfavourable weather, says an official statement issued to-day by the British War Office, "operations by our naval aircraft have been restricted. In an operation which occurred, however, one enemy aircraft was shot down and another was driven down out of control. Bombs have been dropped on Houttave airdrome, but owing to bad visibility the result could not be observed. All our machines returned safely.

LLOYD GEORGE WAS "BROKE"

Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The director of a business that is spending more than $30,000,000 a day, was flat broke to-day—didn't even have car fare. When his automobile broke down he hailed a passing car and found he didn't have the four cents fare. A passenger loaned him the necessary tuppence. The penniless passenger was Lloyd George.

SIX SUBMARINES DESTROYED IN AN ATTACK ON CONVOY

Report Reaches Washington of Naval Brush Off Coast of France When Fleet of Merchant Ships Was Attacked

NO PARTICULARS YET

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Six hostile submarines are believed to have been destroyed off the coast of France on September 5, when they attacked a fleet of merchant ships, of which the American steamer Westwego was one. Two merchant ships were lost. A report from Paris to this effect reached the Navy Department to-day.

The merchant fleet, of which the Westwego was one, was en route to Europe from the United States when attacked. The vessels were under convoy, but no details of the fight were included in the reports received. No loss of life was reported nor were the names of the two ships sunk included in the despatch. The Navy Department has cabled for additional information. The Westwego, an oil tank steamer, was built in Germany in 1914 for Roumanian account under the name of Steaua Romena. Later her registry was changed to American and afterwards her name was made Westwego. The vessel was of 3,039 tons net and she carried a crew of 42 men.

Russian Crisis Affects The War On Every Front

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 11.—The Russian crisis overshadows all else in the news and editorials columns of the morning newspapers. The Times says that the outlook is very dark, and that it affects the war on every front, for the Allies begin to realize that even in the most favourable circumstances a revival of the Russian military efficiency is bound to be remote. The Times declares that General Korniloff is not traitor and says that if his ultimatum to the Petrograd authorities on Saturday was tantamount to dictatorship it was evidently because he felt there was no alternative left. The Times adds: "Kerensky has failed to restore order and stability in the army because he long had been in a false position. His provisional government has been at the beck and call of the Soldiers' and Workmen's delegates, whose pernicious influence almost brought Russia to ruin. The committees will never save Russia, but in a short time they will wreck the revolution if they are not deprived of the power to interfere."

Welcome Falling Off In List Of Local Casualties To-day

Pte. Peter McDougal Smith of 39th Battalion is Reported Seriously Ill---Omemee Member of 93rd Battalion is Gassed---To-day's General Military News.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Pte. Peter McDougal, Smith, formerly of the 39th Battalion, Peterborough.

GASSED.

Pte. M. J. McAuliffe formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Omemee.

WOUNDED.

Gunner Harry Watson, Artillery, formerly of 39th Battalion, Havelock.

PTE. P. M. SMITH.

Word has been received from Ottawa that Pte. Peter McDougall Smith, who enlisted here in the spring of 1915 with the 39th Battalion, has been admitted to the Tooting Military Hospital, seriously ill and suffering from an abdominal tumor. Pte. Smith had been overseas for over two years. He formerly lived on Western avenue.

PTE. M. J. McAuliffe.

Pte. M. J. McAuliffe, an Omemee member of the 93rd Battalion, who has been several times on the casualty list, is officially reported gassed.

The Kingston Whig says: Major R. D. Ponton, musketry officer at Petawawa Camp, during the summer returned to Barriefield on Saturday morning. He is being granted a month's leave and will then be struck off the strength.

The Kingston Standard says: Driver Jack Evans, son of Mr. J. Evans, chief engineer of the Utilities Commission, has been wounded at the front, and was admitted to No. 14 casualty clearing station on Tuesday last, Sept. 4, suffering from a gun shot wound in the left arm. Word to this effect was received by Mr. Evans this morning in an official telegram from the records office.

It was only on April 8 last that young Evans—for he was but 20 last March, and played junior hockey all winter—enlisted, sailing for England four days later. That he lost no time in getting to the front is evidenced by the fact that his family received a letter from him from France on June 20.

Young Evans, who is one of the best all-round athletes in Kingston, as was also his brother, "Billy," who has now been in the trenches fully 20 months, and has thus far escaped with a slight wound—enlisted with the 72nd (Queen's) Battery, but was later transferred to the 1st Divisional Ammunition Column. He is a young man with all sorts of "pep" in him, and one of the most popular boys in the city.

Mrs. B. Coones, of Apsley, has received the following letter from Sergt. J. W. Jones, who is now serving with the 208th Overseas Battalion:

Apsley, Aug. 10th, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Coones,— I wrote you a letter or, rather, a message of sympathy some time ago. Although I've received no mail from you I am scribbling a few lines again. I was deeply grieved to learn of your dear and honourable son Johnny's death in action, and I know it will be so sad without him. But cheer up, Mrs. Coones, such is the fortune of war. He was a good soldier and died as my dear brother did, fearlessly and with perfect willingness in a cause that is for right in the sight of God and Christian humanity. Oh, death is but a little thing to a true and noble soldier, who is not afraid to die. They were a true type of manhood. Those that die as they did will surely be rewarded in the world to come, so cheer up and try and not feel too lonely.

I have written John and Wilbert twice lately and will likely hear from them soon, also Dr. Shepherd. How is everything in Apsley? Much the same I suppose. I wish some of the shirkers were in England or Scotland. They would surely have a grand time. Well I guess NOT. I have met many Australian soldiers, in fact troops from nearly all parts of the world, and sure find some fine chaps among them.

I had a pass to London and Scotland about a month ago. I think Scotland wonderfully beautiful and everyone seemed so kind to "Johnny Canuck." All one would hear in the parks or streets of Edinburgh was "Hello Canada" or "Look there from Canada."

We have just came into billets after a five days' bivouac, doing eighteen miles a day, in full marching order, but a person doesn't mind that when they get used to it.

I've volunteered for every draft yet, but get left behind some how. I still have my class, as they are short of instructors. This place might suit some, but I am more anxious to cross the channel, as this is no place for Mrs. Jones' boy.

Well, I must close, with kindest regards to all.

Yours truly,

WILL JONES.

Mayor Duffus has received word that Pte. C. A. Primeau, invalided soldier, left for Peterborough from Kingston at 1.40 p.m. Grand Trunk train this afternoon.

ONLY AN INVASION GETS HOLLAND IN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Nothing less than an invasion of her soil will drive Holland into the war, according to members of the Netherlands mission which arrived here to take up the matter of food exports with the American Government.

The Dutch have felt hunger in the past and suffered hardships enough to know how to bear them, the commissioners say and although ships may be sunk and supplies cut off they will not be drawn into the war on either sides unless their frontiers are crossed.

J. van Voltenhoven, one of the mission, said to-day that while the situation at present in Holland is not such as to presage starvation, the supply of breadstuffs is only sufficient for three months and unless grain is secured from some source conditions will be serious.

Without forage and grain, he said, Holland will have to kill her own cows both for food and because they cannot be fed.

OPERATING EDMONTON CARS

EDMONTON, Sept. 10.—Gradually the street railway is coming into action again with the striking carmen still out. There are five cars on the road. The service is being carried out without any hitch and without interference from the men. So far the majority of the men show no signs of accepting the council's offer and returning promptly to save their standing in the department.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL

Exhibition Promises to Surpass Its Predecessors in Point of Attendance, Number of Exhibits and in Its Amusement Features.

BIGGEST MIDWAY YET

Offering the biggest list of amusement features in its history, and with the prospects of a record showing in all lines of live stock and farm products, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, promises to outstrip all previous exhibitions. All that is needed now is three days of warm, bright weather to ensure a record attendance.

Biggest Midway Yet.

The coming of the Patrick Shows with their band animal circus, athletic show, Ferris wheel, merry-go-round and other amusements will give the Exhibition this year what has been lacking in other years a real midway. In addition to the Patrick shows other concessionaries will be found along the midway, and there will be something doing every minute in this part of the grounds. The Patrick shows are already here and their waggons and tents make the Exhibition grounds look as though a circus was located there.

Grand Stand Attractions.

The programme in front of the grand stand is an entertaining one. The famous three Kitaro Japs will introduce wire-walking, water spinning, ladder balancing contortion work and other astounding feats. The Emily sisters two youthful and graceful artistis, will offer an astonishing programme of aerial stunts on the trapeze and the La France trio, three extraordinary comedians, will be seen in a series of wonderful feats. An exceptionally good programme of horse races will be provided and the 57th Band will provide music.

AMBASSADORS IN CONFERENCE

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 11.—Council of all Ambassadors, including those representing neutral countries, was held late yesterday, at which a situation was discussed about which all information was later refused. Following the meeting the Ambassadors from the Entente nations held a separate conference.

SWEDEN TO BE DISCIPLINED FOR HELPING GERMANY

Prompt Disavowal of Acts of Swedish Minister Is Expected by Allies Who Will Demand Immediate Understanding From Offenders

WATCHING THE ENVOYS

Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner:

(By Carol D. Groat, U. P. Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The Allies intend to discipline Sweden vigorously for playing Germany's game in Argentina. The exact trend of this discipline is unknown, though the general thought here is that it will result in shortened rations and closer tabs on her use of the cables. Severance of diplomatic relations will not come from the present situation unless Sweden fails to disavow the acts of her minister at Buenos Aires in forwarding submarine messages for the German minister, Count Luxburg. Such disavowal is expected quickly and if it does not come within a reasonable time, the Allies, acting in concert, will probably demand an immediate understanding. The disclosures will doubtless serve to check any rascality contemplated by the envoys here.

Hereafter there will be vastly more vigilance exercised over communications between this country and any foreign country. Suspicion is naturally attached to the Swedish legation here as a result of the Argentine affair, and politeness and diplomatic niceties may have to give way in the future—like everything else— to the exigencies of the war. The Turkish and Bulgarian envoys here will be watched very carefully too.

THE POPE IS OPTIMISTIC

Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner:

(By John H. Hearley, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

ROME, Sept. 11.—Pope Benedict is optimistic in the hope of peace negotiations before Christmas, with an ending of the war by New Year's or early in the spring according to Vatican reports to-day. Presumably this optimism was based on the expressed hope of the Vatican authorities to-day that the Central Powers in replying to the Pope's peace note would outline their precise conditions of peace, which might honourably be acceptable to the Entente.

Rumour That Kerensky Has Been Killed

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Sept. 11. — The Swedish Aftonblaget, publishes a rumour emanating from persons who have arrived at the Swedish capital from Petrograd, that Premier Kerensky has been killed by a member of Bolshivikt. The rumour is not confirmed.

Russian Women Ready To Die

Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner:

(By Wm. G. Shephard, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 11. — Russian women soldiers will die for Premier Kerensky if need be. The Legion of Death was reforming to-day, ready to fight wherever they may be ordered. "We must show the world we are willing to die for Russia," declared Mme. Butchkoreva, commander of the Legion, as she left with a score of women recruits for Moscow, there to gather more women fighters. "We will assemble 250 more women, every one of whom will die, if need be, for Russia's freedom."

Hundreds of citizens who had fought for places in the ticket lines hastily preparing for exodus from the capital, were ashamed by the spectacle of Mme. Butchworeva, dressed in army uniform assembling a group of girls and women at the station. Two or three male officers formed the girls into something akin to military formation. "These are recruits," the woman commander declared. We are en-route to Moscow. There will be more waiting to take our oath to do or die."

BRITISH COLUMBIA "DRY."

The voting amongst Canadian soldiers abroad, in the coming election, needs to be closely watched, if it is to be free from the exercise of undue partisan influences. The "wet" interests of British Columbia were able by manipulation of the soldier vote, to convert a total majority in favour of prohibition of about 6,000, into a total adverse majority of about 800. The result was that the prohibition act, passed by the Bowser (Conservative) government, which should automatically have come into effect July 1st, was held up at the spring session of the Legislature. The Brewster (Liberal) government sent a commission overseas to investigate the voting. The report substantiates the charges made of manipulation of the vote in the liquor interests, and 4,807 votes out of 8,505 votes returned as against prohibition were rejected, leaving a net majority in favour of prohibition of 3,800.

The Legislature consequently by an unanimous vote, save one, adopted the new measure, brought in by the Brewster government. The royal assent has been given the bill, which is now the law of the province.

"It takes money to win elections," is the crisp explanatory comment of Mr. McNeely, M.P., upon the Canadian Northern Railway legislation.

CAN'T FOLLOW THE BRITISH WAY.

The food controller is annoyed at the persistent reminders that are made of the disparity of food prices between St. Paul, in the United States, and Winnipeg, in Canada. It is shown that the alleged disparity in this specific case is unjustified in fact. The St. Paul prices, a western newspaper quoted as against those of Winnipeg, are shown to be "bargain day" prices, about fifty per cent. below the regular current prices in both cities. So that, as a matter of fact, in the regular course of trade, there is no disparity in prices. Both are upon virtually the same high level.

There is a disparity in the prices of many food stuffs in Canada and Great Britain, the prices of many articles being lower in the Mother Country than in Canada, where they are produced. This is no mystery. The British government, with a faculty of doing the right thing, and the big thing, fixed the prices somewhat below the current prices, and pays the difference out of a general fund. This is an heroic measure, and at once fair to the food handlers, and an effective way of lessening the high cost of living to the people.

But there is not much hope of any such measures being adopted in this country. If the government had the will and—with the fear of the food hirons before their eyes—the courage, they wouldn't have the money. The profiteers have taken too much. Then the big interests have to be helped by the public funds; large amounts are necessary for unnecessary public works in view of an approaching election.

INGRATITUDE.

In a recent speech, Sir Robert Borden who is more addicted to saying good things than doing good things, said "Canada owes her salvation to her women." He did not evidently mean only a few women, but all women; for all the women of Canada, except the bridge whist and pink-tea triflers, have worked early and late for the past three years, and are working still.

Yet these women who have "been the salvation of Canada"—have saved her from the menace of war, are not to be allowed to have a voice in saving the country from the menace of bad government, academically involved in the issue of the pending election. If the Borden government wins we know that we shall have bad government, for the leopard won't change his spots in an election campaign. If another party wins the election the government will say that we have a bad government. Yet, in deciding this momentous question, the women of Canada, who have "been the salvation of Canada," won't have a voice—they are welcome to use their hands, however. The government practically tells them to "keep to their knitting," and not meddle with politics.

"The government's franchise bill is the very heart of partisanship."

A "TIP" TO BORDEN.

The passing of a total prohibition measure in British Columbia, adds another hint to Sir Robert Borden that public opinion is in favour of national prohibition, especially as a war measure, if not a permanency. If there ever was a time that such a measure should be adopted it is now, when every ounce of manhood's efficiency, and every ounce of food stuff, is demanded in the interests of winning the war. Yet the government persists in an attitude that has been antagonistic, not only to national moral and material interests, but hostile to the work of doing her full duty in the way of war measures.

After hesitating, Sir Robert Borden passed legislation permitting the provinces to deal with the importation of liquor into prohibition provinces in practical defeat of the measure the people through their Legislatures had adopted. The bill went to the Senate and was mutilated so as to be ineffective. Sir Borden impaired belief in his bona fides in passing the legislation, when he permitted the Senate to virtually destroy it. It may be held that he had no power over the Senate, which he now controls, in the sense of party majority. But he could have had, had he so willed and had the interests of the measure at heart. The despatches tell us that the German method of force—the closure—is to be applied to jam through the franchise bill, and that the Senate is to be compelled to rush through the bill by the closure which the government will make it employ, though as a matter of fact the Senate is not authorized to employ the closure.

If partisan interest had dictated bringing similar pressure on the Senate in the matter of the Doherty temperance legislation, the bill would not have been mutilated to uselessness and the prohibition of importing liquor into the provinces would have prevented defeat of the intention of the prohibitory act by the free importation of strong drink.

Nor has Premier Borden shown any desire to add to the food conservation campaign his government is urging on the people by meatless days and prohibition of canned food. The United States has not only enacted prohibition of the importation of whisky into "dry" states, but has adopted the general policy of preventing the use of food stuffs for making whisky. In the United States this has ceased, in orded to preserve food stuffs.

Instead of taking a bold step like this, the Borden government has made a mockery of the matter. Through its food controller, Mr. Hanna, the government has prohibited the use of wheat in the manufacture of whisky. This prohibition is nonsense, and an insult to the national interest that forbids the use of food grains for making a strength-destroying product, but it pleases the "big interests" that make money from distilling whisky. The mockery consists in the fact that of the 88 thousand pounds of food grains used per year in distilling whisky in Canada, only 27 thousand pounds consist of wheat.

A futile prohibition of this kind discredits and makes a mockery of the government's whole crusade of food conservation, by demanding of the people sacrifices and saving which the government in the interests of the support of the cherished and protected friends of the big interests concerned with whisky production are not asked nor compelled to make.

One can't politically blame the government for the employment of German methods of forcing legislation—it won't stand full discussion, for the people would not stand the legislation.

DIES AT 107.

Albert Johnston, coloured, died at Hastings County House of Refuge, Belleville, at the age of 107 years. He was born in Pennsylvania and was for many years engaged in farm work in this county. He worked for thirty years with Mr. R. Latimer of Hungerford Township. For the past seven or eight years he had been an inmate of the local refuge, where almost until his death he performed many duties. He was the most cheerful of all inmates.

Monetary Times Says Canadian Northern Deal Is "Poor Expedient"

The proposal to acquire the Canadian Northern Railway on behalf of the country does not seem to please anyone particularly. Advocates of government ownership and operation are disappointed because the government will purchase only the Canadian Northern and not the Grand Trunk system as well. Their disappointment is well founded. They are satisfied with the deal only because it is what is vaguely termed "the first step" to the nationalization of railways, the next step not being mentioned. Those who have objected to bound guarantees and other assistance to the Canadian Northern are satisfied only to the extent that such assistance has apparently ended although they are left to speculate as to what will be paid for this privilege, after the arbitration. None of the benefits of nationalization which were pictured in the Drayton-Acworth report will be achieved by the purchase by the government of the Canadian Northern Railway. The newly acquired government roads will compete with the Canadian Pacific Railway, admittedly one of the best-managed and operated railway systems on this continent. It will compete also with the Grand Trunk system whose management has just been reorganized. The economies and avoidance of duplications proposed in the Drayton-Acworth plan, will not be effected by the present Canadian Northern proposal.

Lord Shaughnessy stated this week that the Canadian Northern and the Canadian Pacific companies had discussed the acquisition of the former company by the latter. The country, we think, would be better off with the business-like management of the combined roads by the Canadian Pacific Railway than it would with the management of the Canadian Northern as a government institution. Sir Thomas White states that the negotiations for the purchase of the Canadian Northern by the Canadian Pacific were initiated by the two companies and not by the government. Lord Shaughnessy, however, did not say that these negotiations were instituted by the Government but that the discussion was at the suggestion "of members" of the Dominion Cabinet. Whoever instituted the proposal, it is unfortunate, we think, that it did not materialize. The Canadian Northern deal, in its isolation, is a poor expedient and under the circumstances will likely prove an expensive experiment in government ownership.—Monetary Times.

Death In Montana Of Mr. Frank Hughes

The Butte (Montana) Herald has the following in reference to the death of a former well-known Peterborough citizen, Mr. J. Frank Hughes, son of the late James L. Hughes, and brother of Mr. G. Bruce Hughes, 304 Park street:

J. Frank Hughes, one of Montana's best known real estate dealers, died suddenly last evening while driving his automobile, and with a dying effort locked the emergency brake, which saved his wife and M. L. Holland, passengers in the car, from possible injury. Mr. Hughes had brought his wife from the station and was just in front of his home at 123 West Galena street, when a sudden attack of heart trouble seized the veteran land dealer.

His hands dropped from the steering wheel and he stopped the car as he breathed his last.

Mr. Hughes was 51 years of age, and had been a Butte resident since 1897. He was engaged in the real estate business, his office being in the Casy block on West Granite street, which he shared with M. L. Holland.

Mr. Hughes was one of the city's most esteemed business men, and many friends mourn the loss of so valuable a citizen and friend. He had scores of acquaintances throughout the state and all will be shocked to hear of his tragic death.

His wife, Mrs. Hughes, had been staying at Chico Springs, hoping to obtain from relief from rheumatism, and Mr. Hughes motored over four weeks ago to visit her there. He left Tuesday to return to Butte by automobile, but his wife insisted on a Mr. Wilson driving the car, for she had noted alarming symptoms in her husband's condition. He had spells of trembling and complained of pains in the region of his heart.

After her husband had left the springs, Mrs. Hughes had forebodings of her husband's illness resulting fatally and she wired Mr. Holland to tell her husband that she would be in Butte on the North Coast Limited last night. The motor party journeyed leisurely, stopping at Livingston and Pipestone, and arrived in the city last night.

Upon receiving the telegram, Mr. Holland went to the Hughes' home to deliver to Mr. Hughes his wife's message, and he reached the house just as Mr. Hughs arrived on the return trip.

The two then proceeded in the Hughes' car to the station, where Mrs. Hughes was met. Mr. Hughes drove to the depot, but on the return his arms trembled and he gasped for breath. Just as the automobile arrived at his home he died.

Surviving are his wife of Butte, two sisters and a half brother of Vancouver. Funeral arrangements will be made when advices are received from them. It is probable that he will be buried at his old home.

Draft Effective Probably This Month?

Tenders Are Invited For Supplies For Troops, First Not Past Oct. 1

WINDSOR, Sept. 10.—That the new draft law will become effective probably this month is indicated by the fact that tenders are being invited here by the Militia Department for "military forces at Windsor." Posters, signed by Dr. Fiset, Deputy Minister of Militia, were displayed in Windsor to-day, calling for bids on live cattle, sheep, meat, bread, flour, groceries and other supplies needed for troops. Supplies for four months are required the first delivery to be made not later than October 1st.

A squad of engineers from London arrived this morning to assist in remodelling the buildings at Camp McGregor, which are now being used by a detail of the 21st Regiment.

ENEMIES TO SUCCESS.

Learn to Avoid Timidity, Shyness or Self Consciousness.

Timidity, shyness and self consciousness belong to the same family. We usually find all where we find any one, and they are all enemies of peace of mind, happiness and achievement. No one has ever done a great thing while his mind was centered upon himself. We must lose ourselves before we can find ourselves. Self analysis is valuable only to learn our strength; it is fatal if it makes us dwell upon our weaknesses.

Timid, shy people are morbidly self conscious. They think too much about themselves. Their thoughts are turned inward; they are always analyzing, dissecting themselves, wondering how they appear and what people think of them. If these people could only forget themselves and think of others they would be surprised to see what freedom, ease and grace they would gain, what success in life they would achieve.

Thousands of young people are held back from undertaking what they long to do and are kept from trying to make real their great life dreams because they are afraid to jostle with the world. They shrink from exposing their sore spots and sensitive points, which smart from the lightest touch. Their supersensitiveness makes cowards of them. —O. S. Marden.

Pineapple Juice.

As an aid to digestion, a really material aid, the pineapple stands alone among the fruit. Its vegetable pepsin neutralizes or perhaps rather digests albuminous substances in the stomach. Fresh pineapple or, better still, the fresh juice of one placed in direct contact with eggs or gelatin or milk will prove this fact conclusively by producing a bitter tasting dish. In cases of catarrhal ailments of the throat and, in its downward connection, the alimentary canal or tract pineapple cannot be overestimated, and it acts with equal force in malarial affections —New York World.

Poisoned Arrows.

The savages of interior Africa have attained an extraordinary degree of skill in preparing poisons with which to make their arrow heads the dread of their enemies. Although they use a variety of substances in making the poisonous fluids, such an animal extracts, and products of decay, the most common source of the most violent poisons is found in several species of tropical plants, says Popular Science. One of these, the strophantus, is extensively employed by the tribes of West Africa. They boil the fruits of this plant in water for about twenty-four hours, frequently adding to the liquid heads of serpents, tainted blood and a mixture of dead frogs. When this mixture has cooled to a thick mass they dip the heads of their arrows into the poison, and then allow them to dry in the sun. They repeat this process every few months so as to retain as much of the deadly effect as possible. The action of these poisons is very violent, death resulting, with intense agony, in five or ten minutes.

French Railways.

The railways of France in 1916 had an increase in receipts of 17.1 per cent. over those of 1915, whilst, when compared with the pre-war year 1913, the decrease was only 1.4 per cent. The net receipts were, however, very much less in 1916 and in 1913, owing principally to the greater cost of material.

JOAN BREAKS THE GOVERNOR'S SWORD WITH A DAGGER.

The story of Joan of Arc has for ever been a favourite phase of history with old and young, and the modern version which has been picturized, and which is being shown at His Majesty's Theatre this week under the title of "Joan the Woman," will make a great appeal to all classes of people, especially in its war scenes which depict the trenches in Flanders to-day. The story is a clever one and keeps the interest all the way through, revealing picturesque phases of Joan's life as a peasant girl and through her adventurous career until the time when she becomes a nation's hero. The part of Joan is taken by Geraldine Farrar, who is a screen favourite and who invests her characterization of Joan with an appealing and winning personality. She is supported by a strong cast, and the crowd scenes are well handled and show careful preparation and organization. The photography is decidedly artistic and the whole make up of the picture is one that will make a great appeal to Montrealers, who are fond of historic pictures, and who can appreciate good screen work.— From The Montreal Herald.

Warned This Captain That the Kidneys Were Responsible for His Pains and Aches — Freed of Pain and Suffering by a Well-known Medicine.

Hereford, Que., Sept. 11.— Captain Peabody is well known all through this section, and his cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has aroused great interest in this great medicine.

The Captain had been suffering for a long time, and could never get any treatment to afford lasting relief until he began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Captain A. Peabody, Hereford, Que., writes: "For years I suffered from indigestion, rheumatism and neuralgia. Lightning-like pains would shoot all through my body, and I also had severe pains over my left kidney and through the hips. I doctored for years and tried all kinds of remedies, but the only result was money spent without relief. At last I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of his Kidney-Liver Pills and decided to try them. One box made such a change that I sent for five more. Before I had finished them the pains in my kidneys and hips had disappeared, and I was clear of those sharp, shooting pains through the body. I still take these Pills occasionally to keep my bowels regular, and would not be without them, as I have them to thank for my cure.

"I can also speak highly of Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder and Linseed and Turpentine. The former cured me of catarrh in the head, which caused frequent headaches. I am completely cured of this now, and breathe freely as when a boy. The Linseed and Turpentine proved of great benefit for a bad cough which bothered me continually for three winters. Last winter I took one bottle of the Linseed and Turpentine, and have not been bothered with a cough since."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Don't be talked into accepting anything said to be just as good. Imitations and substitutes only disappoint.

CHINESE FARMS SMALL.

Hardly More Than Gardens, and the Cultivation Is Intensive.

It is incorrect to speak of the Chinese as farmers in the strict sense of the word, for they are gardeners rather than farmers. A so called Chinese farm is no larger than what in America would be called a good sized garden, and the methods of cultivation are of the most intensive sort.

Generally speaking, it seems that the greater the prosperity of the agricultural family the larger the number of children; these in turn the greater the number of mouths to feed. In addition prosperous conditions always bring with them greater expenses incident to family festivities, such as weddings, which stand out as all important considerations in the lives of the Chinese.

In Manchuria the conditions are somewhat different, for there are vast stretches of land open to cultivation on a much larger scale than in China proper. These tracts are generally worked by hired farmers, who come in hundreds of thousands from the more densely populated sections of China to spend the short farming season in northern portions, returning again when the cold weather makes further labor in the fields impossible.—United States Consular Report.

A Turkish Love Story.

A Turk knocked at his beloved's door, and a voice answered from within, "Who is there?"

Then he answered, "It is I."

Then the voice said, "This house will not hold thee and me."

And the door was not opened.

Then went the lover into the desert, where there is nothing but Allah, and fasted and prayed in solitude.

And again the voice asked, "Who is there?"

And he said, "It is thyself."

And the door was opened to him.

Dickens and a Face Ache.

Dickens wanted to be an actor before he was an author. He would have been but for a face ache. When he was a lad and a lawyer's clerk he had attained a trial of his power of reproducing "character and oddity" before Mathews and Charles Kemble. But a face ache kept him at home, and soon after he "made a great splash" as a newspaper reporter. Thereafter he reproduced "character and oddity" on paper instead of the stage.

The Optimist.

"You're looking blue, doc. What's the matter?"

"Well, I'll tell you. A patient I began to treat died this morning."

"Ah, cheer up. He might have died even if you hadn't been called."—Toledo Blade.

The Wagon Wheel Paradox.

A very interesting paradox is the one concerning an ordinary wagon wheel, which is solid and rigid, yet, when fastened on its axle on a wagon, when the wagon moves part of the circumference of the wheel which is in contact with the ground is for an instant at absolute rest, while the point directly perpendicular to it is flying along at a high rate of speed. The two points horizontal with the center of the wheel are traveling pretty fast, but only half as fast as the topmost point, and as the upgoing horizontal point increases in speed the downgoing one slows up until it is at rest for a moment when in contact with the ground. Yet the wheel is one solid piece and there are only two points going at the same rate of speed at the same time. Yet if the wheel is taken off the axle and rolled down an incline every point of the circumference moves at the same rate of speed.

CANADA

Military Service Act, 1917

Explanatory Announcement by the Minister of Justice

THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT has received the assent of the Governor-General and is now part of the law of the land. It will be enforced accordingly, and the patriotism and good sense of the people can be relied upon to support it. Resistance to its enforcement, however, by word or act must and will be repressed as resistance to any other law in force must be.

Reinforcements under the Military Service Act immediately required

It is the intention of the Government immediately to exercise the power which the Act confers and to call out men for military service in order to provide reinforcements for the Canadian Forces. This is necessary since the military authorities report that the reserves available or in sight for reinforcement will shortly be exhausted unless this step be taken.

First call limited to men between 20 and 34 who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6, 1917

The present call will be limited to men not in the schedule of exemptions who were unmarried or widowers without children on 6th July, 1917, are at least twenty years of age, and were born on or since 1st January, 1883. Of this Class all those will be entitled to conditional exemption whose services in their present occupations, agricultural, industrial or other, are essential in the national interest, and whose business or domestic responsibilities are such that serious hardship would ensue if their services be required. Conscientious scruples based upon a prohibition of combatant service by the articles of faith of the religious denomination to which men belong will also be respected. The men first required to serve will consequently be those who can be called upon with the least disturbance of the economic and social life of the country.

Civil Tribunals to deal with exemptions

Questions of exemption will be determined, not by the military authorities or by the Government, but by civil tribunals composed of representative men who are familiar with local conditions in the communities in which they serve, who will generally have personal knowledge of the economic and family reasons which those whose cases come before them have had for not volunteering their services and who will be able sympathetically to estimate the weight and importance of such reasons. Provincial Appellate Tribunals constituted from the existing judiciary of the respective provinces will be provided to correct mistakes made by Local Tribunals, and a Central Appeal Tribunal for the whole of Canada, selected from among the present Judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, will be constituted in order that identical principles may be applied throughout the country. In this way every man may rest assured of the fair and full consideration of his circumstances and the national requirements both civil and military.

Proclamation will announce the day

A proclamation will issue calling out the bachelors and widowers referred to and fixing a day on or before which every man must report for service to the military authorities unless he has before that day made an application for exemption.

How to apply for exemption

Applications for exemption may be made by written notice on forms which will be available at every post office, and will be transmitted free of postage. They will not, however, be required to be made in this way, but may be presented by the applicants in person to the exemption tribunals. The cases of those who have given written notice in advance will take precedence, and appearance in person will therefore be likely to involve considerable more inconvenience and delay to the men concerned, so that it is recommended that advantage be generally taken of the facilities for written application.

The local exemption tribunals will be constituted with the least delay possible, consistent with the selection of representative individuals to compose them, and the instruction of the members in their duties. There will be more than one thousand of such tribunals throughout Canada, each consisting of two members, one of whom will be nominated by a Joint Committee of Parliament, and the other by one of the Judges of the existing Courts. Every effort will be made by the wide distribution of tribunals, and by provision where necessary for their sitting in more than one place, to minimise the inconvenience to which men will be put in obtaining the disposition of their cases.

A Registrar will be appointed in each Province, who will be named in the proclamation and to whom enquiries may be addressed. Each Provincial Registrar will transmit to the appropriate tribunal the applications for exemption which have been submitted in advance of the sittings, and men who have sent these in will not be required to attend the tribunals until notified to do so. Other applicants should attend personally on the tribunal without notice.

How to report for service

Men who do not desire to claim exemption will report to the military authorities for service either by mail or in person at any time after the issue of the proclamation. Forms of report by mail will be found in all post offices, and, like applications for exemption, will be transmitted free of postage.

Early report advantageous

No man who reports for service will, although he may be medically examined and passed as fit, be required to go into camp or join a battalion until after a day fixed by the proclamation sufficiently late to permit of the disposition by the local tribunals of most, if not all, of the applications for exemption which may come before them. Thus no advantage will be gained by delaying or disadvantage incurred by prompt report for service on the part of those who do not intend to apply for exemption.

Facilities for immediate medical examination

Immediately upon the issue of the proclamation, medical boards will sit at every mobilization centre for the examination of men who report for service or who, subject to their right within the time limited to apply for exemption, desire to have their physical fitness determined in order to allay any doubt as to their physical condition, or to know definitely and in advance whether there is a possibility of their services being required. Certificates of physical unfitness issued by these Medical Boards will be accepted without any further investigation by exemption tribunals when they sit. Men found physically fit who have not reported for service may nevertheless apply for exemption on any of the prescribed grounds, including even their physical condition if dissatisfied with the Medical Board's conclusion.

Notice to join the colors

As reinforcements are required, notice to report at the nearest mobilization centre will be given from time to time to the men found liable and passed as fit for service. Disobedience of such notice will render the offender liable to punishment, but punishment for failure to report for military service, or to report subsequently for duty when called upon, will be imposed ordinarily by the civil magistrates; offenders, however, will remain liable for the performance of their military duties notwithstanding any civil punishment which may be imposed and will be liable to military punishment in cases in which civil proceedings are not taken.

Watch for the Proclamation

Notice of the day appointed for the making of a claim for exemption or for report for military service will be published as widely as possible, but, as no personal notice can be given until the individuals called out have so reported themselves or claimed exemption, men possibly concerned are warned to inform themselves with regard to the day fixed, since neglect may involve the loss by them of important privileges and rights.

SERIOUSLY HURT BY TANK EXPLOSION

ESSEX, Sept. 10.—William Trimble, 23 years of age, a very popular young farmer on the Malden Road, near Essex, met with a very serious accident this morning. While refilling a gasoline tank, the plug blew out of his charging outfit and buried itself in the young man's head just above the left eye, making a hole in his skull the size of a walnut. The force of the gas also struck Mr. Trimble's right hand with such force that it shattered the bones of the hand and laid the palm of his hand bare to the bone. His flesh was blackened with the acid. Medical attendance was rushed to the scene of the accident and all possible done, but little hope is held out for his recovery.

Mr. Trimble's father, also No. man Wright and his son were present at the time of the accident and those nearby were so blackened with the acid that they were almost beyond recognition, although not seriously injured.

Afternoon and evening gowns will be trimmed with lace.

Special Gospel Meetings

The Evangelistic meetings being held in Gospel Hall are continuing in interest and attendance. Last evening Mr. Harper took for his subject "What Isaiah Saw" and for his text Isa Chapter 6. He vividly described in detail the vision that changed the life story of the great prophet and which in essence is a pattern of Christian experience "What we need most these days," he said, "is a vision of the holiness of God in order that men may take their proper place in His presence." Continuing he showed the last condition of the race and their inability to remedy that condition. But what man was unable to do God has done; and through Jesus Christ the Lord. The prophet's sin was purged and his iniquity was removed by the application of a live coal from off the altar. This, said the speaker, was a figure of the work of the Lord Jesus Christ who came and died that man kind might be saved.

He then spoke of the prophet's consecration. When God wanted a worker He took one who was ready and willing to be sent.

Mr. Harper will speak to-night at 8 o'clock on "A Foreign General's Mistake." The public are cordially invited to bear this young Evangelist. Meetings last for one hour.

Among those who heard their country's call to "do their bit" at farming, was a retired brakeman, says the Boston Transcript. He was ploughing up a piece of new land with a team of mules and had the reins fastened around his waist. Presently he saw a stump ahead and instinctively he began giving the railroad "stop" signal with both hands. The plough struck the stump and the brakeman went head over heels. Picking himself up he shook his fist at the mules and roared: "You flop-eared fools, don't you ever look back for a signal?"

German Papers Condemn Luxburg

New York German Papers Says Minister has Shown Lack of Intelligence.

Under the heading "notorious ass" the German Herald says: "The only advantage Germany has in having men like Luxburg in the diplomatic service is that they cannot be in the army. If the German army leaders had displayed such lack of intelligence as the diplomats have done, America need not have entered the war, because it would have been over long ago. As far as Germany is concerned, we fancy she will disavow Luxburg."

"This man is seemingly out of his wits," declared the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung. "He does not even seem to comprehend his responsibility toward his own country and he is lacking as well in the moral sense as in the ordinary judgment of the average human being endowed with intelligence.

Tassels have lost much of their rank in fashion, almost all belts and girdles end frankly without trimming

DOROTHY ALLAN'S FAREWELL RECITAL

The Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, was last night filled to the full capacity of seating, by an audience assembled to listen to a vocal recital by Miss Dorothy Allan. It is understood that this was a farewell recital. If that is so, it is unfortunate; for if after the past, and after the splendid enjoyment of last night, Miss Allan is to be heard no more in public, the loss of the music-loving public is difficult of estimation.

Perhaps Miss Allan was never before heard to such fine advantage; was never, perhaps, more herself as an artistic vocalist and never, perhaps, presented a programme of so much musical merit and high standard, nor one better adapted to display the fullest, the wide range of capability of her splendid voice.

The programme as sung by Miss Allan consisted of four groups, including twelve separate compositions, ranging in character and difficulty of execution from Meyerbeer's robust, aria, "Robert, toi qui j'aime" in Robert le Diable, and "O mio Fernando" from the grand opera, of Donisetti, La Favorita, to the tenderly dainty "O Virgin Rose" of Marshall and all were treated with full justice to artistic detail of execution and fidelity of interpretation. In the two operatic arie to the fine exhibition of voice control and employment, was added a dramatic force of prima donna quality. In the more delicate compositions the pianissimo effects were of an appealing daintiness, her whole work showing a musical method and plexibility of voice, robust tours deforce, interpretative appreciation and delicacy of nuance, that speak the true artist. Her singing of Bishop's great song, "Bid me Discourse" was a genuine delight; the lilting cadenes and restrained rollicksomeness, characteristic of Bishop's work were heightened by the singer's intelligent valuation of the spirit and sentiment of the song, "My Dear Soul" in the Dorsetshire dialect, was beautifully sung. But, perhaps, the most popular and appealing of all her song groups was the last, including, "My Dear Soul," "The Last Rose of Summer," and the "March of the Cameron Men." Miss Allan's singing of the "Last Rose of Summer" was as dainty and beautiful as the rose itself. "The March of the Cameron Men," was sung with grand voice and spirit; but she was at her best in heroic vocalism in her splendid singing of "Rule Britannia," as an encore number. This was her only re-appearance, the exhaustive demands of her principal numbers forbidding the added exertion of a repeat.

Miss Allen was very warmly applauded and literally showered with bouquets; and she would be greatly exacting and difficult to please, if she were not as gratefully delighted with the cordiality of her reception, as her auditors were with the exquisite vocal treat she presented.

The assisting artists were Mr. Arthur Milton and Mr. John Allan. Mr. Milton was assigned three solos—of a character to suit his robust bass voice—"Blow, Blow Thou Winter Wind," "Mountain Lovers," and Sullivan's "The Sailor's Grave." Mr. Milton treated his selections in a very capable manner, and so pleased the audience that he was compelled to respond to a recall. Mr. Milton is a new comer to Peterborough, and is welcomed as a valuable addition to the musical talent of the city.

Mr. John Allen furnished the accompaniments with splendid effect and his fine work was helped by the use of a Heintzman piano, kindly provided by Mr. B. H. Britton.

Miss Allan's recital last night, was one of the most conspicuously artistic and successful in the musical history of the city.

READ WHAT HE SAYS OF THIS FAMOUS "TRULY CANADIAN PIANO.

It affords me great pleasure to express my encomium of praise for the splendid qualities of the New Scale Williams Piano we are using on our Western Tour.

Possessed of brilliancy of tone ideal for the needs of a pianist, your instrument also embodies a lovely singing tone of velvety softness when needed, affording ideal support to my voice in both fortissimo and pianissimo passages.

I am observing its magnificent durability in the midst of constant moving in bitter cold weather, which it sustains constantly by keeping in perfect tune.

PTE. JAS. WILLSHAW DESCRIBES SOME OF THE LENS FIGHTING

Peterboro' Boy is Badly Wounded in the Thigh, by Shrapnel When Going Up to Carry Out Wounded Comrades.

SOME HEAVY SHELLING

An interesting description of the fighting at Lens is contained in a letter received by Mrs. Willshaw, 635 Union street, from her husband, Pte. James Willshaw, who went overseas with the 58th Battalion. Pte. Willshaw writes from Devonport, Eng., as follows:

My Dear Wife and Children—Just a few lines to you, hoping to find you in the best of health, as it leaves me going on fairly good at present. Well, dear, I suppose you were quite surprised to hear of me getting wounded. Well, to tell you the truth I have to think myself very lucky I am here to-day writing these few lines to you. I think I have got between 14 to 18 shrapnel wounds in my thigh.

Well this is how I come to get it. I was at the battle of Lens as you can see for yourself by reading the papers, and we had some very hard fighting. Well some of my chums had got wounded and I was told off with some more men to go up to the front line of trenches to carry them out to the dressing station. Well, I had just got there when all of a sudden the German gunners opened up all of their guns and put up an awful counter attack. Well some of the fellows said: "Come on boys, they are coming over on us; let's get over and help our chums in the line." We all started. I was just fixing my bayonet when a shell dropped square between my legs at the back. Down I went on the ground, shells bursting all around. I did not take twice to think about what I should do, as there was no one around.

Seeing a little light a little way off I crawled the best way I could on my hands and knees. When I got there I found it to be a cellar of a house with a guard in it. I told them I was wounded. They started to dress my wounds and a fellow said to me, what is your name, chummy. I told him. He turned me over and it was my old chum I had not seen for a year. He was in my old battalion the 50th, and after he had dressed me up, we sat there and had a little chat until I had to go. We had a nice little talk for an hour while I was waiting for a stretcher party to carry me out.

Well, our guns were certainly giving the enemy hell at this time. I think our artillery was putting over about seven shots to his one if not more. Our boys do give it to him when he upsets them. Talk about dead Germans, there's thousands of them. Well, that's the best place for them. Nothing is too bad for those guys.

Well, dear the stretcher party had arrived to take me out. I had about six hundred yards to go to the first dressing station. We had got about half way when he put up another counter attack. We had to take cover the best way we could, nothing but open trenches. Well, he certainly did put them near us. I thought every minute he was going to get one of us, but thank God we got out safe after our guns silenced the Boche's.

Well dear, then my next place was to get to a place called Cologne clearing station. Well we got there after a little trouble, because he started the same old thing again. Well, we arrived there alright. Then we knew we were pretty well out of danger. In another hour I was away down at another dressing station called Herson. From there I was sent to the C.C.S., that is the clearing station for wounded. After being there for a couple of hours we were sent to another place called Barlin. From there we were sent in a Red Cross train for Etaples. They took us to the 22nd General Hospital. I did not go under any operation there. I was there for four days and then had orders that I was going over to England. Well, we boarded a train for Calais. We left Etables at 4 o'clock in the morning and arrived at Calais about 11 o'clock. Then we were put on a hospital ship called Princess Elizabeth some fine boat. We got out at 1.30 o'clock and landed in Dover at 2.45; talk about travel.

Just before we landed our square-headed friends had paid Dover another visit, killing 11 people and wounding about 37. Well, he will get all that's coming to him later on. Well, to tell you the truth, our boys are giving him some snuff now. Well, I am getting along as good as can be expected. I had a couple of pieces of shrapnel taken out again this morning, they keep on taking pieces out. I think I have got an iron foundry in me somewhere. Well, dear, I am out of danger now. You want to cheer up and make the best of it as I am not worrying myself now but I have got a pretty bad thigh, so the nurse said. I got out of bed this morning, but could not stand on it so I had to get back again. I have no use of my leg yet. You can bet I am getting bed-sore.

I think this is all this time, so I must close. Love from— JIM.

Behind The Hun Lines For Six Days And Nights

Pte. Wm. Ebbs, Formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Has Returned Safely After a Week in Enemy Territory

AN EXCITING ADVENTURE

Mrs. Wm. Ebbs, of Peterborough, has received the following letter from her husband, Pte. Wm. Ebbs, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is at the front with the 81st:

France, Aug. 22.

I must write you a few lines to let you know I am safe again and I thank God for it. I have no doubt they have reported me as missing. I was behind the German lines for six days and nights, my officer and myself and they never saw us. He was wounded. He is a very nice young fellow. I think he has gone to England and you may have a letter from him. I hope it has not made you too bad. I know it would seem very hard for you, but try and cheer up and make the best of it. I was lucky to come back alive. I shall always lead a good life and trust in God. I am at a rest camp just now and don't feel too bad to-day, only pretty weak. They all seem very nice here and feed us good so don't you trouble now you know I am all right. I do hope they have cabled you to say I am safe. I will write to you again in a few days and tell you a little more

Got Drunk On Invalid Wine

Kingston Magistrate Fines Man $200 For the Offence

KINGSTON, Sept. 10.— Magistrate Farrell announced in the police court on Saturday morning that he intended to treat the cases of intoxication from invalid wine quite differently than in the past, in that a heavier penalty will be imposed. William Grey, who was before him on Friday for being drunk, and fined $10 and costs again graced the prisoner's dock. Grey is an elderly man, and his eyes filled with tears as he pleaded guilty to the charge lodged against him. Shortly before 1 o'clock on Saturday morning he was gathered in on Princess street by Constable Leslie Armstrong.

Questioned by the Magistrate as to where he secured his refreshments the accused stated that he had been served by a man in rear of the Randolph hotel. He gave the name of the man to the Magistrate.

The court gave Grey quite a jolt when he imposed a fine of $200 and costs, with the option of one month Grey will likely pay the fine.

WRECKED AIRPLANES BEING RETURNED TO BORDEN AIRDROMES

WINGHAM, Sept. 11.—Mechanics from the Royal Flying Corps at Camp Borden have practically completed the loading of two airplanes which were wrecked fourteen miles north of Wingham. They are expected to return to the camp to-day by motor trucks.

In a mist on Friday morning six 'planes, piloted by American aviators from the aviation branch, American Signal corps, who are training with the Royal Flying Corps, landed behind the barn on the farm of George Caldwell, fourteen miles north of this place. The aviators lost their way, and believed they were near the Georgian Bay when they landed.

Four of the six machines effected successful flights after their landing, but two were damaged. One was rising when the engine went dead, and the machine landed in an apple tree. The second machine got up all right, but "crashed" in a field beside the road. Both 'planes were badly damaged, but the aviators escaped unhurt.

Long-distance communication with Camp Borden was established, and mechanics with motor trucks were sent out to bring in the machines. The airplanes were taken down and packed.

The British Casualties For The Week

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The casualties in the British ranks reported during the week ending to-day show a total of 25,828 men and officers as follows: Officers killed and died of wounds, 184, men 4,182. Officers wounded or missing, 881, men 21,678.

LINDSAY MAN INDULGES IN FLY POISON BEVERAGE

The Lindsay Post says: Great excitement prevailed on Water street, on Sunday, when the startling news gained currency that a resident of that thoroughfare had drunk a quantity of fly poison and was in a serious condition.

It appears that the man has been drinking heavily of late and being remonstrated for his conduct deliberately drank the liquid in which a Wilson fly pad had been soaking. The serious effects of such a dose became apparent and salt and water, mustard and water and olive oil was administered in order to give relief. The man, it is stated, suffered from convulsions for a time but recovered sufficiently towards evening as to be able to visit the police office, where he told his story to Chief Short. He claimed he did not know what he was doing when he took the poison.

This morning he was fined $14.95 for being drunk in a public place.

Arranging To Store The Coal

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee called last night to confer on the scale of municipal coal, it was decided to rent the T. A. Rehill Shed to store the coal, should the situation be such the local dealers are unable to handle the orders for a reasonable supply of coal for the consumers of the city. The Council which does not intend to tilt with the coal dealers in selling against them, but for the interest of the public keep a supply against want, will meet the dealers of the city this evening, that they may make up their minds if they are able to supply the public with coal, or if a supply will be kept on hand by the city in storage until January.

LIGHTS ASKED FOR.

A number of requests were read for incandescent lights in the city. The Utilities Commission will be asked to place lights on Dufferin street, west of Concession, two on Romaine street between George and Aylmer streets, at the corner of Bolivar and John streets, on intersection of Lock and Perry, three on Aberdeen avenue, one at the north side of Gladstone avenue at the east end.

FURTHER DAMAGE FOR SWARTZ

A request for further damage of $220 done to goods stored in the cellar of Swartz's store by the fire hose, was referred to the City Solicitor.

Applying This Paste Actually Removes Hairs

(Beauty Notes.)

Merely applying an inexpensive paste to a hairy surface, say beauty spealists, will dissolve the hairs. This paste is made by mixing a little water with some powdered delatone; after about 2 minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple method not only removes every trace of hair, but leaves the skin free from blemish. To insure success with this treatment, be careful to get real delatone.

District Meeting Will Be Held

The district meeting and missionary convention of the Methodist church, Peterborough district will be held in Trinity Sunday School Hall, Reid street to-morrow (Wednesday.) Missionary convention will open at 2 p.m. and will be addressed by Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., Missionary Secretary and also by Rev. J. W. Sanndy, B.A., Missionary to Japan, just returned. The Public is cordially invited.

How To Banish Wrinkles Quickly

If your face is disfigured with wrinkles, no matter what the cause, you can quickly dispel every line, even the most obstinate, by using a simple, home-made wash lotion. Merely dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel—inexpensive ingredients found in any druggists. Bathe the face in this, and—presto!—you scarcely believe your own eyes when you look into your mirror and behold the marvelous transformation.

The remarkable astringent action of the saxolite so tightens the skin, wrinkles are literally pressed out. Best of all, this result is not purely temporary, for the lotion also has a healthful tonic action, which tends to strengthen and tone up the weakened tissue, and added benefit may be expected with continued use. Use this once a day for awhile; it cannot injure the most delicate skin. The treatment itself leaves no trace—so one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance.

"WEAR-EVER" ALUMINUM SALE AT CAMPBELL & BEST'S

A busy throng of shoppers was the feature of the opening date of "Demonstration Week" in connection with the special sale of "Wear-Ever" Aluminum Ware, at the hardware store of Messrs. Campbell & Best. Mrs. Chapin, an expert demonstrator, was in attendance, and waited upon crowds of lady visitors, to whom she expounded the merits of this new ware. The record taken of sales went above the sanguine expectations of the firm, and gave an encouraging prospect for the week's results. Ladies appeared delighted with this "Every-Ready" brand of kettles and other cooking utensils, and the special prices offered all this week will most likely create a successful send-off to the introduction of "Wear-Ever" in Peterborough.

A coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide," after hearing Lieutenant Malcolm's plea that he had killed Baumberg "in defence of his wife's honour." The case was one of the most sensational in many years.

The dispute between the Great North-Western Telegraph Company and their employees is not yet settled, but there are high hopes that to-day will see the end of the matter. The only question now in dispute between the company and representatives of the men is the grading of the officials of the company. The three arbitrators met yesterday to deliberate on this point, having concluded the hearing of the evidence and heard the arguments of the men's representatives during the past week.

THE FRENCH SOLDIER.

(Christian Science Monitor)

One of the most striking characteristics of the French soldier, remarks a recent writer, is the way he has of getting to work again at his trade as soon as he gets home, even if it is only for a few days' leave. Thus, the farmer will pick up his daily work at his little farm almost at the hour he arrives, and the cobbler will get him to his last, eager to see how many of his old customers he may serve during his stay at home. A famous aviator, on four days' leave, donned his white apron, just as soon as ever he could—he was a restaurant keeper—and was glad to spend his short holiday serving the little coterie of guests whom his wife had kept together.

Woman's Hand Threatens To Remove Crown From Another Royal Husband

Sweden's Duplicity in Acting as a Messenger For Germany May Result in the Elimination of Sweden's German Born Queen and Her Royal Husband—Queen Victoria is a Princess of Baden—The Crown Prince is Highly Regarded.

AMBITIOUS INTRIGUING WOMAN

(By Lowell Hollett, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, September 12.—A woman's hand to-day threatened to push the crown from another royal husband's seat. Far-reaching interchanges in Sweden, which might mean the retirement of the present rulers—King Oscar and Queen Victoria—are extremely probable as a result of the exposure of Sweden's duplicity in acting as messenger for Germany, according to Swedish authorities here. The changes that may come will be such that it will be possible no longer to doubt that Sweden is purely pro-Swedish. This might mean the elimination of Sweden's German-born queen and her royal husband.

"Another Sophie" was the way prominent Swedes in London referred to Queen Victoria to-day. She is a clever, ambitious intriguing woman, wielding great influence over the King. Queen Sophie, of Greece, the Kaiser's sister, cost Constantine his throne, and while the Swedish Government is normally controlled by the throne, Queen Victoria is credited with having exercised great power both socially and politically over powerful "inner circles." Queen Victoria is a princess of Baden. Within the realm of her influence have been members of the nobility and wealthy senators. From among such men most of Sweden's diplomats have been chosen. It is the diplomatic service which now stands accused in the revelation from Washington. "The Queen has been less active lately than usual," one financier remarked here. "She has been busy saving her throne." Asked whether a republic in Sweden was within the range of possibilities, he replies in the negative. "The Crown Prince is highly regarded," the United Press informant said. "And besides his wife is English."

DIVIDE ON FRANCHISE BILL.

Viewpoint of Western Papers Varies —Several are Bitter.

Calgary Herald.—"The Solicitor-General does well when he affirms that the first consideration of the government in framing a war time election franchise bill is to provide as nearly as may be possible for the overseas soldiers."

Edmonton Bulletin.—"The Act appears to be a statutory declaration on behalf of the Ministers that they have lost the confidence of the existing electorate, and also of the women."

Regina Morning Leader.—"British subjects in Canada have cause to-day to hang their heads in shame because of the utterly un-British action of the Borden government."

300,000 Men Will Be Affected By First Call To Arms

Next Step Under Military Service Act is the Proclamation Calling Men to the Colours—October 1st is Date Mentioned For This Although There is Nothing Official Yet

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—The next step in the administration of the Military Service Act will be the proclamation of the Governor-General-in-Council, addressed to the men affected, ordering them to present themselves immediately either in person, or by mail on printer forms which may be sent to the proper tribunals without postage. The date of the proclamation has not yet been announced. One of the local tribunals, however, states that it will be published probably before October 1st, as it is the intention of the Government to administer the Act as speedily as possible.

It is now reported from Ottawa that Mr. Glyn Osler, of the law firm of Blake, Lash, Anglin and Cassels, Bank of Commerce Building, will be the Ontario Registrar under the Act. It is explained that the Government's policy of excluding military men from its administration bars out the Mewburn appointment previously talked of at the capital.

How Mr. Osler Will Act.

In an interview, Mr. Osler outlined the general duties of a Provincial Registrar. He would be required to complete a list of the men of the first-class who report for military service or claim exemption and classify them according to age. He would also deal with claims for exemption and see that they were sent before the proper tribunals. The decisions on all cases would then be classified, and the names of those men who are denied exemption added to the list of men liable for service. These lists will then be sent to the military authorities by each of the Provincial Registrars. Those who are passed for military service will then be notified to go to the mobilization centre nearest their homes for enrolment.

The date of the proclamation, Mr. Osler stated, would depend upon the time it takes the authorities to write and have printed and distributed the various forms of application oaths, claims for exemption and so on. So far the actual number of men who will be taken has not been announced by the Government.

Can 100,000 Come From 300,000.

By the first class about 300,000 men in Canada will be affected. The Military Service Act authorizes the raising of only 100,000 men for service. How many men will become available under the first call after exemptions have been dealt with is a matter of doubt and it is possible that the number of men reported available by the Provincial registrars will serve as a guide to the administrators of the Act in naming the number of men wanted. They may say 300,000 or 50,000 and if 100,000 men are available they may take them all and thus enforce the Act to the limit.

Such procedure is neither anticipated nor likely, but it is possible It is more likely, however, that the number of men wanted, no matter how many become available out of the first class, has already been fixed by the Government, but this number has yet to be made public.

Bringing Slackers to Book.

The question naturally arises how will the so-called slackers be brought to book in enforcing the Act? When this phase of the bill was being discussed in the House, the Solicitor-General, Hon. Arthur Meighen, stated that it was expected that neighbours, through a sense of patriotic duty, would tell on each other. Thus, practically all those who fail to report for service or apply for exemption would finally be dealt with by both the military and civil authorities. It is understood that this is a matter which is at present engaging the attention of the council assisting Deputy Minister of Justice Newcombe.

READ WHAT HE SAYS OF THIS FAMOUS "TRULY CANADIAN PIANO.

It affords me great pleasure to express my encomium of praise for the splendid qualities of the New Scale Williams Piano we are using on our Western Tour.

Possessed of brilliancy of tone ideal for the needs of a pianist, your instrument also embodies a lovely singing tone of velvety softness when needed, affording ideal support to my voice in both fortissimo and pianissimo passages.

I am observing its magnificent durability in the midst of constant moving in bitter cold weather, which it sustains constantly by keeping in perfect tune.

Can't Secure Papers From Minister

Former Lieut.-Colonel Pagnuelo Loses Case in Montreal.

Montreal, September 11.—Former Lieut.-Colonel Tancred Pagnuelo, a local lawyer, comander of the 206th French-Canadian Battalion up to the time of its disbandment last year, moved in the practice court here to compel Sir Edward Kemp, the Minister of Militia and Defence, to produce before the Superior Court of this district the record of Pagnuelo's trial and condemnation before a court-martial last year.

Mr. Justice Monet, who preside, dismissed the motion, the Minister of Militia not having been a party to any previous proceedings taken by Pagnuelo, and no papers in connection with the case having been served on the minister.

Pagnuelo was dismissed from the militia forces and sent to prison for a short term for "conduct unbecoming an officer." He is seeking to be rehabilitated, hence the legal proceedings.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing personal attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—I was very much impressed with reading the piece signed Victor, of his experience, given yesterday under the title 'Everyday Reading' in the Examiner and thought I would like to say a little, since through taking those weak spells I have stopped going to church. I think I have studied the Word closer, and I find in Hebrews, 6:12, we are to be followers of them who through faith and patience, inherit the promises. Now read 1st Cor., 4th and 5th, also 2nd Timothy, 4th chap., 6th to 8th verses, and if Paul or rather St. Paul, did not speak well of himself. It is not in the English language.

Now a little of my own experience. The first that I can remember was my mother sending me to take care of some younger children, while our dwelling, an old log house, burned down. And she and some neighbours saved a new dwelling just being built, and the next thing was taking that book called the Bible and going off alone and reading, for there appeared to be something there speaking to me, and in my boyish days I used to start to lead a better life, and I claim to have obeyed the 4th and 5th commandments. And I joined the Methodist church with my father and mother before I was 17 years old. And soon after I was requested to lead prayer meetings or take a public service, and I think they always got the best there was in me, and have been told that I gave the Bible truth. Some time after this I got so bad that it appeared I dare not approach the Lord's table, for mind you can be a member of a Christ church and still step wrong. However, after this I became a married man and I think for 40 years we read a portion of God's Holy Word and bowed together each morning after breakfast. Now, we lived about four miles from Keene, where the churches were, and the Sabbath school were at a different time from the preaching in our church, so we went and joined the Presbyterian church, which was a great benefit to us, and I had the honour of having a very large class in the Sunday school, which appeared to compel me to study and they honoured me in many ways. Of course in coming to this city we sought church connection. I was again elected to office. Speaking at some length last Sunday to two young people about this question of religion, I said I had been well paid in the journey even if there is no future. Think of some of the promises. Ask and you shall receive etc; call upon Me in the day of trouble, I will deliver, etc., and many, very many others. Those are true. I could give proof.

Now I thought our friend Victor came down pretty hard on the preacher. I got under one who occupied the same pulpit for upwards of fifty years. He was admitted on all hands to be real good, especially at funerals, and the last time he came to see me he read the 3rd chap. of Ephesians and then we all bowed in prayer. Now I am not trusting in anything that I have done or said, but Jesus Christ tasted death for each and we are invited to come, and eye hath not seen nor ear heard, etc.

If this finds a place in your valued paper, I could give more.

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING FOR YOUNG TORONTO

Two Months Too Late Some Bright Eyes Discover Errors in Canada's Semi-Centennial Medal

To celebrate Canada's semi-centennial on July 1st of this year, the Department of Education combined forces with the Government in making the school children play as big a part in the celebration as possible. Thousands of school children sang before the Grand Stand at the Toronto Exhibition on the occasion and to reward them and make them remember the event each child was given a medal.

The medal was the joint gift of the department and the Government, and bore on the one side the figures of their Majesties the King and Queen, and on the other the coat of arms of each of the provinces. Remembering that the medal came from the Department of Education to the Public school children of Toronto, imagine the feeling of the educational officials here when these facts were pointed out.

In the engraving around the side on which are the heads, centennial is spelled with one "n"—simplified spelling for young Toronto.

Turning the medal over, one coat of arms is for the "N.-W. Territories." Splendid training in history and Georgraphy for young Toronto, considering that twelve years ago, on September 1st, 1905, the term "North-west Territories" was dropped, and the district divided into two provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

"It's a shame!" was the opinion of one or two of the officials who were spoken to about the lettering on the medals. In after years the children who took part in the celebration will naturally want to look back with pride at their medals. What will they think then of such glaring discrepancies? Meanwhile they actually learn the wrong thing from the very thing which was given to be of benefit to them. Then, too, what will other places think of Canada's Confederation medals being sent out in such a haphazard, careless way?"—Toronto Telegram.

The government's September crop report to-day forecasts a production of 3,248,000,000 bushels, which is 124,000,000 bushels more than produced in record year of 1912.

Crop prospects improved to the extent of 58,000,000 bushels as a result of good weather during August, the Kansas crop showing improvement to the extent of almost 40,000,000 bushels, and Missouri 23,000,000 bushels. Declines were recorded in other states.

By Anna Alice Chapin

CHAPTER XXVI.

MRS. FORSYTHE TAKES A HAND

A twilight conscience lighted thro' a chink.....
Alfred Tennyson.

The door swung open and precipitably passing the Judge's protesting servant, Mrs. Forsythe hurried into the room, followed by a young woman who was sobbing hysterically. She was Augustine, Enid's French maid.

"Judge Denby! Jack!" faltered Mrs. Forsythe, who was very white, but trying to maintain some composure. "I had to come! Augustine says—Augustine! Tell them! Stop crying, and tell them at once!"

The girl addressed herself to Jack Radnor—whom she adored—and then spoke with melodramatic gestures but evident sincerity: "It is, Monsieur, that Mademoiselle—Oh, le bon Dieu guard her—Mademoiselle, at the very hour when they were preparing for the cotillon, le-bas, has done the so strange a thing!"

Jack would have wrung her neck for the delay. "For God's sake, what is it?" he demanded, whiter now than Mrs. Forsythe herself. "What did Mademoiselle do?"

"She dressed—Oh, Monsieur, but conceive it! At that hour, and with this storm coming on, though it is true that no one could know it then."

Jack groaned aloud. Was the woman wound up?

"In the silence that followed the clamour of the storm mocked them. Radnor closed his eyes for a moment, visualizing his Enid, a mere little atom of precious, helpless life, whirled about somewhere in that inferno of rain and wind. Only for a moment. The next he was mechanically dragging on his raincoat, and Hale, he left dully, was helping him, and putting his cap into his hand.

"Not the Toll Gate," put in Hale, speaking for the first time. "I left there less than two hours ago, and she had not reached there."

"Ah, Monsieur! I do not know. That is what Mademoiselle said, that if I did not know I could not tell. She did not want anyone to know—unless, she said, if she should not return."

"But," broke in Mrs. Forsythe, wildly, "you have known this all evening, Augustine! Why—why did not you let us know this before? You did not even answer the telephone!"

"Ah, Madame," wept Augustine, "it is the tonnerre—the terrible thunderstorm! I always am afraid and I have heard it is at such times death to go to the telephone!"

Jack did not wait for anything farther but dashed out into the darkness and the trap that was waiting for Mrs. Forsythe. In his rooms at the hotel he hurriedly changed while he was waiting for a horse to be brought up from the stable, and Wave was more upset than ever as he saw the set sternness of his master's face. Of course Radnor knew now what had happened. Enid had heard what young Denby had said to him about the plans for Martin Hale, and had ridden off like the headstrong madcap she was to carry him a warning in his mountain hiding place. What had happened to her no one could now hope to guess. He had sent the trap back to Judge Denby's house for Mrs. Forsythe, and now left a note for her:

"I shall go first to the toll gate, and see if she has reached there yet. Then I shall search. Try not to worry any more than you can help.—J."

Five minutes later he was on the back of the best horse they had in the Warm Sulphur Springs stable, galloping straight and hard on the Warm Springs road. He knew that the trails by this time would be practically impassable, and had no mind to be delayed by washouts so he took the longer way as the surest means to his end. As he rose he thought of the amazing selfishness of mankind. He had seen Hale and Polly go out into the threatening storm with only a passing thought of their having difficulties. But Enid was another matter! Another? She was all that mattered in the world—even if, and the thought did leave a stab, she had gone without a word to warn another man. He wished that he had asked Hale more about the roads. It was unlike him, he knew, to start upon any enterprise so impetuously, with so little forethought and preparation. But, then, never before had he faced anything like this. The girl he loved, lost, or at least missing, in a raging storm at night among the mountain ranges and for six—no, nearly seven hours! The fury of the tempest in his own face even in the Valley suggested to him what it must be on the Ridge; the difficulties of keeping an easy seat even for his strong polo-trained muscles was some faint indication of what an ordeal it would be for a slender girl to ride against such a storm. Every time that his horse plunged or reared at a thunderclap, or a lightning flash, every time a wet hoof slid stumbling over a wet stone, he had agonizing visions of Enid thrown or perhaps lying hurt — who knows where, among those cruel everlasting hills.

And as he rode with set teeth and a twisted heart, another expedition was setting out. Enid was making in fact, about as much trouble as is practicable for one small maiden.

"Am I free to go, sir?"

The Judge nodded. He was sincerely concerned, and now he went to Mrs. Forsythe and pressed her hand.

"Dear lady," he said, "I know how anxious you are, but I am sure unnecessarily so! Your daughter is an expert horsewoman, and——"

"I'm going," said Hale at the door. "I'll take the trail, for I reckon that Radnor took the main road to get faster going. We ought to find her between us."

"I'll go too," said Ralph Denby.

They were off in another moment.

"Judge Denby," said Mrs. Forsythe, suddenly, and wan and pale as she was, there was a fire in her eyes as vital as the fire of youth, "I am going after my child myself!"

"My dear lady—" began the Judge in expostulation.

"I am!" she declared. "I have suffered enough during this dreadful evening. I won't suffer half so much if I am doing something!"

"But you can't go alone!" Denby protested.

Mrs. Forsythe was fastening her wrap with that brilliant look still in her golden eyes—eyes so like Enid's own. She paused and looked at the Judge.

"Well," she said, "why don't you go with me?"

Judge Denby stared at her, when he walked across the room to his desk and began to finger some letters that lay there. His hand seemed to be trembling.

Malone was still in the room. He flashed his beady eyes into the Judge's own, and said:

"Better go, Judge!"

Denby started and looked involuntarily at Heaton. The latter slowly nodded.

"The road beyond the Toll Gate leads to Middleton," he said with seeming irrelevance.

"And there's no thing," added Malone, speaking also with no apparent reference to anything in particular, "like knowing the right time to do a thing."

The Judge looked from one to another of them silently. Then he straightened up and took a deep breath.

"I think you are both right," he said. He hesitated, and added, "Thank you, Heaton." And he had never spoken with more dignity. "Mrs. Forsythe, I shall be only too delighted to accompany you to Four Trail Crossing to look for your daughter."

JUST LIKE A HOUSECLEANING

Every room needs an occasional "Cleaning up", no matter how carefully the regular sweeping and dusting is done. Especially is this true after any unusual event, a party, a wedding or a quilting bee.

So it is with your body. No matter how regular your habits or well cooked your food, there comes a time when you don't feel just right. You may recall an unusually hearty meal or two, irregular hours, or eating something that "didn't agree with you", or it may be just the "dust-gathering".

In any case a few doses of a really good cathartic is all you need to put you right. For this purpose nothing is quite so suitable as

Chamberlain's Tablets

Two or three after supper the first night, and one each night for two or three days, and your digestive apparatus is just like the well-cleaned room. Every part of your body is more vigorous, you go about your work with a new feeling and begin again to enjoy life. Are these benefits not worth getting? You know they are.

And you need have no hesitation about beginning them for fear you must "keep it up". The effect is just the opposite.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

Calves, steady to firm.

The run of hogs was light, much to the disappointment of the packers, who found themselves forced to pay last week's closing prices or go without hogs. The market was firm at $18.25, fed and watered.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PONY FOR THE PADRE

By PATRICK MacGILL

In France.—Shan Keown, the big Irish soldier, had disappeared, and his two mates, Spudhole Bubb and Bowdy Benners, did not know where he had gone. The three men had been together an hour before in Holnon wood, consolidating the position for a German counter attack was feared. All round the wood lay the country of the German retreat, a sterile spread of ruined villages and fallen orchards. Looking across this waste that once was beautiful France, the town of St. Quentin could be seen in the distance, and high above its ruined houses the cathedral loomed large, a beautiful building as yet untouched by the Hun. One day it will probably share the fate of many sister shrines; at present it was used by the enemy as an observation post.

"Blimey, I don't know where that lumberin' Irishman has a-gone ter," said Spudhole, leaning on his spade, and fixing his eyes on the trench which he had been so busy digging. "I don't 'old wiv a man like that, for 'e's allus up to some bloomin' trick or anuver."

"Maybe he's gone after some Germans" said Bowdy Benners. "Should not wonder if he's on the track of some sniper."

"I 'aven't seen no bloomin' sniper about 'ere," said Spudhole. "And anyway it's a silly game tryin' to get 'old of a sniper in broad daylight. 'E'll get 'old o' a bullet more'n likely."

"He's far too wide awake to get 'old of a sniper in broad daylight. 'E'll get 'old o' a bullet more'n likely."

"He's far too wide awake to get taken in so easy," said Benners. "He says the bullet that's to finish him off has not been made yet."

"Well, then, where the devil is 'e?" said Spudhole. If 'e's not muckin' about after snipers 'e's after women. And one's as bad as annuver. For myself I'd ravver 'ave nufink to do wiv either a sniper or a woman. Wiv one it may be a broken 'ead, wiv the uvver it's sure to be a broken 'eart."

"Going off the deep-end again, Spudhole?"

The young cockney looked at the speaker. He was the Roman Catholic priest, an Irishman and a great friend of the boys, no matter what their religious denomination might be. He had just come to the lip of the trench and was looking down at the workers.

"It's about this 'ere Shan, sir," said Spudhole. "'E's vamoosed, cleared out, and we don't know where 'e's gone ter. Yer 'aven't seen 'im about at all, sir?"

"I saw him about an hour ago," said the padre. "He told me that he was going to make me a present. What it's to be he wouldn't tell me."

"No, not that I know of."

"Well it's very funny," said Spudhole. "If yer said that yer were wantin' a German 'elmet I could unnerstan'. For I know that Shan would go out and make short work o' a boche and get yer one. E's a devil (beg parton, sir) for 'is boche. Killin' 'em is a hobby o' 'is, sir."

"I understand, it's more than a hobby of yours, Spudhole," said the padre. "They say that you've made a fine art of it."

"Well, I 'ope 'e come back awright," said Spudhole. "Me and Bowdy wouldn't like nuffink to 'appen to ole Shan. 'E's our mate, yer see."

"O, he'll come back all right," said the priest. "He'll be very wide awake the sniper that will get hold of him. When did he go away?"

"At dinner time" said Bowdy Benners. "We fell out for a bit to feed and Shan disappeared. Maybe he has gone across to that village over there. He's a beggar for wandering about."

As Bowdy spoke he pointed through an opening in the trees at a village which nestled in a fold of the fields. Like all other villages in the district the place was in ruins.

"The enemy are occupying that place, I believe," said the padre. "But they're going to be driven out to-night."

"Well, I 'ope that ole Shan 'asn't gone prowlin' about that there locality," said Spudhole. "If 'e 'as 'e'll maybe get more than's good for 'im. . . . 'ere, wot the devil's that that's goin' on?"

The youngster's eyes were fixed on the village and something unusual was seen to be occurring. A man on horseback came careering out from the houses and galloped madly toward the Holnon wood. The British soldiers stared at the rider, fascinated.

"A bloomin' boche," said Spudhole.

"He's dressed in khaki," said the priest. "Probably one of our cavalry who was taken prisoner escaping."

"He hasn't a saddle," said Bowdy Benners. "He'll get flung in a minute."

The man had by this time covered half the distance between village and wood. It could now be seen that he had neither saddle nor reins, but was steadying himself by clinging to the horse's mane.

"Law blimey!! it's ole Shan!" shouted Spudhole.

The rider came nearer, urging on his steed for all he was worth. And indeed the animal needed to make some headway, for a machine gun had opened fire.

"Good ole Shan!" Spudhole shouted. "Annuver 'unner yards! Annuver fifty! That's it! Make the bloomin' 'oss lift its bloomin' 'eels. Brave Shan!"

The rider swept into the shelter of the wood and brought his steed to a standstill. Then he slipped awkwardly off and stood facing the priest.

"Never seen a jockey come off his hoss like yer," said Spudhole. "Yer should 'ave climbed down its legs. It would 'ave been more graceful."

Shan paid no heed to the remark. He looked at the padre.

"For yerself, father," he said. "A little present. I haven't seen ye wid a hoss since ye've got the one shot under ye a week ago."

"But you shouldn't have gone to all this trouble, Shan," said the padre. "You might have been killed."

"Is I yas afeard iv bein' kilt I could niver have jined up at all, father," said Shan. "But it was great fun intirely gettin' this bit iv a baste from thim Girmans. 'Twas this mornin' at the break iv day that I saw it first. It broke loose in the street iv the village, and I saw it with me own two eyes from here. I saw a Girman come out and lead the animal back agin to its stable, which whin I saw it afterward was nothin' more than a ruined estaminay. Well, whin I saw the pony with me own two eyes in the morning, I thought of yerself, father, with no horse at all since the one was shot under ye on the road up to the trinches the night afore the last charge.

"And I thought iv some iv us that might be lyin' out on the field wounded and dyin' and no priest near us to hear our confessions, and all because ye hadn't a horse to ride about on. So I gets out iv the wood and crawls along one ditch into another on me stomach till I comes up to the village. 'Twas a good thing that the inimy was keepin' well under cover. I tell ye, for I would never have got as far without bein' a dead man. So I goes round the rear of the village with one eye on the place where I saw the horse go into. I looked in through the hole in the wall made be a shell, and there I sees me beauty.

"So far so good. I crawls through the shell hole, loosens the animal's halter, for 'twas tied be the leg to a post. 'I'm goin' to ride across the country to the wood like hell,' I says to meself, 'for I can't get a horse to crawl along the ditches like a human being.' And just as I said these words in comes a big Girman, and he looks at he. . . . He didn't look at me a second time, for I lifts a post that was near to me hand, and hits the man across the head with it. As I had full play for me arm, he went down without a gurgle. Thin out I gits and up on it bare-backed and across the wilds iv France grabbin' me steed be the mane. . . . And that's how it was done," said Shan. "And, father, I hope ye niver feel as sore whin ye get off its back as I feel this very minute."

CLEVELAND'S BACKBONE.

(World's Work.)

In the summer of 1884 James J Hill had been sizing up the political situation in his part of the country. Mr. Cleveland's name was in the air. Nobody knew very much about him. Mr. Hill went to New York and talked with Mr. Tilden, whom he knew well. They had great esteem for each other.

"What about this man Cleveland?" was the question Mr. Hill had to ask.

"He is all right," said Mr. Tilden. "He is absolutely honest, is not afraid of anything."

"But has he backbone?"

"Backbone! He has so much that it makes his stomach stick out in front."

BACK TO THE SOIL.

Lure of Nature to the Country Bred Toiling in the Cities.

Life in the city is coming more and more to seem an unnatural exile, particularly to the country bred, at whose heartstrings boyish memories of farm and orchard, of wood and stream, tug appealingly, making pictures to the inner eye as of lost paradises as they sit imprisoned in their palaces, slaves to the telephone and the ticker.

More and more such men are planning to escape, vowing to themselves that they will rest satisfied with the modest competence rather than the big fortune, so that they can pull out while they still have some youth left and be boys again in the old countryside, fish the old streams and go coon hunting in the old woods. I know many men with that ambition.

For a man who has been exiled in the city for a number of years, having during that time had no more intimate acquaintance with nature than is to be snatched in his annual holiday at some fashionable beach or some luxurious hotel in the mountains—for such a one to watch the coming of spring, day after day, in a stretch of old woodland is to come as near to the recapture of youth as is possible in a world whose one irremediable sorrow is the inescapable doom of growing old.—Richard Le Gallienne in Harper's Magazine.

FIRE ESCAPES FOR SCHOOLS.

These Serve as a Play Scheme as Well as a Protection.

Some of the California schools are equipped with novel fire escapes, which are not only a safeguard, but afford the children as much amusement as a regular playground equipment. One of these fire escapes in Tropico, near Los Angeles, consists of several long sheet metal chutes, re-enforced with angle iron and secured to the walls of the building. They extend from an iron platform on the second floor, which leads from the main corridor. Separate chutes are provided for the boys and girls.

The teachers encourage the use of the slides as an amusement to accustom the children to them. Each slide ends in a slight upward curve to check the momentum of the descent. At the point where the children reach the ground a pile of loose sand breaks the fall.

In Venice, Cal., a spiral chute is employed, which is inclosed in a cylindrical metal casing. This is entered from a platform leading from the upper story. Like the straight slide, it is used as an amusement device by the pupils. A local hospital makes use of one of the same design.

Transvaal Terminations.

In perusing the names of South African towns in the newspapers many must have noted the word "fontein," which appears so often. This word is the English "fountain," and towns with this termination have been named after Dutch farms, which are always built beside fountains of spring water. Thus Bloemfontein means "flowery fountain," Modderfontein "muddy fountain," Kleinfontein "small fountain" and Elandsfontein "deer fountain."

Another town termination which many readers must have noticed is that of "laagte," which is pronounced "laughty." It means "shelter for animals," and hence when we talk of the battle of Elandslaagte we may know that it was fought on a spot frequented by deer.—London Mail.

New Drug Acts on Every Organ of Body

Makes Your Checks Rosy.

A pale face, sallow complexion, weak stomach, clogged liver, painful kidneys, catarrh affections, rheumatic pain, run-down and anemic conditions of the whole system are caused from an impure, thin and watery condition of the blood. All these organs of the body are directly dependant on the blood for their source of strength. It will be a great boom to all these thousands of weak, anaemic, nervous, run-down people to hear and learn about this new drug "Bonized Phosphorus with Iron." After each meal and at bedtime take from two to three of these tablets with a little water. You will note that you will get results after the first few doses the iron acts immediately upon the blood while the phosphorus goes direct to the spine, the center of the nervous system.

As soon as you get the blood purified and the nerves soothed, the stomach, liver and kidneys begin to do their work and in 8 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger. Your blood pressure will be increased, making your cheeks rosy and you once more have that vigorous, vivacious, keen, bright, alert feeling of boyhood days. The new drug is dispensed by F. C. Webber.

SNIDER SUFFERED MOST ALL HIS LIFE

Feels Better Since Tanlac Overcame Trouble Than He Has in Thirty-Five Years

"I'm feeling better to-day than I have in thirty-five years, and it's all due to the good work of Tanlac," said James A. Snider of 17 Jackson street, West, Hamilton, recently. Mr. Snider has the distinction of being one of the fastest coopers in Canada, but was forced by ill health to give up his trade. He has now returned to work, however, and is employed by the Paardeburg Chapter I.O.D.E. Mr. Snider is well known both in Hamilton and vicinity, and although sixty-nine years of age, he has the appearance of a man many years younger. Continuing his statement, Mr. Snider said:

"A medicine that will make a person my age gain in weight and relieve them of trouble of thirty-five or forty years standing, is certainly wonderful. I had been suffering from a bad stomach nearly all my life. I had no appetite and just had to force myself to eat. At times I felt like there was a hundred pounds weight on my stomach, and I was almost doubled up with misery. Gas would form from what I ate and make my heart flutter, and I so often had dreadful smothering spells. I have had the best treatment both in the United States and Canada, and have taken all kinds of medicines. I would feel a little better for a day or so and then feel as bad or worse than ever.

"Tanlac did for me just what others say it has done for them, and I want to make this statement because I feel like it may help lots of people who are in the same fix I was. Why, before I took Tanlac I had rheumatism in my knees, and the pain was so severe I couldn't straighten up, and now the rheumatism is nearly all gone and I can walk as good as any body. It has put my stomach in good condition, the gas has stopped forming and I don't have any more of those awful smothering spells. My food agrees with me and I know it is building me up because I have already gained several pounds and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. All the pain is gone now, and I want to say again I feel better than I have in thirty-five years. I can't say enough in praise of Tanlac and I'm going to tell everybody I can about the good it has done me."

Linen Stitch in Filet Lace

HOW to work the linen stitch. This is the stitch most seen in old embroideries. The grounds and leaves of flowers, as well as the edges, are generally worked in it.

After you have fastened the thread to a knot in the filet, it is carried twice, to and fro, over and under the threads of the net.

Every second thread passes out the end of the row, under the thread of the net, and over it, when it is brought upward again. (See Fig. 4.)

This forms the body of the linen stitch, which is completed by the second series

Forming a Corner (Fig. 5).—When the linen stitch is to form a corner, begin by carrying the thread over the prescribed number of threads. In this, first, the threads must be left very slack, and if you have any trouble doing this, you can thrust a knitting needle through the last square so that the threads darned over this will be loose when you pull it out. This pulling out of the extra needle must be done, of course, before you commence to darn in the opposite direction. The reason the threads must be slack is because they will be taken up so much by the second cross weaving thread. (See Fig. 7.)

Forming the Corner of a Border.—The first threads of the second side forms the linen ground of the corner square. From the second corner square pass the third to the fourth, passing over and under the threads laid for the first corner. (Fig. 6.)

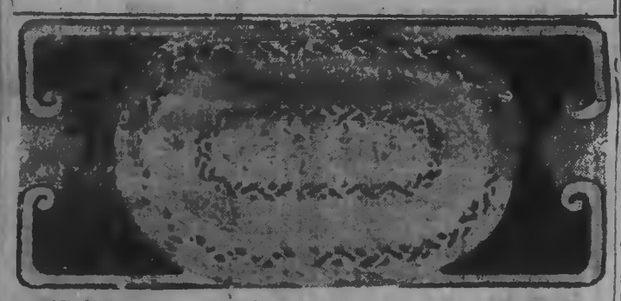
Old Filet Stitches.—The ancient embroideries are done on a very fine net. The linen stitch is worked in two layers only—that is, in one journey to and fro, and by working a little figure S in linen stitch in two layers of thread only. That is to say, in place of darning four threads in each square in both directions you pass only two threads in each square.

How Marcia Makes Rugs



MARCIA has a house full of braided cretonne rugs and this is how she makes them:—

The cretonne is cut in yard long strips, about five inches wide. The strips are folded each side to the centre, then the whole strip folded in half. This does away with the raw edge. Then the strips are braided, five strands to a braid.

Fasten the strips together at the top and stick the end in a drawer to hold it fast. Then braid it. The five strands make a wide, flat braid.

When you come to the end of a braid sew on more strips and continue. They are usually started with the flowered material.

When you have braided about two or three yards you have enough to start your centre. First fold your braided piece in an oblong, fastening the ends under flatly. The size of this oblong depends on how large a rug you make. An oblong of about fifteen inches makes a good start for a medium sized rug.

Then coil your braided strips around this. Lay your work flat on a table and sew the strips together from the wrong side, using strong "shoe" thread. Fasten the end of each strip down flat, and do not begin each separate strip in the same place, else you will have a hump.

Remember that you do not coil the rug continuously. You braid enough each time to complete the circumference once. Be sure to keep it very flat. Continue until your rug is the size you wish.

A good way is to start the centre with a flowered material, then in the next braid put a strand or two of black—or, if you wish, make a whole braid of black. Then put two or three rows of plain color, then the flowered again. You can use any cotton material not too flimsy. You can mix any number of materials as long as the colors are the same.

EVERY DAY HELPS.

Should the knob come off the lid of a pan or kettle a good substitute may be made as follows:—A screw should be slipped through the hole, with the head to the inside of the lid, and a cork screwed on the protruding end. This will make a knob which will not get hot and can be removed when it is dirty.

To prevent shrinking—When you wash your door panels of lace or net appliqué, to make them fit door glass, wash, starch and stretch and tack on the door while wet. In doing this you will not have the disappointment of having them inches too small when dry.

A useful clothespin bag. Make a square bag of strong material, wide enough to allow a wooden clothes hanger to be stitched to the top edge make a long slit in the centre of the front piece so that the pins are easily accessible. The advantage of this big is that it can be hooked on the line and slid along as required.

In pouring cake batter into the pan it is well to remember that the centre of the cake is the part which is usually the highest, so spread the batter as much to the sides and ends as possible, leaving a depression in the centre then the cake when baked will be level.

Cubes of sugar rubbed over the surface of an orange will retain the orange flavor by absorbing the oil.

If you soak an orange in hot water the peel will come off like a glove and it will be very sweet.

Grease sweet potatoes before they are put in the oven to bake. They will bake in half the time and the skins will be soft.

SOFTEN THE HANDS.

Keep a dish of Indian meal on the toilet stand with the soap, rub the meal freely on the hands after soaping them for washing. It will surprise you if you have not used it how it will cleanse and soften the skin, also prevent chapping.

NOVEL PINCUSHION.

Take a sherbet glass (a chipped one will answer), fill with bran and draw a piece of colored silk down over the glass to the stem and tie tightly with ribbon to match. It looks very dainty on the dresser in th guests' room.

PREVENT COLOR RUNNING.

To prevent color from running in dark clothes when they are washed add one cupful of salt and a cupful of vinegar.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING IN THE WAR

One of the practical kinds of work which the National Woman's League for Service has been engaged in is that of establishing canteens where National Guard regiments are temporarily located for drilling until they are sent into their permanent camps or elsewhere.

Groups of women take turns in tending the canteen and waiting on the men. Simple refreshments are served but of excellent quality and at a low price, just enough to help along with the expenses. If the men haven't the money they are given credit and it is later taken out of their pay.

The coffee and sandwiches and other foods are served at a time when the men are especially in need of some light refreshment. The women hand things out with a smile and a pleasant greeting and an acquaintance is established between the men and the canteen women, some of whom are wives of officers, which leads to a good understanding and often to needed help on other occasions.

The canteen is one of the ways in which women can do something to help along in a military way. It is far more practical and useful for women than to drill with guns that will never be used. Most of the canteen servers wear a neat and attractive uniform which helps to fit them into the picture with the men in khaki.

Advice About the Hair Which Every Woman Should Read

WOMAN'S crowning beauty is her hair, we are told, and the hot weather is very hard on this crown of beauty, as it is on everything else.

Especially for the woman who is more or less confined to an office is it a difficult task to give her hair the attention it really requires.

In order to retain the smooth, glossy appearance which is the visible sign of good grooming, you must give your hair a certain amount of daily care.

This is particularly essential in hot weather.

You maids who work for your living are often apt to neglect your hair.

When you return from work on a hot August evening, you have little inclination to brush and massage your scalp.

You feel much more inclined to go to bed without even so much as braiding it for the night.

It can lose its gloss and become frowsy looking, dry and matty before you realise that you are really neglecting it.

The heat has a most pernicious effect on it always.

The first place that you begin to perspire is at the roots of the hair. Most of you will find that the hair close to your head is wet the greater part of the day in this hot weather.

Now, if you wear a hat the whole day long, or if you wear any false hair, your own hair has no chance to air and dry properly and cleanly.

The perspiration wets it anew every day and it never becomes really dry.

Consequently, after a few days, your hair feels moist and sticky and has a sour, musty odor that is not only disagreeable to you, but to others as well.

Your head will soon show the effects of this treatment and it will take months to restore it to its normal healthy condition.

An ounce of prevention is worth five pounds of cure in the care of the hair, and if you once allow unhealthy conditions to become prevalent in your scalp it will take you months to free yourself of them.

It is far better to give your hair a little daily attention and keep it in good condition.

One of the first rules in caring for your head in hot weather is to avoid false hair. Switches, "rats," puffs, buns and curls should all be consigned to a place of storage at least until the cold weather returns, and even after.

False hair makes the head much hotter than it would normally be, keeps the air from your own strands, keeps the perspiration on the scalp from drying, and, in other words, acts as sure death to the life of the real thing.

Do without false hair during this hot weather. In these days of simple styles and coiffures there is no excuse for it anyway.

So banish your switches and rats and all the rest. The excess paraphernalia to the shades of the past.

Don't wear your hat any more than you have to. So many business women keep their hats on from the time they leave their homes in the morning until they return at night. Apparently they do not feel businesslike without them.

If you who follow this course would only stop to realize that you are robbing your hair of all air, you might be sensible enough to take your hat off the minute you go into your office.

After all, you spend practically all your days with the exception of Sunday there.

The little airing you give the hair at night is not much when you consider that it has been shut up tight under a close fitting shape all day.

So take off your hat in the office and let the air dry the perspiration as it starts.

Let it hang loose all night and while you are dressing and undressing.

Be sure that it has half an hour's airing in front of the window at night. Switch it about in the air so that all the dampness on the scalp may be thoroughly dried.

Many girls find that their hair becomes extremely oily in warm weather, as the heat seems to bring it all to the surface.

If you have any trouble of this kind give your scalp a dry shampoo once a week or as often as you need it.

This is also good to absorb the moisture from excess perspiration on the scalp.

It is not wise to wash the hair with water too often, but you can always substitute the dry shampoo whenever it seems necessary.

PLAY APRON

Any mother may make this useful little apron in one hour.

A LITTLE play apron can be made up from towelling that is bought by the yard.

It simply has a hole cut out about one-third in from one end of towelling which is one yard and an eighth long. Two strips are cut off one end of the towel and sewed together; this makes strings, which are sewn to one end of the towelling, which has been gathered slightly.

The piece that is cut out for the neck opening is used to make the pocket on the apron.

Children always like a little picture sewn to their aprons. This may be embroidered on in outline in cotton floss or cut from a piece of figured print or cretonne.

What Every Housekeeper Should Know.

NOW is the time when we housewives must work hard and fast to store up supplies against a hard winter.

Many of us are seasoned old timers in the art, but some of us are amateurs at canning and preserving. But all of us welcome suggestions.

And it is well when we are taking advice to be used that the advice is authentic.

There have always been people who are ready at all times to proffer opinion on every subject under the sun.

But the man or woman who specializes in one subject is the person who is qualified to speak upon the branch he or she has specialized in.

The methods to be used in canning and preserving which are given here are advocated by the best known experts in that line that our country affords.

Use always an agate, iron or porcelain lined preserving kettle which is free from all blemish in glazing, as the action of the fruit acid upon tin or iron darkens the fruit.

Use a small sharp pointed knife ground to an edge for fruits which a steel knife may discolor.

Can rubbers should be new each season and should be boiled at least twenty minutes before using. Examine and test jars before sterilizing them. Put a little water in each, adjust the rubber, screw down the top and invert. If it does not leak be sure to keep it with its own cover.

When a jar of fruit is hard to open place the jar top downward in a basin of boiling water, or place a hot flatiron on the cover of the can for a few minutes.

When preparing for canning hard fruits such as apples, quinces, &c., which tarnish when exposed to the air, first drop them into a four per cent salt water solution, made by using one level teaspoonful of salt to one quart of water or one tablespoonful of salt to one gallon of water. Let them remain in the solution until enough are ready for the canning.

When fruit is canned in glass jars and ready to store away wrap each jar separately in brown paper or newspaper in order to preserve the color. Dark curtains on store room shelves also help to protect the cans from the light.

For wax for sealing jars and bottles, make a mixture of one-third resin and two-thirds beeswax. Heat together, mix well and put away until needed. When it is to be used lay a lump of it on top of the jar or bottle to be sealed, and press it down with a hot piece of metal. This will melt it and thus seal the cork.

It is possible to can small fruits without sugar with entire success. First pick over and wash the fruits if they are at all sandy. Pack in perfectly clean jars, adjust the rubbers and fill the jars with cold water. Lay on the lids, but do not screw or fasten them down.

Stand the jars in a boiler, the bottom of which has been protected with a rack, surround the jars one-half way up with cold water, cover the boiler and bring to a boiling point and boil rapidly for five minutes.

Uncover the boiler, lift one jar at a time and fasten each lid without removing it from the jar. Never lay a lid down on the table for a second, as in that second it may accumulate spores that will later spoil the fruit.

For preserves, fruit should not be over-ripe, as the retention of the shape is important.

To retain the shape of soft fruit berries in particular measure out the quantity of sugar to be used. Dispose the fruit and sugar in alternate layers, in homemaking.

Crab apples, grapes (just ripe), yellow pippins, under ripe blackberries and quinces will yield a firm, stiff jelly with one-half pound of sugar added to each pint of fruit juice.

The juice must be boiling when the sugar is added. Large fruits such as quinces, apples or crab apples need not be pared, but the seeds must be removed.

Feminine Problems

"IT is a real shock to me to find many of my middle aged married women friends less happy than my unmarried friends. I still believe that congenial married life is the ideal existence, yet I am confronted by this condition. Now, what can be the trouble?"

My friend was visiting the home of her youth after an absence of fifteen years. There, when young, on the eve of her marriage, she had lost her lover, and though a social favorite she had never married.

"Most of the girls are still here, married, and seem to have kind husbands, nice children, attractive homes. Those who did not marry are earning their living in good positions. The married women are bundles of irritated nerves. The unmarried women are serene and happy.

"Isn't it humiliating to think of the time we waste on mending socks and thinking up meals?" complains one. "And in looking up new maids or in doing the work of the absent cook," chimes in another.

This rebellion against responsibilities naturally associated with wifehood cannot produce a peaceful or happy mind.

It is at afternoon social events—bridge clubs, for example—that bitter distaste for household tasks is oftenest aired. With such conversation is mingled discussion of methods for reducing flesh and preventing wrinkles.

The woman earning her living has little time for afternoon card parties or massage. She works while her sister laboriously plays. The average business woman, active and energetic, is less fleshy, less wrinkled.

Invariably the radiantly happy married woman of fifty has adopted the man's point of view regarding her life. The average man is a better lover than the average woman, because he loves practically, showing affection in acts rather than in words. From the beginning his home is his incentive to effort. Sometimes, after marriage, as demands increase, he becomes so engrossed in his purpose that he forgets to talk of love.

Then it is that the wife, who has small understanding of love in action, pines because she is sure he has grown cold. No, he is at fever heat, lest he fail in providing physical proofs of his affection.

The woman who finds happiness in married life has a sufficiently masculine outlook to understand him. She, instead of brooding over imaginary slights, in return proves her devotion by work. Her domestic duties are dignified by love, consequently she can fix her thoughts upon something diverting while she mends socks, forgetting the commonplace.

She can hear the song of the bird or think of the story she read last evening while she does the work of the absent cook. To her it is a joy to plan attractive meals that will add to the efficiency of her loved ones. She has a profession—homemaking.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Well Met

A Man Kindly Takes Another's Risk.

By F. A. MITCHEL

A man dressed like a gentleman alighted from a train at a suburban station, asked the agent when the next train to the city would pass, then set out to walk to a residence which bore evidence of having been shut up for the winter. Entering, he went upstairs. Half an hour later he looked out through a window and saw a handsomely dressed woman emerging from another country residence a few hundred yards distant. She was carrying a suit case.

The man's face took on the expression of one who had discovered something interesting. He kept his eyes on the woman, who was approaching, till she passed the house he was in; then, taking up a suit case he had packed, he went downstairs and hurried after the woman. Lifting his hat politely, he said:

"Will you permit me to assist you with that suit case?"

"Thank you very much; it is very light. Do you know when the next train leaves for the city?"

"In ten minutes."

"In that case I shall have just time to reach the station and buy my ticket."

The two walked on together and by the time they reached the station had established an acquaintance. On boarding the train the man helped the woman on to the train, and on seating herself she made room for him beside her.

"I saw you leaving Mr. Lawrence's country house," he said.

The woman started.

"I supposed Mr. Lawrence's family in the city and the house was unoccupied."

"I am Fanny Lawrence," was the hesitating reply.

"Oh!"

"I needed some things and came out to get them. They're in my suit case."

"My case exactly. My country house is shut up, and we're all in the city. I needed some things and came out for them."

"And they're in your suit case?"

"Yes; they are."

There was a pause in this dialogue. It was evident the lady was ill at ease. Presently the man said:

"The next station is Cloverton. Another road crosses this one there. I'm going to leave this train and take another on the other road."

"Why do you do that?"

"This train enters the city at the Union station. The other stops at several small stations before reaching the terminal, at one of which I shall leave it."

"For what purpose?"

"It will be more convenient for me."

The lady was silent. She seemed to be thinking. Presently she asked her companion at what station he would stop. He said Arlington avenue. Then, after a few questions as to the location of the Arlington avenue station, she said that it would be a more convenient stopping place for her too. The man said that perhaps she had better leave the train there and he would be happy to secure her a conveyance. The lady thanked him and said she believed she would do so.

"Would you mind," she said after a period evidently devoted to deliberation, "when we reach the Arlington avenue station, getting out on the car platform and seeing if there is any one apparently looking for some person?"

"Of course I will."

"I suppose you will think it strange my asking you to do so. I think I shall have to give you my confidence. I am engaged to a young man to whom my father objects."

"I see you are going to elope with him."

"Yes."

"But how is it that you expect to meet him at the Arlington avenue station? You did not intend to stop there till I spoke of doing so myself."

"You don't understand. I don't expect to meet him there. You see, I am a bit nervous lest father or my brother has learned what I am about to do and may stop me."

"I see."

Shortly after these travelers had left their respective country homes a lady living opposite the house from which Miss Lawrence emerged called up Julian Lawrence in the city on the phone and gave him a bit of information that produced in him a sudden activity. When the train reached the crossing a man in a striped waistcoat was standing on the platform. He was about to board the train when he saw the couple step down from it, whereupon he scrutinized them closely and let it go on without him. When they boarded a train on the other road he got on, too, and took a seat in the rear of the car they occupied. But they failed to notice that he appeared to be interested in them. As soon as the couple were seated the man turned to the lady and said:

"If you are trying to avoid capture by your father it behooves you to exercise your wits. Unless some one on the watch for you knows you by sight you may throw him off the track. One looking for a runaway couple will not be likely to suspect one whose appearance gives evidence of having been long married. I would recommend you to join me in playing such a couple."

The lady agreed, and they at once began to show that outward indifference that contrasts with the behavior of a pair of lovers or a newly married couple.

"It won't do," said the man, "for me to go out ahead of you on arriving at Arlington avenue station and reconnoiter. That would give you away at once. We must step out unconcernedly. I'll let you carry your suit case, just as if we had been married twenty years, and go my way, leaving you to follow me without looking back for you."

The couple descended from the train. The man watching them left it a moment later and, keeping them in sight, went out after them to see them take a cab together. They were being driven away when the shadower called another cab and, getting into it, bade the driver follow the one that was leaving.

"Now, see 'ere," said the man playing the part of the husband, dropping into a vernacular that was natural to him. "You ain't Miss Lawrence nohow. What d'ye want to put up a job like that for? You're the 'ousemaid at the Lawrences."

"'Ow do you know I am?" asked the woman, paling.

"'Cause I'm the Tookers' butler, the next 'ouse to the Lawrences. I've seen you in the Lawrence back yard a-'angin' up the wash. Wot y' got in your suit case anyhow?"

"Wot's that to you?"

"You and I are in for it together. If one gets hoff 'tother gets hoff. I reckon y' got some valyables in your suit case, hain't you?"

"Reckon you've got some in yours."

"I don't mind lettin' you know that I've got some gold plate."

"Well, I've got some jewels."

"Now we're gittin' on to an understandin'. 'Ow would y' like to git rid o' your jewels till there's no danger of you're bein' found with 'em on you?"

"Like enough you want me to trust 'em to you."

"Well, if you don't like that, 'ow would you like to take my haul?"

"I don't want it. I've got enough risk now without takin' any more."

"What you goin' to do with the sparklers when you git 'em safe?"

"I don't know. Sell 'em if I can."

"You're purty enough to wear 'em yourself. They're none too good for you."

This compliment put a different complexion upon the treatment by the woman of the man. She preferred to rely upon him, as most women prefer to rely upon a man.

"What would you do with 'em if I turned 'em over to you?" she asked in a tone that denoted a disposition to yield.

"Oh, I'd take care of 'em till I could turn 'em back to you. If you were caught with 'em on you you'd git sent up for somethin' like five or six years, and that wouldn't pay since you've got a feller as is willin' to take the risk on hisself."

She being the weaker sex, he succeeded in persuading her to cast her burden on him. She handed her suit case to him. The expression on his face as he took it was, to say the least, crafty. What was passing through his mind was, "Might as well hang for a sheep as a lamb, and two sheep is better than one."

"When'll I get 'em back?" she asked.

"Let me see. This is Friday. A week from today you meet me—do you know the fountain in the park?"

"Yes."

"Well, you meet me at the fountain at 12 o'clock and I'll give 'em back to you."

He called on the driver to stop, and she got out of the cab.

The shadower was disconcerted at this division. He could not follow both of them in different directions, and, seeing that the girl was without her suit case, he concluded the man had it, so he directed his driver to still follow the cab. It finally brought up at the entrance to an alley. The man in it alighted with two suit cases and, having paid the fare, was about to enter the alley when he felt a hand on his shoulder and, turning, saw a man who threw open his coat and showed a badge.

"'Ow did you get on to it?" asked the culprit.

"Never mind that; come with me."

An hour later there was an investigation at the police office. The two suit cases were opened. One was found to contain valuable plate, the other jewels. The police had been put on to the track of the housemaid and were not looking for the butler. However, the culprit explained the matter of the double theft and how he had come to be in possession of all the loot. Since he had nothing to gain by telling that the maid might be captured on a certain date at the park fountain he did not mention the fact.

However, the next morning on taking up a newspaper she saw an account of the capture of the man who had become responsible for her share of the plunder and kept away from the rendezvous. Several weeks later a member of the family she had robbed met her on the street and turned her over to a policeman.

On her trial the prosecuting attorney found it difficult to convict her, since no stolen property was found in her possession and she was not known to have disposed of any. Since she was very penitent her former mistress forgave her and she was set free.

As for the man who had so kindly relieved her of the risk of being caught with the stolen goods, he was given three years for each robbery, making six years in all.

The War Needs of Canada

THE NEED FOR DROPPING PARTY POLITICS

BY BENJAMIN ANTHORP GOULD

TWELVE

The people of Canada have never held an election which approached in importance the one which is about to take place. The whole future of the nation and the place of Canada in history will depend upon its result. It is absolutely necessary for the salvation of our national soul that this election be won by those who are determined that the name of Canada shall shine with undiminished glory, and that Canada shall not shirk or evade any of her national duties in this war. I care not whether in the past these true Canadians have been Conservatives or Liberal; I demand that to-day they act and vote as Canadians, and sink all lesser concern in the determination that Canada as a nation shall do all that Canada can do and all that Canada ought to do.

No party has any monopoly of patriotism, and every party has in it thousands who feel as we do, unless perhaps the comparatively small number of those who call themselves Nationalists be excepted. As to them, I hold that it is impossible for men to accept the heresies of Bourassa and at the same time make any claim to patriotism. The Nationalists in Canada have put themselves into the same class as the Anarchists, the ultra-Socialists, the I.W.W., or the Pacifists in other countries. They would do to Canada what an orgy of unassimilated liberty has done to Russia, by refusing to recognize responsibility and by permitting freedom to degenerate into chaos.

Could we succeed in making the issue clear between patriotism and lack of patriotism, there would be no need to fear for the issue of the election. The voters must, however, beware lest they be deceived by patriotic words into accepting those as their representatives who are not prepared to transform these words into patriotic deeds. The only danger is that if those persons who are deceived by words are added to the slackers, the selfish, the pro-German, and those who have not yet become Canadian-minded, they may succeed in electing a majority of Parliament.

The one issue is of course whether Canada shall stay in the war to the end at whatever cost and at whatever sacrifice. The one test of whether a candidate is in his heart as well as with his lips, ready to insist that Canada shall remain in the war is whether he is ready to enforce legislation which shall make Canada effective until the end of the war. The prime necessity is that there shall be conscription of men to maintain the army, and next to this that there shall be conscription of money and resources to take care of the men at the front and their dependents, and to render every aid in the war of which the country is capable.

Beware of those who give lip-service to patriotism, but who in acts are looking to winning the election more than to winning the war. It is impossible to accept as satisfactory to true Canadianism any candidate who states that he is in the war until the end, but on the voluntary system, because by saying this he states that he is not prepared to take all steps necessary to make effective Canada's continuation in the war. In like manner, it is not possible to accept as satisfactory any candidate who acknowledge allegiance to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, because Sir Wilfrid has been unwilling to approve of steps absolutely necessary to make effective Canada's continuation in the war.

It must be clearly understood that since the Military Service Act has become law it is no longer a matter of legislation, but of administration. It cannot be enforced vigorously and impartially by any government which is not in full sympathy with it, nor by any government which derives an essential part of its support from members in Parliament who are opposed to it. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has accepted the duty of naming one-half of the members of the exemption tribunals, and that is probably tantamount to saying that so long as the law is being enforced it must be obeyed. As a law abiding citizen he could take no other ground. He has not, however, stated that if he is returned to power he will take the necessary affirmative steps to enforce the law, nor that he will not seek to repeal it. His followers will doubtless in the campaign seek to slur over the conscription issue by assuming that since the measure has become law it can be operated as well by a Laurier government as by any other. Nothing is more fallacious or dangerous. There will probably be a solid block in the next Parliament of supporters of Laurier from Quebec, not less than sixty in number, made up in large part of those who do not wish Canadian participation in the war to continue, of men like Ethier of Two Mountains, who said, "No more men, no more money," and was not repudiated by his leader Laurier. Should Laurier be returned, he will be dependent for his parliamentary majority upon men of this stamp, and they will have it in their power at any time to block action on his part. Even should he be desirous of enforcing the law, he would not be able to do so on account of the fact that his main suport would come from anti-war Quebec. Do not be misled into thinking otherwise; this conclusion is a necessary result of political conditons in Quebec from which Laurier would get his principal strength. A Laurier government will beyond the possibility of denial mean that the policies of Canada will be dictated by the French-Canadian members from Quebec.

I know from direct information that the British military authorities regard the Canadian army as the right arm of their military strength. I know that Sir William Robertson has stated that this army is unsurpassed by the troops from any nation in this war. I know that when an operation, the success of which is essential is contemplated, Sir Douglas Haig does not hesitate to rely upon Canadians. I know that there have not been more important British battles than the defence at the Second Ypres and the offence at Vimy Ridge, in both of which Canadians proved their quality. I know that Balfour and other British statesmen are regarding with the greatest apprehension the political situation in Canada, fearing that it may mean that our armies will be allowed to fade away that, and we shall no longer be a very present help in time of danger. It rests upon us here in Canada to see that these fears are vain. "It's all right, if only they hold out," says Bill to Tom in the trenches. "They hold out? Who hold out?" answers Tom. "Why, the folks at home, of course," says Bill, and, as usual Bill is right.

To win this election we must avoid any division of the vote of those who believe as we do. Not more than one conscription candidate must run in any constituency because the only hope of the skulkers and the slackers is to elect their candidate by dividing the strength of those who represent the true Canadian spirit.

Let our opponents put as many candidates as they wish into the field in a riding; they will only serve to diminish the danger of the election of any of them. Let us, on the other hand, be wise enough to see that the opinions of a man as to the tariff, or as to any of the lesser matters which distinguish the two parties, are in comparison with the overwhelming responsibility in regard to the war at this time of no importance or moment. Such things can wait until normal times; it is now the crisis of abnormal times with which we must deal.

If the electors of any particular constituency can be made to see these things let them unite upon a single candidate and return him by acclamation, without the danger or bitterness which would arise from an election. If in any constituency candidates have already been nominated, let an open union convention be called of all those who believe that Canada must remain in the war, and let it demand of candidates already nominated that they resign their nominations and submit themselves anew to such convention. Should a candidate refuse to accede to such a demand, it would prove that he accepted our principles only with the lips and not with the heart, and that his candidacy should be opposed. Those candidates on the other hand who show themselves willing to yield to such a demand on their patriotism would be the more likely to be nominated by such a union convention.

Again I say that we must at any cost and at any sacrifice win this election. On its outcome depends the whole future position of Canada, our honour, and whether we fail in doing our duty at the critical point. On it depends our course in regard to our sons at the front, whether we shall desert them in their need. On it depends the decision as to whether we are ready to make those material sacrifices which are necessary to preserve our self-respect, to do justie to those who have fought for us, and to do our duty in assuaging as far as possible the grief of those who have been bereaved by demonstrating that the sacrifices of our flesh and our blood have been made on behalf of a nation which is not unworthy of its sons.

Win the elecion by uniting all those who are earnest in their determination. In union only is there the strength which at this time is essential if we are not to be disgraced in our own eyes and in the eyes of the world. United we shall triumph and be to the end worthy of the heritage we have received and which it is our duty to hand down to our descendants. If we fail to see broadly and to understand clearly, we may by our blindness forfeit all that we hold most dear. We must rise above the narrowness and pettiness of those who can only look at the immediate effect upon themselves of the course which Canada shall take.

We believe that there ought to be at once a union in the government of all patriotic elements, and that this election should dedicate the nation anew to the support of such a war government. But even if such a union government is not formed at Ottawa before the election, we must demonstrate that there is none the less in Canada a union of the people, and we must send as our representatives to Ottawa in the next Parliament men who are prepared to unite the real patriotism of Canada on a plane far above that of party politics, and who will set aside as entirely unimportant and unworthy questions of party advantage, party supremacy, or party patronage.

"Boys," said a teacher to her Sunday School class, "can any of you quote a verse from the Scripture to prove that it is wrong to have two wives?"

A bright boy raised his hand.

"Well, Thomas," encouraged the teacher.

Thomas stood up. "No man can serve two masters," he said proudly.

"One Whole Wheat Meal a Day"—that's the slogan for those who want to conserve food and also conserve strength and health. But be sure it is the whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat—nothing wasted, nothing thrown away. Fifteen years ago Shredded Wheat was eaten only as a breakfast cereal; now it is eaten for any meal as a substitute for meat, eggs, or potatoes. Two or three biscuits with milk or cream and some fresh fruits make a nourishing, satisfying meal at a cost of only a few cents.

APPLES, ORANGES, FIGS AND PRUNES

Are The Four Fruits Used in Making "Fruit-a-tives"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives", is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Futility of "No Trespass" Signs.

In the American Magazine David Grayson comments as follows on a farmer who covered his land with "No Trespass" signs:

"I did not need to enter his fields, nor climb his hill, nor walk by his brook. But as the springs passed and the autumns whitened into winter I came into more and more complete possession of all those fields that he so jealously posted. I looked with strange joy upon his hill, saw April blossom in his orchard and May color the wild grape leaves along his walls. June—I smelled in the sweet verdure of his hay fields, and from the October of his maples and beeches I gathered rich crops—and put up no hostile signs of ownership, paid no taxes, worried over no mortgage and often marveled that he should be so poor within his posted domain and I so rich without."

Combs and the Hair.

The best comb for the hair is the hard rubber coarse comb with smooth, rounded edges that will not cut the hair. A fine comb has many disadvantages; therefore the all coarse comb is to be preferred. A metal tooth comb tends to pull out good hair and is liable to wound and scratch the scalp. Never use a comb the teeth of which are broken. One should never try to save money at the expense of a good comb. The comb should be washed frequently in water in which ammonia has been added. Scrub out the teeth with a nail-brush and soap. A sun bath is also good for the comb.

Perfectly Natural.

Robust Old Gentleman (to sick woman just arrived at health resort)—When I first came here I hadn't strength to utter a word; I had scarcely a hair on my head; I couldn't walk across the room, and I had to be lifted from my bed.

Sick Woman—You give me great hope. How were you cured?

Robust Old Gentleman—I was born here.

Enlisting a Golfer's Aid.

"I hung a few rugs on the line yesterday."

"Well?"

"Then I got my husband's midiron and told him to go out in the yard and practice a few golf swings on them."

A Popular Recreation.

"Where are you going, Sandy?" said one Scotchman to another.

"Doon to the club," said Sandy.

"And wha' foor?"

"Just to contradeect a wee bit."

Energetic Influence.

"Does your wife find politics interesting?"

"Not as interesting as she expects to make it before she gets through with it."

IS YOUR HAIR SLIPPING?

The presence of dandruff and falling hair conveys a warning which it is best to heed. At first the loss of hair may be so slight as to be hardly noticeable. But no matter how little may be the fall each day, it is working toward the same and inevitable result, and that is total baldness.

You may have hair enough today, but how about tomorrow and the day after? Dandruff and falling hair mean baldness sooner or later and demand the immediate regular and energetic use of Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the scalp free from dirt and dandruff and allows the hair to grow abundantly and naturally. By this means total incurable baldness may be prevented.

Herpicide does not stain or dye and has a most exquisite fragrance which makes it especially pleasing to the ladies. It stops itching almost instantly.

You may be told that there are remedies "just as good as Herpicide." You cannot afford to take chances with nor can you expect to obtain results from "an off-brand" article. Insist on having genuine Herpicide, the Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff.

You can get a sample of this delightful hair dressing and a booklet on the care of the hair by sending ten cents in silver or postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich. Try Herpicide once and you will never be without it.

Sold everywhere in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes and guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded.

Korniloff Threatens To Isolate Russian Capital

Head of Revolting Troops Proposes to Cut Off Railway Communication With Petrograd---Loyalist Troops Are Successful in First Clash of the Civil War--French Troops Take German Positions in the Champagne---British Repulse Attacks.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12.—Tsarkoe Selo, where the Czar formerly spent most of his time in his summer palace, may be the scene of the first big clash between General Korniloff's rebels and the Provisional Government troops. Word received here to-day said the revolting forces were advancing rapidly toward that point—twenty miles from the city—and that a clash was momenarily expected there.

Premier Kerensky and the Provisional Government won the first victory of the Civil War to-day. A thousand sharpshooters hurried from Petrograd, met the advance forces of General Korniloff's revolting troops at a point twenty-six miles from Petrograd, and stopped their advance. The prompt action by the Government and the indication of drastic measures to put down the revolt, coupled with the news of this initial achievement in checking the revolters, created new optimism in Petrograd. Great bodies of loyal Government troops are departing from the city almost hourly to oppose the rebels. Kerensky was quoted to-day as expressing the hope, despite the tightening of Korniloff's lines around the city, that there will be no wholesale bloodshed.

The encircling attempt of Korniloff rebels have reached Gatschina, nineteen miles from the city. The Don Cossacks are apparently aligned with General Korniloff. General Kaledin, head of this force, reported today to Premier Kerensky that the Provisional Government would do well to accept Korniloff's ultimatum requiring the surrender of Governmental powers, otherwise Petrograd would find itself isolated from Moscow by the cutting of all rail communications.

The Workmen and Soldiers' Council reported that the Kronstadt garrison had formally placed itself at the disposal of this body. Legal proceedings have been started against Korniloff, to brand him as a traitor to the Government. Korniloff released the Provisional Government Commissioner at his headquarters and he has arrived here.

Press reports received here to-day asserted that General Klembovsky, the newly named Commander-in-Chief of the Russian armies, has joined Korniloff in his revolt. Confirmation was unobtainable here. It was understood, however, that Klembovsky's formal institution into his new duties has been held up.

BRITISH REPULSE A HOT ENEMY ATTACK

German Assault East of Hargicourt Under Cover of a Heavy Barrage Was Checked by Rifle and Machine Gun Fire—British Make Successful Raids

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 12.—German troops this morning attacked the British trenches east of Hargicourt, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day from British Headquarters in France. The assault was launched under cover of a heavy barrage, but the advancing waves were met by rifle and machine gun fire and the Germans were repulsed.

The text of the British statement reads: Early this morning the enemy attacked our trenches east of Hargicourt, north of St. Quentin, under cover of a heavy barrage. His advancing infantry were received with rifle and machine gun fire and repulsed. We carried out successful raids last night northeast of Bullecourt and south of Lombartzyde. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy and a few prisoners were secured by us. Hostile artillery has been active during the night in the neighbourhood of Neuve Chapelle and in the Ypres sector.

French Take Foe's Trenches in Champagne

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 12.—French troops last night attacked the German trenches in the region of St. Souplet in the Champagne and succeeded in smashing first two German lines and entering the third positions. All the German troops garrisoning these trenches, the French War Office announced this afternoon ,were either killed or taken prisoner.

More Russian Generals Have Joined Korniloff

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, September 12.—General Denikine and Valuyoff, commanding the southwest and western fronts, respectively, have joined General Korniloff, according to an announcement in Petrograd newspapers given out by semi-official news agency. Major-General Bonchbruyovitch has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Russian army in succession to General Korniloff.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 12.—A despatch from Paris to Reuters Limited, announces that Paul Painleve, Minister of War, had failed to form a new Ministry and returned a mandate to President Poincare at 1 o'clock this morning. The President asked M. Painleve to continue his efforts, and the latter asked for time for reflection.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, September 12.—General Korniloff plans to place the head of the Dolgorouki family on the throne of Russia, according to reports received here to-day. One member of that family, Prince Dolgorouki, is now a voluntary exile with the former Czar at Tobolsk, and presumably it is this representative of the family which the revolting Russian General aspires to put into power. He is one of the greatest nobles in Russia.

Successful Air Attacks By British

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Further extensive bombing raids have been carried out by the British Naval Air Service on various objectives, chiefly in Belgium, in the course of which successful engagements were fought with hostile machines and German observers brought down.

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA MAY TRY FOR SEPARATE PEACE

In Their Reply to Pope Benedict's Peace Note Central Powers Are Expected to Angle For Separate Discussion With America

SERBIA'S POSITION

(By John H. Hearley, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

ROME, Sept. 12. — Germany and Austria may angle for a separate peace discussion with America in their reply to Pope Benedict's peace note. Vatican informants to-day said there was reason to believe that the German Government was speculating on how far the Allies would be guided by President Wilson, the spokesman of a nation which was not a party to the London compact, pledging no separate peace. Coupled with this came reports to-day that there was considerable agitation in Austria for a separate diplomatic discussion with President Wilson through some neutral agency. Possibly the Vatican might serve as an intermediary.

Premier Pasitsch, of Serbia, declared to the United Press to-day that his nation would make no formal protest over Pope Benedict's omission to specify the necessity for consideration of Serbia's rights. Private representations, however, will be made to the Vatican in this regard, he said.

WHO IS GOING TO WIN THIS WEEK?

The Newsboys Are Certainly Working Hard For the Prize

A number of newsboys have taken hold of the Examiner Competition and are doing excellent work in getting new customers. There will be a weekly prize of $1.00 to be paid to the boy who makes the greatest gain each week. Three or four new customers is a good week's work. Every boy or girl who desires to make some money after school hours in a good, clear-cut business proposition cannot do better than sell the evening Examiner.

Wastage 8273 Recruits 800

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—The Minister of Militia to-day issued a statement that the Canadian casualties during the period of severe fighting from August 16th to 31st, so far reported were 7,586. The discharges in the same period were 689, making a total wastage of 8,273. The recruits in that period were about eight hundred.

ANXIOUS ONLY FOR SALVATION OF RUSSIA KORNILOFF CLAIMS

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12.—In two masifestos published here, General Korniloff disclaims all personal ambitions but declares he is anxious only for the salvation of mighty Russia from its traditional foe, the German race. He swears to lead the nation by the road to victory, and asks the people to flock to the temple and pray to God to perform the miracle of saving the Fatherland. Korniloff places the blame for his rupture with the Government on Kerensky, whom he denounces for incapable government weakness and decision.

Two Peterboro' Men Officially Reported In The List of Wounded

Sapper Douglas MacDonald and Bombardier Stanley Hagerman in the Casualty List---Lieuts. Wilfrid Stratton and Romeyne Stevenson Are Home on Leave--To-day's General Military News.

WOUNDED.

GASSED.

Bomb. Stanley L. Hagerman, Artillery, 161 Hunter street, East.

SAPPER J. D. MacDONALD

An official message from Ottawa to Mr. H. S. MacDonald, Rubidge street states that Sapper James Douglas MacDonald, a Peterborough boy who enlisted with the Canadian Engineers, is reported admitted to No. 1 Casualty Clearing Station, on September 5th, suffering from gun shot wounds in the arm and buttock. Sapper MacDonald has been in France for a long period.

BOMBARDIER S. L. HAGERMAN

Mr. Alfred Hagerman, 161 Hunter streets, east, has received official word from Ottawa that his son, Bombardier Stanley L. Hagerman, Canadian Artillery, has been gassed and admitted to No. 1 Casualty Clearing Station on September 5th. Bombardier Hagerman enlisted here in the 33rd Battery. He is the third member of his family to be wounded. One brother, Pte. Will Hagerman who went overseas with the Princess Pats was wounded last year as was another brother, Sergt. Victor Hagerman, now with the Bombing School at Camp Borden and formerly with the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion. A fourth brother, Bombardier Alfred Hagerman went overseas with the 83rd Battery.

G.W.V.A. ORDER OF BUSINESS

The following order of business, drafted by the Dominion executive of the G.W.V.A., is recommended for adoption by all branches as being the most all-embracing and efficient: (1) Call to order by chairman. (2) At the word of the chairman all present shall stand with bowed heads in silence for one minute, in memory of and out of respect for our fallen comrades, and those who are still in the trenches. (3) Minutes of last general meeting. (4) Financial statement. (5) Correspondence. (6) Unfinished business. (7) Reports of committees. (8) Application for membership. (9) Notices of motions. (10) General business. (11) Election and voting. (12) Close with National Anthem. "God Save the King."

In the circular which was sent out from the office of the Dominion Executive it is further stated that the prime reason why all branches should adopt the same order of business is because uniformity of procedure ensures good order, and also facilities the transaction of business.

In the letter in this column last night from Sergt. Will Jones, of Apsley, reference was made to the death at the front of a son of Mrs. Coones. Through an error the name was printed Johnny Coones, instead of Tommy. The boys were twin brothers.

The convalescent soldiers in the vocational training classes of the Military Commission at Whitby have a secret. They are building a hydroplane.

The motor mechanic and carpenter shops join and the idea for the ambitious venture was no sooner suggested than all heads were together, and the machine will soon be launched.

The engine is already complete and the plans for the wood work are well under way. The motor mechanics class is proud of the engine, and the carpenters declare they are doing the engine-builders one better, while the instructors of both classes display perfect confidence in their students' ability to put the thing over.

Two well-known Peterborough boys who have been on active service overseas have returned on furlough, in the persons of Lieut. Wilfred Stratton, son of Ald. A. H. Stratton, and Lieut. Romeyn Stevenson, son of Lieut.-Col. A. Stevenson. Both boys have been on duty with the Royal Flying Corps. Lieut. Stratton, who returned yesterday afternoon, went overseas in January, 1915, with the Mechanical Transport, and after some service in France, trasferred to the Flying Corps. Lieut. Stevenson went to England as a subaltern with the 93rd Battalion, and went to France as an infantry lieutenant, seeing service at Courcelette and the Battle of the Somme. He afterwards transferred to the Flying Corps and qualified as a airman. Lieut. Stevenson is on a twenty days' furlough.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The selective committee appointed by Parliament to select one member of each local tribunal under the Military Service Act will hold its first session on September 24, when it is anticipated that Sir John M. Gibson will be elected chairman. In the meantime the members from the several Provinces are getting their lists ready, and it is not thought that it will take longer to confirm the appointments which the members will suggest.

The first proclamations under the Military Service Act are being issued this afternoon. They merely set forth the places where tribunals will sit, and do not name the exact locations in cities.

His Honour Judge Huycke has made his selections for the exemption tribunals in connection with the administration of the Military Service Act, and the list is given below. The tribunals will consist of two men in each case, the second member to be appointed by the Board of Selection named by the Dominion Parliament. Until the Selection Board makes its choice the full personnel of the tribunals will not be known.

Judge Huycke's nominees are as follows:

City of Peterborough.

No. 1—E. C. Huycke, Judge.

No. 10 —Hall's Bridge, Andrew J. Shearer.

There will be little fault found with the tribunals in Peterborough county if the members named by the Board of Selection equal in calibre those chosen by Judge Huycke.

His Honour, who will be on one of the tribunals in the city, has four sons in khaki. Mr. J. A. Aylmer, who will sit on the other local board, has been in the forefront in patriotic work in Peterborough, notably in connection with the Speakers' Patriotic League and the Patriotic Fund.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, ex-member of the Legislature, who forms one of the Centreville tribunals, has a son, Capt. Frank Bradburn, in France. He recently won the Military Cross for gallantry in action.

Lt.-Col. R. E. Birdsall, who will be a member of the Norwood tribunal, is widely known. His son, Major Everett Birdsall, who was badly wounded in France, is now in command of C Hospital unit at Kingston.

Mr. F. J. Squire who will form one of the Havelock tribunals, is a Justice of the Peace and Mr E. Hawthorne, who will sit on the Warsaw Board, is an official of the Peterborough Cheese Board, and ex-Reeve of Dummer.

County Police Magistrate Langley will preside at Lakefield, and Mr. J. H. Garbutt ,formerly president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, and ex-Warden of Peterborough county, will be one of the two men to make the momentous decisions in regard to the fate of the young men around Bridgenorth.

Mr. Andrew J. Shearer, a well known merchant at Hall's Bridge, is Judge Huycke's selection for the Hall's Bridge tribunal and Mr. David Campbell, ex-Reeve of Burleigh, is the choice at Apsley.

The Parliamentary selections will not be made known for some time yet.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE MODEL TRENCH AT THE EXHIBITION

NO ADMISSION CHARGE

No one who visits the Peterborough Exhibition on Friday and Saturday should fail to see the model trench and exhibit of war souvenirs which the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans are showing. This most interesting feature of the Exhibition will be found south of the main building, near the centre of the grounds, and every relative of Peterborough's soldiers overseas will want to take a trip through the trench.

As near as possible with the material at their disposal, the Veterans have built a model of a front line trench in France. In front there is a bristling entanglement of barb wire. The trench itself contains two bays and two dugouts. It is protected by a parapet of sandbags and earth and is equipped with snipers' loop-holes and machine gun emplacements. On Friday afternoon and night the trench will be manned by war veterans in full uniform and with full equipment who will show visitors all points of interest in connection with the exhibit and explain the different features of the trench to them. The veterans will live in the trenches during the exhibition, and will cook their rations there in their mess tins as they used to do in France.

The exhibit is a credit to the G. W. V. A., and has meant many hours of hard work on their part. Don't fail to see the trench and souvenirs. There is absolutely no charge for admission and the public is cordially invited to visit the War Veterans.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1917

THE EXHIBITION.

The opening of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, with excellent prospects of success, is a tribute to the public spirit and enterprise of a few live citizens in city and country, who are behind it. In these different times, in the face of discouragement, they have persisted and kept the ball rolling—the Exhibition moving. Their praiseworthy obstinacy in well-doing, their solicitude for the interests the Exhibition represents and for the credit of the city and country are a lesson to the rest of our citizenship to give the Exhibition cordial support.

In itself, the Exhibition this year, has many features of interest and attractiveness, superior to those of other years; and it is incumbent upon, especially our merchants and business men to give the Exhibition their patronage and support.

It is the co-operation and team work of the business men of Toronto that have made the Canadian National Exhibition, the greatest of its kind on this continent, as an annual event, that attracts nearly a million visitors a year. What this exhibition means to the country, and especially to the city of Toronto, is the culmination of years of splendid co-operative effort; and what has been done in Toronto, can, and should, in proportionate measure, be done in respect of our local exhibition in relation to the surrounding district and the City of Peterborough.

The National Exhibition had small beginnings, but the persistence and public spirit of its managers, with the co-operation of the community, have brought about the great results we witness every year.

An exhibition like ours not only helps stimulate the agricultural, dairying and industrial interests, but it has a social influence that makes for unity of sentiment, the starting point of unity of endeavour. On its grounds the people of the country have an opportunity for social encounter with themselves, separated by the activities of the year, and with the visitors from the city—practical promotion of the spirit of "la bonne entente" which must exist and persist in a community, if we are to gain the united and harmonious citizenship essential to the best community and national accomplishment.

Our merchants and business men should not only give their material and personal help to the success of the exhibition, but they should visit it often. They will meet their customers from all over the country; and personal, social contact and intercourse will strengthen the bonds formed by business dealings in the past, and unite both to each other for the future. The more we get together—country and city people, the better we get to know each other, the greater the mutual esteem and the greater the possibility of co-operation to the mutual advantage of the social and material interest of both.

The Exhibition presents an admirable opportunity for the cultivation and promotion of "la bonne entente"—better understanding and spirit of co-operation for mutual advantage.

We should have nicer weather for the exhibition if it were not for the wind, and that would be warmer if we could get a local concentration of Ottawa "hot air."

THE AVERAGE CITIZEN.

The average citizen is satisfied to let well enough alone. He doesn't welcome change. He accepts conditions as he finds them, and so continues. The man who discovered America was not an ordinary citizen, neither is the man who invented the telephone or found some new use for electricity, an average citizen. Too many of us are of the opinion—

"We hold it true we will not change,
For changes are a dreadful bore,
There's nothing to be done on earth,
Unless it has been done before."

And yet how often when a change is manifested, a new piece of machinery, some labour saving device, we wonder why someone didn't discover it before, or how we succeeded at all without the new invention. And so with the roads of the country. Nearly everybody condemns the Pathmaster Statute Labour System, and still we stick to it. Other Counties have improved roads and assistance in building them.

We have confidence in the members of our County Council; we believe that they will be the leaders; that they will institute a system of road building which will make for improvement. Let them for once do something in connection with our roads different from what has been done.

We believe that the average citizen understands the many advantages which follow a systematic road building campaign.

The advantages to a county from the adoption of a County Highway System, will, we are sure, be appreciated by the average citizen, and user of highways. The advantage of adopting a system under which out of every five dollars spent on county high ways, two will be contributed by the province, not to speak of the improved roads resulting, will appeal to the average ratepayer, and enlist him in support of our county council adopting a county highway system, joining the thirty-four progressive County Road counties and leaving the three slow-going counties of the province lagging behind.

Successful food conservation on the lines of saving and thrift, cannot be the most effective without the hearty cooperation of the women of the country.

HEALTH AS A NATIONAL ASSET

What we are fighting for does not seem clear to everybody. Broadly speaking we are fighting that the world may be freed from the menace and oppression of militarism; that the people of all lands may be free and enjoy the benefits that go with such freedom. In a word, every combatant country is fighting, no matter where, for itself, for its people, and in effect for part of its people.

This is a war of sacrifice. We are sacrificing many things for the sake of success—for others as well as ourselves. But not exactly for ourselves. We are making the world, and our own country safe for ourselves and those that come after us in the world of action.

As for ourselves, millions of us are approaching the end of ourselves; we shall not long live to enjoy the benefits we shall win by success; the benefits in bulk will come to our children, now living, but now too young to take a part or appreciate the tremendous issues that are shaping their future lives and assuring, under Providence, their happiness.

With all our duty in respect of war work, there is another duty we owe to our fellow citizens, and our children. Neither will be at their best or capable of the fullest enjoyment, and greatest usefulness to society and the state—and to themselves and theirs—without sound health. This fact involves a duty go ourselves, our fellow-citizens and our children. We are confronting problems of readjustment preceding, and after, the war. One of the most important of these is the improvement of the national health.

We are teaching, and calling upon, our school children for the duty of patriotic cooperation, and they have nobly responded, but we want to go further and introduce compulsory and thorough health education in our schools. We might drop out many of the comparatively "fancy" subjects, and substitute one of the most important.

How important this education is, is easily shown by facts. By neglect of it and of accompanying precautions, we have a population defective in health conditions, if not diseased. In the beginning of recruiting in Canada, more than fifty per cent. of the volunteers was rejected on account of physical defects, that might have been rejected, that might have been prevented by systematic instruction in and practice of health requirein school and later life. In the United States out of about thirteen hundred thousand men who volunteered, sixty-six per cent. were rejected as physically unfit, and it is probable that half of the ten million men in the United States, between twenty-one and thirty-one, will when drafted, be found unfit for service.

These conditions cannot be remedied now, but provision can be made to the end that the rising and future generation should not be subjected to the wholesale disablement that virtually paralyses half of our people from helping in the great crisis of the world, and unfits millions from adequately enjoying the benefits the other half is fighting to win.

The war has many lessons for us, and the most important is that of providing for better public and national health, teaching the people from the beginning to avoid disease or diseased and disabling conditions. In view of helping this work, the strictest civic attention to public sanitation is demanded; the liberal support of such organizations as "The Peterborough Health Association in the interest of the present affected; and the dissemination of large knowledge of sanitary requirements. The faithful teaching of sanitation in our schools becomes a duty secondary in point of importance to the immediate and urgent duty of binding every energy and the employment of every resource, individual and governments to the present duty of winning the war.

Active preparations for "mobilizing" conscription, are reported.

A GREAT CANADIAN NATIONAL HIGHWAY

We have for some time past been urging the building of a national highway across Canada, and we are pleased to note that our efforts are encouraged by many of our contemporaries. The special reasons we give why such a trans-continental road should be built are: First, it would find employment for our returned soldiers at a time when our industries will be dislocated and consequently the communities not able to assimilate three or four hundred thousand men. Second, it would be another practical link between one municipality and another, and one province and another. Third, it would create a tourist traffic that cannot help but be a boom to those municipalities through which the road would pass. Fourth, it would tap many of our natural resources that now lie dormant, but waiting to be developed. Fifth, it would be the best incentive to those parts of the Dominion, where a road is only a name. The Sixth, though not the last reason; for we could give many more, is that such a highway would be the best monument that the people of Canada could build in memory of those splendid sons who have given up their lives in her cause on the fields of Flanders. Such a road would be a real peace monument. The mile stones would bear witness to many thousands who came after us that Canada had done her duty at this time of democracy's trial.

But such a national road would cost money. Our experts consider that it would take 3,500 miles of new road to link up the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans, and would cost, in round figures $75,000,000. A huge sum, but none too large for such a purpose.

We have already suggested that the cost be divided into four parts, and borne by the Federal authorities; the Provincial authorities; those municipalities through which the road would pass; and by public subscriptions in the following proportions—one-half by Federal money, one-quarter by the Provinces and the municipalities, and one-quarter by public subscription. The whole of the work to be under a commission, made up principally of engineers, who should have the absolute control of the route and the manner in which the road should be built—materials, etc.—with one exception and that is that the whole of the work be done by returned soldiers under military discipline, but civilian pay.

This is a great task that we suggest to the people of Canada, and one that some might think inopportune at this time, when every dollar is required to finish the war, but we believe that we would be remiss in our duty, if we failed to remind our fellow citizens that there is the aftermath. One thing is certain, the larger part of our present industries, which are munitions, will stop. And what then? Tens of thousands of family bread-winners will be thrown out of employment, and surely it would be suicidal to increase this large army of out-of-works by another larger army of out-of-works, which would really be a fact if the returned soldiers are disbanded on their arrival in Canada. What then can we do with the returned soldiers to whom we as a nation are under special moral obligation One of the answers to our mind is to put the men in the building of such a national road as we have urged, and thus use them in a great work at once healthy and profitable to themselves and the nation.—Municipal Journal.

Construction Of Princess Street Sewer Indefinitely Postponed

City Engineer Parsons Reports His Inability to Secure Men For the Work—Ald. Langford Moves For a Six Months' Hoist—Meeting of the Board of Works.

The construction of the Princess street sewer has been postponed for an indefinite period. This action was decided upon last evening by the Board of Works Committee of the City Council following the reading of a report from City Engineer Parsons to the effect that he was unable to secure sufficient men for the work. Ald. Langford moved that the work be given a six months' hoist. A resolution moved by Ald. Worth and seconded by Ald. Dobbin that the work be left over was adopted by the Committee.

STREET RESERVATION

The De Laval Company, Limited desire to close a street reservation on the north side of their factory in order to facilitate the extension of the Company's storage capacity. Ald. Dobbin thought the case would be met by leasing to the Company that portion of the street occupied by the Company's sheds. The matter will be left with a committee, comprising Ald. McIntyre, Ald Weir and Ald. Dobbin with instructions to report back. The Fire Underwriters have instructed the Company to install a sprinkler system in the building and cover it with sheet metal. This will cost in the neighborhood of $7,500. The Company does not desire to undertake this work without some assurance that the city will not interfere with the Company's temporary use of the street reserve.

STREET CAR EXTENSION

A letter was received from Mr. Bruce Johnston, township clerk, of North Monaghan, holding the city responsible for the bad condition of the Monaghan Road, along the line of the proposed street railway extension. The work of extending the car line is suspended, pending the arrival of more material. The railway company will be notified to look after that section of the street traversed by the car line and the City will repair the remaining portion of the road in conjunction with the township authorities.

SIDEWALK TOO HIGH.

Mr. Brisbois, property owner on the south side of James street, appeared before the Board to protest against the action of the city in constructing a stone sidewalk higher than the property. Mr. Brisbois suggested that the city attain a part of his property to compensate him for the damage incurred. The Board of Works Committee will visit the property and report on the matter.

DITCHES TOO LOW.

Sophia street ratepayers want the ditches on each side of the street filled in. The Committee will look into the matter; also a similar condition on Burnham street in front of Mr. Wand's residence.

TREES REMOVED.

City Engineer Parsons reported that Mr. Robert Harrison, 569 Water street was given permission to remove a badly damaged tree in front of his property.

Mr. Christopher, 319 Margaret avenue was granted permission to remove two objectionable trees in front of his property.

OIL WANTED.

Ald. McIntyre wanted some oil for Water street, north of the Auburn dam. On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Langford a supply of oil was voted for this portion of the Water street thoroughfare.

JITNEY SERVICE.

It was again moved by Ald. Smith and adopted by the Board that the Hydro Power Commission be communicated with a view of securing a jitney service for East City to operate in conjunction with the street car service.

WANT SIDING REMOVED

The Quaker Oats Company will be asked to move their siding on Driscoll Terrace according to plans prepared by City Engineer Parsons.

STREET REPAIRS.

City Engneer Parsons reported on the condition of Stewart street, north of McDonnel street and the repairs needed. The matter will be allowed to stand until the state of the appropriation is investigated.

REPAIRS WILL BE MADE

Ald. Taylor reported that the water lodges on Bolivar street near the residence of Mr. Pilling. The City Engineer was asked to see that the necessary repairs are made.

WILL ERECT POLES.

Permission was granted to the Bell Telephone Company to erect four poles on the north side of Sophia street.

APPROACH WANTED.

Mr. William Waugh's request for an aproach to his property at 556 Homewood avenue was left with the City Engineer with power to act.

An approach to the property of Mr. Succee at 130 Dufferin street will also be looked into by the Engineer.

SOME THOUGHTS ON READING

A library has been likened by more than one writer to a cemetery, wherein lie buried in hopeless oblivion the labours of countless thousands of the thinking men and women of past centuries. And there really is something very saddening in the thought that from the output of the world's best writers so small a modicum survives the storm and stress of time. We may glance along the shelves of any library and find the same tale unfolded, that what the great public yearns for is not the wisdom of ancient or modern philosophers, not the researches of travellers or scientists, but the works of present-day writers of fiction. No amount of suasion will turn people from their quest wittingly or otherwise, they refuse to grasp the salient fact that they can find in other branches of literature reading matter that is quite as interesting, quite as entertaining, and ten times more helpful than the best novel that was ever penned. The reason for this lamentable state of affairs is, of course, easy to explain. If there is one thing more than another that men and women are interested in, it is the doings of their neighbours. Fiction provides a mental dramatization of human character, and for this reason more than for any other, readers clamour for it.

The inhabitants of this city are probably just as good as the inhabitants of any other city, possessed of just as high ideals and capable of climbing to as lofty heights of intellectual culture but something certainly needs to be done to show them the folly of spending so much time in the reading of ephemeral literature. How such a feat is to be accomplished it would be hard to determine, but when one can point with unerring finger at the cause surely the better nature of those with whom the remedy lies, should provide the cure. For adults the cure lies with themselves, for children the cure lies with the parents.

Putting on one side the needs of tired workers, of which class Peterborough has assuredly its fair quantum, there are hundreds of others, with no claim to be placed in the same category, who indulge in fiction to the utter exclusion of any other form of reading. They never dream of engaging in anything else, and would laugh to scorn the statement that there is no surer method of reducing the brain to a yellow condition than persistence in such a course. I have been writing heretofore of adults but a word or two is needed in regard to those of tender years.

Many of the boys and girls who come to our library carry away with them books that cannot but be helpful to them in the acquisition of knowledge. The percentage of those who systematically indulge in nothing but fiction is small. The Public Library is undoubtedly the place for the young and the more they throng to it the better the library authorities are pleased. The pity lies in the fact that so many others who might embrace the opportunity of using its privileges do not take advantage of it. The reason for this is also not far to seek. It lies in the criminal neglect of the parents, who seem to think they have done all that parental duty calls for in seeing that their children go regularly to school. As to their obligations with respect to proper home training they have no regard whatever, and the result is seen in the throngs of young girls and boys who perambulate the streets at night, or loiter round the doors of the moving picture theatres waiting for some kindly disposed person to hand in their fares for them. The schools are doing all that they can to turn the thoughts of children in the right direction, but they cannot perform miracles. Teachers cannot exercise supervision over their pupils after school hours. This is entirely within the province of the parents, and, unfortunately, there are very many who seem totally unmindful of the sacred obligation that rests upon them.

A few words more in regard to the reading of fiction and this article will close. Nobody but a fool would contend that the reading of novels is altogether harmful. On the contrary, the reading of good fiction is a very excellent thing. It informs the mind, and tends to inculcate good manners. But the reading of fiction to the exclusion of every other form of literature is to be absolutely condemned. Philosophy, Biography, History, Travel, Literature, the Fine Arts, Useful Arts, Natural Science, these are the studies that broaden the mind and strengthen it; these are the rotations of crops that produce fruitful harvests. For it is much the same with human brains as with the fields. We all know that a constant succession of wheat or barley or oat crops impoverishes the most fertile lands. Surely he or she is a wise man or woman who applies the same methods to the mind as the sensible farmer does to his fields.—F.M.D.

Typewriter Bill Allowed To Stand Over

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—Somewhat of a mix-up was created by Crown Attorney Hatton of the County of Peterborough, when he ordered a second hand machine from the United Typewriter Co. and sent the bill to the City of Peterborough.

The United Typewriter Co., in Judge Winchester's court, to-day sued the city which refused to pay for the sum of $200.00, the cost of the typewriter and accessories. Judge Winchester allowed the matter to stand over.

Tancrede Marsil Is Beaten Up

Anti-Conscription Orator is Assaulted by Two Soldiers and a Civilian He Says

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, P.Q., Sept. 12.—That he was set upon by two soldiers and a civilian last night and beaten into insensibility was the charge made this morning by Tancrede Marsil, the anti-conscriptionist orator who was being cared for at the General Hospital. Marsil was taken to the hospital about three o'clock this morning, the hospital records show, and was badly scratched and bruised and unconscious. He stated this morning that he had been visiting the home of a friend near Fletcher's Field and had left about midnight, when a short distance from the house he said he was accosted by two soldiers and a civilian, and one of the trio asked him if he was Tancrede Marsil. On his replying in the affirmative he says one of the soldiers hit him on the back of the head and the others closed in on him. He fought them until he lost consciousness. A passerby saw him and summoned the police who sent him to the hospital. His face and body bear many scratches and bruises, and his clothes are badly cut up, evidently from some sharp instrument. He was able to go to his home this morning.

Press On Newest Michaelis Defence

EMPHASIZES THE REAL TRUTH

Bridgeport Post:—"The effort of Chancellor Michaelis is in accord with others of his ilk, and the only value in the statement is that it emphasises the real truth about the beginning of the war and clearly shows that Berlin recognises that truth by the continued effort to supply lies to take its place."

ALWAYS WEAKEN THEIR CASE

Springfield Republican:—"German's apologists, indeed, have always weakened their case by trying to prove too much. In attacking Russia they cannot forego attacking France and Great Britain, too, though this undermines their ground."

A NEW VARIATION.

Philadelphia Public Ledger:—"Anybody or everybody is to blame but Germany. Dr. Michaelis gives us a new variation on this familiar theme when the transfers to Russia the responsibility for beginning the war which Germany has hitherto laid upon England."

IS A GOOD SIGN.

New York Globe:—"It is a good sign that the new German Chancellor Dr. Michaelis, labours to rid Germany of blame for the war. Good because of the evidence afforded that he understands to what extent the blood guilt of his country bars the way to peace with his government."

8000 Captured Says Berlin

Canadian Press Despatch:

BERLIN, Sept. 12.— A War Office statement says eight thousand Russian prisoners and 325 guns were taken by the Germans in and about Riga.

Was Well Known In Peterborough

Private Henry Lorne McFadyen of an Ontario battalion, has been given a Distinguished Conduct Medal for splendid devotion to duty while acting as stretcher-bearer. When the raiders withdrew several wounded men had to be left behind in a shell hole, close to the enemy's line. McFadyen remained with them for two days and a night, using his clothing to bind their wounds up and make them more comfortable, and eventually brought all the wounded men back into the allies' line.

Private McFadyen is well known in Peterborough, having attended the 1913-14 session of the Normal School here. His home is near Lindsay.

A SENSATIONAL FEATURE ACT FOR THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

The Wonderful Aerial Howards, Who Will Give Their Thrilling High Wire Bicycle and Trapeze Act at Peterborough's Big Fair

The Amusement committee of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition have been fortunate in closing a contract that will ensure the presence here of the Aerial Howards, a wonderful pair whose performance will surpass anything shown at any of the fall fairs. The Howards are at home in the air, the higher the better, and at the Peterborough Exhibition they will perform thrilling feats in mid-air at a height of seveny-five feet. The Howards have thrilled crowds all over the continent and they come to Peterborough direct from Cincinnati, and return immediately after the Exhibition to New York so that their local appearance is their only engagement in Canada. To say that the Howards are high wire artists by no means conveys the real idea, for they perform seemingly impossible feats. The lady rides across the wire on a bicycle, and hanging down from it is a trapeze bar, upon which Mr. Howard does acrobatic feats. This mid-air bit of graceful reckiessness has to be seen to be appreciated.

HOLLAND WILL NOT ALLOW BELLIGERENTS TO USE SCHELDT

Amsterdam, September 11. — The Dutch Foreign Ministry denies categorically reports that Holland is being pressed by Germany for permission for submarines to use the River Scheldt. The Ministry adds that Holland under no consideration will allow the Scheldt to be used for naval purposes by any belligerent.

FLOUR MAY DROP $3 BARREL IN U. S.

Washington, September 12.—Grain elevators began operating yesterday under license restrictions prescribed by the food administration. None will be allowed to store wheat or rye for more than thirty days, and each elevator is required to make weekly reports of its transactions.

Flour mills will be put under a licensing system within a few days. They will be restricted to a maximum profit of 25c a barrel on flour and cannot make future sales more than 30 days in advance. The mills also will be required to hold their grain accumulations to a 30-days' supply.

As soon as the new wheat crop begins to move through the mills, flour prices to the householders should drop at least $3 a barrel, which would represent a total saving to the public of more than $30,000,000 a month.

BODY OF U-BOAT OFFICER IS WASHED ASHORE

Copenhagen, September 11.—The body of Lieut. von Gimts, the commander of a German submarine boat belonging to the Flanders submarine flotilla, has been washed ashore on the north-west coast of Denmark. The body of two aviators, one British and one German, also have been brought up by the tide.

AMERICAN AMBULANCES FOR RUSSIAN ARMIES

Washington, September 11.—A gift of 125 motor ambulances and automobiles to Russia is announced by the American Red Cross. The shipment will go forward immediately, consigned to the Red Cross Mission sent to Russia two months ago under Dr. Frank Billings. Already nearly half a million dollars' worth of medical and surgical supplies have been sent.

"Ambulances are needed with the Russian armies almost more than any other form of relief," said the announcement. "On the eastern front there are only 6,000 vehicles for the transportation of the wounded."

We're Lost, Says German Officer

Wouldn't Believe In Aid From U. S. Until He Saw Pershing

PARIS, Sept. 12.—"It's a pity that so much blood has been shed in vain."

A German officer, taken prisoner in the recent French advance north of Verdun, is thus quoted by the Echo de la Rochelle and a staff officer who interrogated the German is given as authority for the interview. The German rendered homage to the heroic courage of the French soldiers but tried to discourage the idea that help would be forthcoming from the United States.

"Why delude yourselves with chimerical hopes and thus prolong the murderous struggle?" he went on. "You expect irresistible aid from the United States. They promise it, but they will never give it. We know perfectly in Germany what to expect, as to the intentions of President Wilson. He is playing with you; he will temporize without ever going wholeheartedly into the conflict.

"When you are helplessly beaten he will be the arbiter of the situation and will impose a peace that will be advantageous to no one but the United States of America. He will never compromise the Stars and Stripes in an adventure on your front."

French officers vainly informed the prisoner that thousands of American soldiers have landed in France and England and had marched through the streets of Paris and London, that a division of American troops was preparing for service at the front; that other contingents, more important, would arrive before the end of the year and that the United States was arming millions of men.

"Those are only adroit manoeuvres designed to keep up the spirits of the combatants," replied the prisoner.

The French officer then said. "We will convince you; you shall be conducted before General Pershing, the commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces in France, now here on the Verdun front. You can question him yourself and you will learn whether it is the German people or us who are being deceived by those by govern."

When the escort came to conduct the prisoner before General Pershing big tears rolled down his cheeks and he remarked sadly:

"Since that is the case it is all over. We are lost."

Russian Women Fighters Are Now in Revolt

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(B, William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12.—(Delayed)—The Petrograd division of the Women's Legion of Death was "revolting" to-day. Pledged to die in defense of the democracy and with their bravery already proved on the battlefield, the women fighters of the capital are up in arms against their commander-in-chief, Madame Butchkoreva, because "she is too rough." That was the explanation of Mme. Butchkoreva's departure for Moscow yesterday. One girl explained she and her associates in the battalion felt Mme. Butchkoreva's disciplinary methods were wrong.

"How does she maintain discipline?" I asked.

"Thus," she replied——

No further explanation was obtainable to-day, but the members of the Petrograd division all stated that the disagreement between themselves and the commander was irreconciliable. They were unanimous in admiration of Mme. Butchkoreva's personal bravery, declaring she had shown repeatedly that she disdained death. Mme. Butchkoreva left yesterday for Moscow with the avoyed intention of raising another unit of her troops there. She said there were 250 recruits there, and in leaving took a number of Petrograd girls with her as the nucleus for a new woman's fighting unit.

Harold Harper At Gospel Hall

Last night the meeting at Gospel Hall was still more cheery than before. For twenty minutes the audience sang lustily the soul inspiring hymns.

Mr. Harper spoke an old theme "Naaman the Syrian" of Bible fame, but although old it was made modern and up-to-date in every detail. Naaman was a great man, but a Leper, so no matter how cultured, high-bred or refined a man is unless cleansed from his defilement by the precious blood of Jesus Christ, he is still a moral Leper in the sight of a Holy God. The speaker then referred to four mistakes Naaman made. He came to the King—the wrong person. He brought money—the wrong price. He turned away in a rage—the wrong way. Just so, many to-day try to get to Heaven through their creed, or bring along their good works or financial standing, but, said Mr. Harper, God won't accept anything for His free gift. All must come to God on the same level, ladies as well as paupers; rich as well as poor, all have sinned, come short. So judgement is passed upon all but Naaman came to repentence, or, a change of mind, and fortunately for him took God's way, and so every man woman or child will have practically the same experience, prior to the reception of God's perfect cleansing, and as a result happiness, joy and peace fills the soul of every one who in simple faith takes Jesus Christ as Saviour.

To-night Mr. Harper will speak again, taking as his subject "A Royal Invitation."

Mr. Mulligan and Mr. Harper will sing a duet, "O Word of Words." Song service sharp at 8 o'clock.

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12. — Premier Kerensky will assume the position of Commander-in-Chief of all Russian armies until the Korniloff revolt is crushed.

Vice-President Nekrasoff, in an interview to-day, says the political situation is entirely favourable to the Government.

THE CITY WILL CONTINUE IN THE COAL BUSINESS

At a Joint Meeting of Coal Dealers and the Fire, Water and Light Committee Held Last Evening It Was Decided to Secure More Coal For Distribution by the City—Price May Be Higher.

A joint meeting of the coal dealers of the city and the Fire Water and Light committee of the City Council met last evening to consider the city's coal supply.

The city, through the medium of the municipal coal yard, has distributed ten cars of coal at ten dollars a ton. The object of calling the meeting was to determine whether the consumers' interests could safely be left in the hands of the dealers. The city is not anxious to continue in the coal business longer than is necessary to offset a possible coal shortage.

Mayor Duffus said that several people had reported their inability to secure coal from some of the dealers.

Orders Refused.

Mr. Hicks, one of the coal dealers, said that the company which he represented had not refused an order for coal up until 5 o'clock Monday night. Stove coal was getting hard to get. Mr. Taylor, another of the coal dealers, said that his company had been refusing further orders for some time.

Mr. Hicks did not think that the city's prices for coal were too high.

It was intimated by Mayor Duffus that the city would not be in a position to continue to sell coal at ten dollars a ton under present conditions. The Mayor also made it clear that the city had no intention of depriving the coal dealers of legitimate profits or continuing in the coal business longer than is necessary to avoid a shortage.

Mr. Hicks cited a number of cases where citizens had been storing coal in excess of their demands.

Favoured Storage.

Mr. William Scott was quoted by Ald. Weir as being favourable to the municipal coal scheme, providing the coal was stored for future delivery, when the situation will be more acute, rather than distribute it now for the benefit of those who want to store it in their cellars.

Ald. Dobbin said an attempt had been made to confine the city's business to municipal needs and the small consumer who is compelled to purchase coal as required.

Mr. Hicks said that his firm was supplying five hundred lots of coal at $2.75, or eleven dollars a ton. "We cannot continue to sell small lots at that price," said Mr. Hicks.

"We can't either," said the Mayor.

Mr. Hicks thought it would be good business for the city to secure a supply of coal and store it for winter distribution. Mr. Hicks did not hold out much hope for the wood situation. "There will be wood for a few months. We have less this year than we had last year," said Mr. Hicks.

Will Store Coal.

In conclusion it was moved and seconded that ten more cars of coal be secured at once. This was carried. Nut coal is in greater demand than stove coal.

Ald. Dobbin admitted that the soldiers' wives and depende ts were setting aside funds with which to secure a supply of coal.

The matter of obtaining an additional supply of coal bags was introduced by Ald. Dobbin. Mayor Duffus shortened the meeting by moving that the matter be left in the hands of Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the committee. This was adopted.

FIFTH LINE OF DEFENCE FOUND IN THE KITCHEN

"Danger of Present Crisis is That We Are An Undisciplined People" Rev. J. R. Patterson Tells His Audience in Course of a Splendid Address.

To learn to "save and serve" brought a fair-sized and representative audience to the Collegiate Institute Hall, last night, to hear Rev. J. R. Patterson, who, since the Conservation of Resources Committee was formed, two years ago, has kept in close touch with the food question in Canada.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who occupied the chair, opened the meeting with a resume of the formation of the Women's Auxiliary of the Conservation of Resources Committee. The latter, he said, was formed by equal representatives from both sides of the House, two years ago, and since then has been helping to conserve the resources realizing the necessity of food conservation on account of the threatened shortage. The Committee realized that no decisive steps in conservation could be made without the women, who have taken an active and intelligent interest in the work, and for that reason the Auxiliary was formed at a meeting held in Toronto, at which the women organized for the purpose, carrying to all the necessity of conserving food.

Rev. J. R. Patterson.

Mr. Gillespie introduced Rev. J. R. Patterson, Toronto, who, he said, was a man of military spirit, having been for some months a Chaplain in the 83rd Battalion and having all his male relatives either in khaki or dead on the field of honour.

Mr. Patterson expressed his pleasure at speaking in Peterborough, though he felt some trepidation at giving advice to the ladies on cooking. However, he said the latter was not his object, but to ask the women of the country to do their best. Some have done so, but the danger lies in the fact we are a haughty people, with the Scottish habit of "gang our ain gate."

First Lines of Defence.

"There are," said Mr. Patterson, "five definite lines of defence in the present war. First, the man who carries the gun, digs the trench, and bears the danger in battle; second, the man who mans the navy. If the enemy clear the sea we're done. This fact was brought home with the submarine warfare. Third, the worker in the factory. This class is not devoted entirely to men, but to the women, who, too, have helped in munitions, manufacturing khaki cloth, and taken the place of their brothers to stimulate the production and war material. Fourth, the producer of food and tiller of the land. The submarine warfare has stimulated the cultivation of the land before which we would go hungry seemed ridiculous. Fifth, and most important at the present crisis is the line of defence found in the kitchen. We give all honour to the man at the front, the munition worker, etc., but the one who is to decide the issue of the war is the "kitchen lady," and if she fails us we are done.

Undisciplined People.

The danger of the crisis comes in the fact that we are undisciplined and unused to sacrifice. The Germans can "put it over us" because they are trained to, and willing to sacrifice, themselves, for the Fatherland from their earliest childhood. The greatest glory to the German is the service to his country, his religion, service to state and the ambition of life to put Germany over everything. We are not a sacrificing people; we have never been called upon to sacrifice until it hurts. We are too far from the actual warfare; discipline had not reached until it was forced upon the man between 20 and 30 years of age, who has to rise to discipline now.

Sacrifice Brought to Kitchen.

The great question now is, can we rise to the German standard of discipline and sacrifice, and bring it home to the housewife. To order sacrifice and saving in the home is despaired of; the only way to reach the women is to appeal to their intelligence. No terror so far has daunted the man at the front. Poisonous gasses, machine guns, treacherous dealing, have left no impression upon them, but the terror of an empty stomach is all consuming.

Three Visions.

Three visions will bear the need of saving to the public of Peterborough. The boys at the front, whose lives are thrown away, if we do not cooperate. The shores of England, where wistful eyes are cast in the direction of the United States and Canada. Russia has failed England; Holland appears treacherous, and Australia is far off. England looks to us for food.

The third vision is from the Board of Trade building in Toronto, from which normal conditions appear to prevail; where the spirit of "if we can pay for bacon, beef and wheat, why can't we have it?" is uppermost. "There is a great reason," said Mr. Patterson, "why we can't — because it is needed in England." Buying those products keeps up the prices, and the burden falls upon the poor. We must educate and discipline ourselves to vary our diet and eat perishable foods to give to the soldiers food enough to carry on the campaign.

Pertinent Questions.

At the close of Mr. Patterson's speech some pertinent questions were asked as to the reason of the sale of cream when cheese is to be conserved, and why corn meal cannot be placed upon the free list coming from the United States as a substitute for flour.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, in the matter of ice cream, said that the public, perhaps, did not realize the food value of that product, which contains a large percentage of nourishment.

German Losses Heavy At Lens

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philips Simms, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 12. — Seeking some palliation at home for their losses around Lens, the German staff sent out wireless despatches to-day claiming the British losses around Lens have been more than the actual total of men engaged there. The German staff estimated dead, wounded and missing in Lens operations at 200,000.

Actually it is certain the German casualties have been more than double those of the British around the French coal metropolis. In the cleaning up of a battle field there recently, I saw fifteen dead Germans around one lone Canadian.

FIGHTING PARSON GETTING STRANGLE HOLD ON LIQUOR

Commuters Approached by Mr. Taylor Sign Petition for Ballot on Sale Question.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 12. — Slowly but surely out here the Rev. Charles F. Taylor, known as the "Fighting Parson," is getting a strangle hold upon drink. Its eyes are rolling and it is going fast.

The parson is just becoming warmed up to his work. Monday morning he approached many New York commuters at the station, thrust a fountain pen into their several hands and looked them sternly in the eye. Underneath his morality hypnotic spell they signed away their inalienable right and privilege to take a drop o' comfort on these approaching cold days.

What they signed was a petition for a ballot on the question of the sale of intoxicating liquors to be acted upon in the annual election in October. The parson had obtain d three hundred names, and as he ne ded one hundred more he decided to meet the train and get them. He had 529 names when he got through.

Ringworm On Child's Head

Grand Bend, Ont., Sept. 12.—There is no disease of the skin more obstinate than ringworm, and the mother who writes this letter does so fully realizing what it will mean to other anxious mothers to know about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This remarkable cure was brought about two years ago, and as there has been no return of the distressing disease there can be no doubt that the cure is permanent.

Mrs. D. Stebbins, Grand Bend, Ont., writes: "I am going to tell you of my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment. My little girl had sores come out on her head which looked like ringworms. They were spreading fast, and I tried home treatment, but nothing helped her. I took her to the doctor, and he opened some of the sores, which were as big as the yoke of an egg. The salve he gave me to put on was very severe, and the poor child would cry for an hour or more after an application. For six weeks it continued to spread all over her head and came down to her neck and ears. She suffered terribly. At last some kind ladies told me about Dr. Chase's Ointment, so I got a box, and the first time I put it on she was relieved of pain, and the second time the swelling was all gone. Before we had finished the first box the sores were nearly all gone. I have told all the people around here about your Ointment, and I cannot praise it too much. It is now two years since my little girl was troubled in this way, and it never came back, so you can see she is completely cured. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of others who may be suffering in a similar manner."

Joseph Brenner, J.P., endorses this statement, as follows: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mrs. D. Stebbins of Grand Bend, Ont., and believe her statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct."

Three Resignations Were Accepted

Meeting of the Children's Aid Society—Tag Day September 29th

At a meeting of the Children's Aid Society yesterday afternoon, at which there were present Messrs. E. A. Peck, President, Mr. C. H. Pennyfather, Rev. Father Phelan Adjutant McElhiney, Messrs. Wearing and Powell, and Chief Howard and Meadames Henwood Gibbs Sanderson and Stocker, the resignations of Mr. E. L. Goodwill, former secretary, Chief Howard, chairman of the Finance committee and Mr. H. Beall from the Board, were accepted. The resignations of Chief Howard and Mr. E. L. Goodwill had been tendered some months ago, but action had been deferred as there had been no meeting.

Made Honorary Members.

In consideration of the exceptionally splendid service of the members who resigned they were made honorary members of the county and executive.

Tag Day September 29th.

The annual tag day in aid of the Society was set for Saturday September 29th. A meeting of the ladies of the city will be called very shortly for the purpose of organization for the work for that day.

Will Not Lend Boxes.

A request was received from Lindsay for the loan of the Children's Aid tag boxes. It was decided not to do so as the boxes are becoming worn out with home use. In connection with this request the refusal to lend the boxes to the War Veterans and acquiescence to the Red Cross was explained by Mr. Peck, at the meeting at which the boxes were refused to the War Veterans because of the fact that they bore the initials of the Society and would probably cause confusion. Mr. Peck was unable to be present and knew nothing of the refusal. When the boxes were desired by the Red Cross the request was made to Mr. Peck, who, quite ignorant of the former refusal to the War Veterans, gave his consent. Mr. Peck wished to emphasize the fact that he did not wish to lend any distinction to any society, and had he known of the former refused the Red Cross similarly.

Woman Who Fell 5 Stories A Suicide

New Rochelle Coroner Finds Balcony Railing Too High for an Accidental Death.

MOUNT VERNON, N.Y., Sept. 12. —William H. Livingston, Coroner, of New Rochelle, held an inquest into the death of Mrs. Francis L. Loring, who was killed Friday night by a fall from a balcony on the fifth storey of the Granatan Hotel, at Bronxville. No one could be found who saw the woman fall, though one witness saw her standing on the balcony, several hours before the tragedy. The Coroner, who has decided the death was a suicide, inspected the balcony and said it would be almost impossible for any one to fall accidentally from the balcony.

Pleasing Incident At Murray Street

At the Lang-Hardwicke marriage, this morning, a pleasant incident occurred. Dr. J. B. Mann, representing the Deacons, came forward, and presented the bride with a beautiful sheaf of roses, and in a brief address, expressed the good wishes of his fellow officers for the young couple. This was the first military wedding to be held in Murray Street church, and this, coupled with the fact that Mr. Lang and his bride have been members of the congregation from childhood, inspired the act.

WEDDING BELLS

BLASTORAH—GARVEY.

On Tuesday morning, Sept. 11th, at St. Paul's church, Lakefield, a very pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. W. P. Meagher, when Miss Ettie Garvey, daughter of Denis Garvey of Lakefield, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Bernard J. Blastorah of Fort Frances, Ont. As the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march pealed forth the bride entered the church and was given away by her brother, Mr. Jas. F. Garvey. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of blue silk, trimmed with mink fur, and wore a pretty blue velvet hat with mink trimmings. Miss Margaret Blastorah of Harwood, sister of the groom, attended the bride, and was prettily attired in a dress of pearl grey silk with hat to match. Mr. Fred Garvey, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. During the ceremony special music was afforded, solos being rendered by Miss Florence Leahy of Peterborough, cousin of the bride; Miss Kearney of Young's Point, and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan of Peterborough. Miss Marion Gorman presided at the organ in her usual efficient manner. After the ceremony a very appropriate reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple motored to Peterborough, and amid showers of confetti and good wishes they left on a trip to Rochester and Detroit. The bride's travelling costume was a suit of brown broadcloth, with hat to match. After their return they will travel west to their new home in Fort Francis. Their many friends wish them every success and happiness.

OBITUARY

THE LATE J. D. O'BRIEN.

The funeral of the late James D O'Brien, of Downeyville, who was fatally injured near Burketon on Friday evening, took place yesterday morning from the family residence to St. Luke's church, Downeyville, and was one of the largest held in that parish in years, a tribute to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Requiem mass was chanted by Rev. Father Galvin assisted by Rev. Father McCauley of Ennismore, and Rev. Father Ferguson, of Warkworth. Other clergy present was Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, and Rev. Father McGuire, of Peterborough, and a former pastor. Rev. Father McGuire also delivered a short but impressive sermon on death.

At the conclusion of the mass the remains were laid to rest in the parish cemetery.

Among those from Lindsay who attended the funeral were Dr. Blanchard, Messrs. M. H. McGeough, J. R. O'Neill, F. McClory and G. H. Wilson.

MR. THOMAS C. TUCKER.

At his late residence, 543 Reid street, after a brief illness of ten days, Mr. Thomas C. Tucker passed away. The late Mr. Tucker was born in Carbonear, Newfoundland, in the year 1829 of English parentage. In early life he moved to Montreal, and in 1865 came to Peterborough, where he has resided ever since. Being of a retiring disposition, preferring home life, he never accepted public office, but was always interested in the welfare of others.

He was a Liberal in politics, and a member of St. Paul's church, acting on the Board of Management for a great many years. While in Montreal he was a military man, serving in the artillery under the late Col. Stevenson.

Mr. Tucker has lived a retired life for a great many years. He was one of the oldest members of Peterborough Lodge of Freemasons.

Mr. Tucker was predeceased by his wife twenty-one years ago and is survived by one daughter, Miss Elizabeth, living at home, and one son Mr. J. T. Tucker, of Winnipeg.

The funeral takes place Thursday afternoon at 3.00, service at 2.30 from the family residence, under Masonic auspices. Interment at Little Lake cemetery.

JOHN FITZGERALD.

John Fitzgerald, son of John Fitzgerald and Mary Devlin, formerly of Otonabee, Canada, died on Thursday, August 30th, at St. Elizabeth Hospital, in Appleton following an operation for appendicitis. The funeral was held from St. Mary's Catholic Church, Monday, September 3, Rev. Father Gomering conducting the services. He leaves to mourn his loss three brothers, James and Roger of Black Creek; Patrick Fitzgerald of Iron-wood, Michigan, and Mrs. E. J. Burrows of Duluth, Minnesota. "Jack," as he was familiarly known, by his friends, was unmarried, of a sunny disposition, and was universally liked by those who knew him. That he was held in high esteem was evidenced by the concourse of people who assembled to pay their respects to the dead. The floral tributes were very beautiful and profuse.

ALL RUSSIA IS NOW PROCLAIMED AS UNDER MARTIAL LAW

All Generals Except Those in the Southwest Remain True to the Government—Petrograd Has Sent For More Troops.

(Special Cable by William G. Shepherd.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—The provisional Government has proclaimed a general state of martial law.

Vice-Premier Nekrasoff announced that all generals on all fronts except the southwestern, have pledged full allegiance and loyalty to the provisional Government. The exception is General Denikine, named officially with Korniloff, as a traitor to the new democracy.

Announcement was also made that provisional Government forces are now in possession of Pskoff, originally Gen. Korniloff's headquarters, and from which city he started on his rebellious march toward Petrograd.

As the capital was placed under martial law early in the week, it is assumed that the Government's latest decree is intended to apply chiefly to Moscow, Kiev, and similar centres.

In Touch With Rebels.

The newly formed "Temporary Military Committee," which had been sitting all night, to-day received the following information: Fresh Korniloff troops, consisting of three troops of Cossacks and two batteries of artillery have arrived at Luga and have been despatched to the village of ZZarxerve, 15 vests distant. Altogether fourteen echelons have arrived at Luga and many more are on the way.

"The Provisional Government is in touch with Luga and is taking measures to get into communication with the recolting troops.

"The Central Executive Committee of the Council of Deputies, has sent orders to Kronstandt and Viborg to despatch to Petrograd a considerable part of the local forces all of which are true to the Government. Some of these troops already have arrived.

"General Batoff, commander of the Dvinsk military district, has assured the Government of his support.

"The Council of Deputies at Vitebsk, telegraphs that the garrison there as well as the garrison at Minsk, Smolensk, Orsha and Polotsk stand firm for the Government."

Won't Affect Conduct of War.

Boris Savinkoff, assistant Minister of War and Minister of Marine, in an interview with the Associated Press to-day said:

"For the reassurance of America you may say that Gen. Korniloff's revolt is not in the least affecting our operations against the foreign enemy. The armies at the front are solid with the Provisional Government.

"There is not the least doubt that Gen. Korniloff's coup has failed, and that we shall be strengthened for the future by getting rid of disloyal generals, by whose conspiratorial tendencies we long have been embarrassed.

"Gen. Korniloff himself is still at Mohilv.

"The Provisional Government will issue stronger than ever from the crisis, and this will enable us effectively to deal with the Bolsheviki danger."

Try to Avoid Bloodshed.

So long as Gen. Korniloff does not open hostilities there is a strong feeling in Government circles in Petrograd in favour of avoiding bloodshed. It is probable that the Government will postpone attacking the rebels until all hope of their secession from Gen. Korniloff is lost.

Situation More Favourable.

Vice-Premier Nekrasoff in an interview distributed to-day by the Russian official news agency, said that the political situation could not be more perfectly favourable. All the commanders at the front, with the exception of Gen. Denikine, commander on the western front, who has been arrested with his chief of staff by the military committee, remain faithful to the provisional Government.

Pskoff is in the possession of Government troops.

GRAIN DEALERS' QUOTATIONS

Volume of Business Small at Present—Live Stock Prices

The milling demand for cash wheat continues active. The market settled down to the new level, the quotations on the top grades, Manitobas being 1 cent below yesterday's quotation. The volume of business is small and will likely be so far some time, while the farmers are busy with their fall seeding and other work. The amount of stuff at present coming out from the Ontario farms is very light. There is a strong demand for oats and that market is firmer.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.21; No. 2 northern, $2.15, nominal store; No. 3, $2.15; No. 4, $2.09, nominal; in store Fort William.

Barley—New, $1.20 to $1.30.

Ontario wheat — No. 2 winter, new, $2.17 to $2.20, according to freight outside; No. 3 winter, not quoted.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.70.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $11.90; second patents, $11.40; strong bakers', $11.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $42; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $8 to $9.50; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 161 cars, with 2,266 cattle, 240 calves, 2423 hogs and 2,705 sheep and lambs.

There was a heavy run of cattle for the mid-week market. Prices sagged about 25 cents, but the bulk of the offerings were a poor average in quality. A few broken lots of fair to choice butcher were on hand, but as compared with the total run, they were scarce and hard to find.

The demand for stokers and feeders feeders has slackened off a little, and this grade was slow, but prices steady for good quality.

There was a fair run of hogs, and packers succeeded in knocking off 25 cents, the market closing at $18 fed.

Hairs Quickly Vanish After This Treatment

(Helps to Beauty.)

Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growths from the face and according to a beauty specialist the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delatone paste to the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.

GENEROUS PENSIONS FOR U. S. SOLDIERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — The Soldier Insurance bill, declared by House leaders to be the most generous measure ever proposed by a Government to aid its fighters, is scheduled to pass the House to-day. Financial help is given the nation's defenders under three headings:

Direct payments to dependents up to $50 a month while the breadwinner is at the front.

Life-long pension to every man injured or diseased in service, or to the dependents of a man killed.

Under family aid the following payments are to be made by the government: "To a wife $15 a month, with one child, $25, with two children, $32.50 a month, each additional child $5.

Total disability—to single men—$40 a month with wife, $55, wife and one child $65, with two or more children $75. With one motherless child $50, for each additional child $10. If there is also a widowed mother $20 a month goes to her.

The insurance section of the bill entitles a man to take out life insurance up to $10,000 a year at $8 a thousand.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Some women hold to the idea that bread-making is a long and difficult operation, but this is a mistake, for with Royal Yeast Cakes, light, sweet bread can be made in a few hours with but little trouble.

GOVERNMENT'S MAJORITY ON THE CLOSURE VOTE WAS A SMALL ONE

Carried by 43 to 35—Liberals Say That More Than the Majority Were Smuggled In After the Vote Was Called—Sir Wilfrid's Objection

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—When the House assembled this afternoon Sir Robert Borden immediately moved that the orders of the day be proceeded with. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had no objections, but thought that questions and notices might be disposed of.

Sir Wilfred Laurier suggested before the orders of the day were called that all information regarding tribunals which had been created should be tabled in the House.

Sir Robert Borden saw no objection. The Prime Minister then rose and enquired whether the leader of the Opposition had any observation to make as to the procedure on the Franchise Bill.

SIR WILFRID'S OBJECTION

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that what the Opposition desired was fair consideration of the measure. He did not think that closure should be imposed at this date and before members had had an opportunity to consider the clauses and sections of the bill to any extent at all.

Sir Robert Borden declared that he had no objection to discussion, provided the Opposition would guarantee that the bill would receive third reading on Saturday morning.

Sir Wilfrid replied that it was not conducive to an agreement to make it under threats. The Opposition, he declared, had absolutely no intention to obstruct the bill. All they desired was a fair chance to consider the clauses. He declined to guarantee any specified time for the third reading.

GOVERNMENT'S NARROW MAJORITY.

Sir Robert stated that he had made no threats. However, he would now prove that the consideration of the clauses have right of way and should not be further postponed.

The motion was received with applause by the Government members, while certain members on the Opposition side cried, "Shame!"

The motion was put on committee. Liberals vociferously protested. The vote was taken, and the closure motion carried by 43 to 35, or the narrow majority of eight. Liberals contended that more than that number of Conservatives were smuggled into the House after the vote was called.

A. K. Maclean of Halifax asked whether questions could be asked under closure or whether every man could only talk once. The Prime Minister intimated that until 2 a.m. to-morrow procedure in committee would be just about the same as under ordinary conditions.

The debate then continued in the usual promiscuous manner, characteristic of committee debates.

By Anna Alice Chapin

He offered his arm and they left the room together. The two men inside looked at each other. After a minute Heaton spoke:

"No occasion for State's evidence, Malone. I'd rather have it this way, I reckon. Your gang's busted—and I'm glad—well, I'm glad things turned out the way that they did. Say!"—He helped himself to one of the Judge's cigars—"he's a thoroughbred all right! Have one of these? I reckon he won't be asking for 'em for some time!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

ANOTHER DAWN.

And round about his home the glory
That blushed and bloomed
Is but a dim-remembered story
Of the old time entombed.
—Edgar Allan Poe.

"There's not been such a night here in fifteen years!" said the keeper of the Toll Gate.

He was propped up with pillows in a chair before the fire and Polly crouched beside him, her head against his arm. The heart attack had passed: when Polly had arrived hours before it was already over—but he still looked ill and weary. She had not taken off the rose-red frock lent her by Alice Baker; it was splashed and muddy about the skirt—even as Alice had known it would be! And her heavy black hair loosened by the long drive to the Crossing had not been put up again but streamed like spilled milk upon her shoulders.

She shivered now, and pressed closer to her father's shoulder.

"Listen to the wind!" she murmured. "Seems like it'd lift us straight off the Crossing and blow us away, don't it, Dad?"

A great puff of smoke came down the chimney and the whole house shook. The gust, passing, left a wail above the roof like the keen of a banshee.

"A wild night, a wild night!" muttered the Toll-keeper. "What's the matter, honey?"

For Polly was softly crying.

"It's Martin!" she whispered brokenly. "Dad, how will we know if he comes out of it all right?"

"He'll come out of it," said her father, with odd confidence. "Martin Hale is not going to be beaten, anyway around. And if the worst comes to the worst I can take care of him."

"You, dad!" She drew back and looked at him in astonishment.

He nodded.

"Yes. I've kept silent a long time now. But I reckon I can talk if I have to."

The leaping fire showed grim determination in his face. She had no idea what he meant, but a sort of comfort came to her. She had an abounding trust in her father. If he said that things were coming out right, she was sure that they would.

"Dad," she said very low, "it's—it's lonely here at the Toll Gate, isn't it?"

He smiled and turned to look down at her face, rosy and with something more than the firelight and the reflection of the red gown.

"Is it all right between you and Martin now, honey?" he asked.

She did not speak, but her hand stole up to meet his. The Toll-keeper nodded his head wisely.

"The trails get crossed now and then," he said, addressing the fire, "but we can usually find our own if we keep our eyes open."

The clock struck three and almost with the moment of its striking Jack Radnor came into the Toll Gate house without even knocking. He was breathing hard and dripped the rain like a living fountain.

"Enid—Miss Forsythe?" he demanded.

"Great heavens, man, you look as though you had been drowned!" cried the Toll-keeper.

"Did she come here?" went on Radnor, unheeding.

The Masons both shook their heads. A sort of tense look in Jack's face gave way to such a reaction of discouragement and anxiety that the old man hastened to add:

"But maybe she couldn't have gotten here yet? When did she start?"

"At seven o'clock last night," said Jack drearily.

Polly suppressed a little cry.

"Tut! Tut!" sympathized the Toll-keeper soberly. "That's bad—and she was headed for Four Trails, Mr. Radnor?"

"I don't know." Jack told the few facts he did know, and couldn't but help noting even in that moment of stress that Polly's lovely face paled and stiffened when he spoke of his conviction that her errand was to warn Martin Hale. For the rest, however, he and the mountain girl could look at each other now without self-consciousness. Whatever mistaken trails they had each been tempted along, both of them were set the right way now. That bewitched hour in Malone's shack was like a dream, or a memory of some other life and incarnation.

Suddenly Polly burst out with tears in her eyes:

"In this rain! Oh, Mr. Radnor, what will she do? What has happened to her?"

Jack winced.

"That's what I'm going to find out," he said, dully, and turned to the door once more.

"Wait!" exclaimed the Toll-keeper sharply. "I'm an old man, Radnor"—it was odd how easily he prefixed that respectful prefix—and I know something of the way to go about the sort of job that you have in hand. You can't do it spent and weak; and you can't do it in weather like this without changing horses. Hold on to yourself, man, and think—on her account, mind you; not on your own. The first thing to do is to take a drink—white liquor won't hurt you for once in your life, son. Then go out and stable your horse in my barn, and change your saddle to mine. She is not a prize winner but she's fresh, and your's can't be up to much by this. Then come back here, and we'll decide what to do. The storm is letting up now and it will begin to be light in half an hour. With the dawn and a new horse and something hot under your belt, you can start out with some sense and hope of finding her. Now, then, drink it down, and do as I say!"

"You aren't going to do anything, Dad!" said Polly anxiously. "Your heart——"

Her father laughed.

"My heart would break Poll, if I sat still when trouble's in the wind. You know me! But no; I'm going to behave myself; you needn't worry. Only, I can't sit still! I'm going out to see when the storm will break."

The storm had as a matter of fact already broken; more it had almost ceased. The last wild rage of it seemed to have exhausted its vigor. The winds were trailing off in faint flurries. The rain was fine and feathery now and a fine gray light showed a whole continent of clouds rolling away beneath the Crossing. Light?

It seemed not yet light indeed, so much as some mystic agent that made things visible in darkness. The dawn was on her way but so far only the misty veil of her and her subtle perfume was all of which the world might take cognisance.

"It's all over," said Richard Mason, breathing deep of the wonderful air, "but it's all but taken the mountain away from under us!"

"I told you it felt like that!" said Polly, coming to his side. "Oh, Dad, it's—it's awful!" she gasped.

The slope above them leading to the top of the ridge was a roaring torrent. They could see the gleam and hear the noise of it. On one side of the Toll Gate House a vast gully had been washed away almost to the very walls. The roads both ways were well nigh obliterated. Trees on every side—those small yet tough trees that grow on the mountain tops—had been wrenched from the streaming earth and lay prone and shattered or toppled limply with leaf-stripped branches. A tidal wave could scarcely have worked more havoc.

The dawn came more quickly now, as it is wont in summer after that first hesitating awakening. The horizon was suddenly splashed now with greenish silver and a cold pale light crept over the trumbled chaos of retreating rain clouds.

Many Children Die From Summer Complaint
When They Could Be Saved By Using
DR. FOWLER'S
Extract of Wild Strawberry

There is not a Summer passes without thousands of people, especially infants, being attacked by Summer Complaint.

The prostration, often verging on collapse, which sometimes accompanies this disease makes it one of the most serious and dangerous we have to contend with during the hot months.

A remedy which will quickly effect the vomiting, purging and the profuse diarrhoea is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Thomas M. Theriault, Grand Anse, N.B., writes: "My three children were very sick with Summer Complaint during the hot days last Summer. I thought one day that they would die, and I didn't know what to do to cure them. I happened to have one of your almanacs in the house, and found by reading about Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry that it was a good remedy. I at once got two bottles, and they perfectly cured them. I recommend everybody to use this wonderful remedy."

It has been on the market for the past 72 years.

You don't experiment when you buy it.

Soldier's Letter.

Following is a letter received from Pte. Norman Crowe who enlisted from here with the 93rd Battalion:

West Sandling, Kent,
August 28th, 1917.

Dear Father,—Just a few lines to let you know I am quite well, but rather disappointed as there was a Canadian mail in yesterday and today and none for me, but I may get some to-morrow. Hope so, anyway. I sent home a few pictures last week and I am sending home one of the medals like the Kaiser presented to the men on the submarine that sunk the British ship "Lusitania". You can show it to Choate and if he wants to have it to show he can. It will be something new over there, I suppose. I just got it to-night and I will register it to-morrow.

Well, Dad, there was a competition in our Battalion, and two days' leave given for the sixteen best physically framed men, so I was one of them and expect to go on leave Thursday. I will get a picture of the team and send it to you. This is the third winning team I have been in since I came down here out of a battalion of about two thousand men, so that isn't bad, is it?

Well, I must close now, hoping to hear from you soon. I remain as ever,
Your loving son,
Norman.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Curious Mental Condition

It Was Experienced by a Tourist.

By ALAN HINSDALE

I was standing on sand and could hear the plash of waves, but could see nothing about me, for I was enveloped in mist. A rocking sensation made me doubt whether I was ashore or on the water. Another singular feature was a faint singing of birds—so faint, indeed, that I doubted whether I heard birds or a ringing in my ears. There were occasional voices about me, having a mellow sound, as if spoken on a quiet day after a fall of snow or on a balmy morning when the air is full of moisture.

While I was wondering where I was and how I happened to be there a girl came out of the mist and stood before me. She seemed as much surprised to see me as I was to see her. Her face was that of a saint—fair complexion, hair and eyes. There was but one blemish—a small red birthmark, shaped like a rose leaf, on her neck. It was rather an imperfection than a blemish.

"Where are we?" I asked.

"I don't know," she replied.

"I hear the sound of waves."

"Then we must be on the seashore."

"And birds singing."

"That would indicate that the beach is lined by woods."

"Wherever we are, we were evidently sent for each other."

"It would seem so." She lowered her eyes.

"You were certainly sent to be with me. What would become of me alone in this dense mist without the power to find my way out of it? With you I shall be happy even here. You are very lovely."

"You do not say beautiful."

"But you are beautiful."

"No; I can't be that."

"Why?"

"Because of this." She put a finger on the birthmark.

"Do you know," I said after a brief pause, "that I like you so well as you are that I would not have even that changed?"

Suddenly the mist was gone. It did not melt away; it vanished. We were standing upon a beautiful bay. For miles on either hand the beach curved in a semicircle. Back of us the shore rose till it mingled with mountains. The waters of the bay were of different colors. Near us, where it was shallow, it was a pale green, beyond a deep blue and beyond that silver. On this silver an island rested, rising from its base to a height on which the sun shone golden. We stood looking out at the view. I was entranced, and, turning my eyes upon my companion, I saw that she was equally wrapt.

"I feel," I said, "that I must go out on the bosom of that sea."

"There is a boat," she replied, "chained to a stake."

Lowering my eyes to the verge, I saw a skiff rising and falling with the languid swells.

The next scene of which I was cognizant or at least remember now was pulling along under great cliffs that formed the island.

"There is a cave," said my companion, "with a waterway for an entrance."

Turning the boat, I pulled for the cave. The rocky roof over the waterway just grazed our heads as we made the entrance. Inside we found ourselves within a cavern, its roof hung with stalactites. The light coming from the entrance tinged the vaulted roof with ever changing colors. Now it was a blood red, now a pale blue, now sea green, now white.

"It is from the changing of the waters outside," I said. "A changing sky changes the bay, and the changing bay changes the hues in here."

"It is all change," she said sadly. "I wish something in the world were fixed."

I dropped my oars and, seating myself beside her, took her in my arms.

"I wish this would never change," I said, "for I have found my love." I kissed her. She put her arms about me, and it seemed to me that I had thrown off something that had troubled me, some great evil that had overhung me, and I had passed to a convalescence of perfect happiness.

Alas, while supremely happy in this companionship, I felt my love slipping through my arms and saw her floating over the surface of the water toward the mouth of the cavern. At that moment both the water and its rocky dome were a pale blue. They tinged her garments with the same hue. She looked back at me with an expression of indescribable melancholy. I called to her not to leave me, but she floated on, passed out through the mouth of the cavern and was gone.

I seized the oars to follow and, dashing under the low arch that separated me from the outside, in another moment was under the greater vault of the heavens.

All was serene as when we entered the cavern, but my love had vanished.

Then came a sensation of being tossed to and fro, up and down, as though I were on a stormy sea. It was merely a consciousness of feeling. There was no communication with the outside world. There were voices in the air. What they said I did not know. There were also sounds of invisible people passing and the occasional opening and closing of a door.

Next I was lying on a lounge looking out of an open window. The air was clear as crystal. Before me rose a range of snow capped mountains. Over them was a white cloud. But was it a cloud? No; it was a peak far above its fellows, with a strip of cloud beneath it that gave it the appearance of a peak. How high it was! It seemed to mingle with the heavens' blue. I arose and went to the window to get a better view of its summit. When I leaned out and looked up at it it seemed higher, higher, all the while higher. My brain began to whirl. I returned to my lounge. I was weak and languid.

While I was recovering from my giddiness a door opened and my lost love came into the room. At first she looked anxious, then smiled.

For a moment I was in doubt if it were really she. It did not appear that she was changed, but that I looked at her through different eyes from before. Her figure did not face me, but she was looking at me sidewise. I was troubled. I longed for her, she was with me, but I was not sure she was the same person. While I gazed in perplexity she turned, and I saw the birthmark on her neck. Then she came to me, seemingly wading through water, and took my hand. I drew her down beside me and said reproachfully:

"Why did you leave me?"

"I couldn't help it. It was fate. Everything changes in this world."

It did not occur to me that this was a vague answer. At any rate, I was satisfied with it.

"Are you going away again?" I asked.

"No, not now; some day."

"When will that be?"

"A long, long while from now."

"And will you love me until this separation comes?"

"I will love you always, here and where I go."

"I will go with you. You shall not go without me."

Then hand in hand we were climbing the mountain I had seen from the window. We seemed to be ascending as if buoyed by wings. Eager to reach that cloudlike summit I had seen, we pressed on and on, but whenever I looked up to see if we neared it we were as far below as before. Turning to look back, the houses beneath appeared like ant hills. Then I felt the snow slowly moving beneath me.

"It is an avalanche!" I exclaimed.

We were turned toward the valley and hand in hand slid down the mountain. Though we moved with accelerated pace, we kept our feet. We were like two gulls soaring, then, turning their wings salant, sailing down an aerial incline. Suddenly the snow before us began to pile up against the base of a cliff. We lost our balance, and, head downward, I felt tons of snow piling on top of me.

"No bones broken," I heard a voice say close beside me. "If there's no internal injury he will be all right."

I opened my eyes. I was lying on hard snow, while people stood about me, all looking very anxious. One of them, a girl, stood gazing down upon me with a pair of mild eyes in which there was a world of sympathy. There must have been something in my glance to affect her, for she lowered her eyes, blushed and turned away. As she did so she exposed one side of her neck. It bore a birthmark shaped like a rose leaf.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"Matter! Why, you have fallen twenty feet from the ledge up there."

I remembered passing over a ledge, but I didn't remember anything else.

"How long have I been unconscious?" I asked.

"You fell this very minute. Here; take a little of this."

A party of tourists happened to be passing when I fell and among them a doctor. From where I lay I could see the Alpine peak Jungfrau. I had been looking at it during the period of my unconsciousness, which might have been an infinitesimally small fraction of time. I had seen the girl with a birthmark only during the same space of time.

They wished to assist me to the hotel just below, at Sheidig, but I concluded to try my legs. The doctor gave me his hand, and I got on my feet. One of the tourists who stood about me volunteered to go with me, but I got on fairly well without his assistance.

What I have recorded is the beginning of a love story; but, though I have no objection to telling a dream, I shrink from giving the thoughts and feelings of myself and the lady of my love. I was less interested in discovering whether I had displaced any of my internal parts than getting on the track of the girl with a birthmark. I missed her at Sheidig, but saw her the next evening at the kursaal (casino) at Interlaken, sipping a lemonade. I dogged her footsteps for days before I succeeded in corralling her—that is, before I could find her lighted, so to speak, and I could get a mutual acquaintance to introduce me. I finally cornered her on the Rigi, near Lucerne, and, as luck would have it, my friend Jim Thompson was there, too, and was acquainted with her.

I expected under the influence of my dream that I should have as easy a time getting her as I had during that long drawn out infinitesimally short period. Instead, I had a real woman to deal with and not a creation of my own fancy.

There was no dream for her. I was to her an ordinary personage with whom neither dreams nor romance had anything to do. I was obliged to lay siege to her heart and advance by regular approaches. I made very slow progress. Nevertheless by persistence I finally conquered, and it was not till then that I told her this story.

By getting regular customers he delivers it to them at ten cents a week, and makes FOUR CENTS A WEEK ON EACH CUSTOMER. There are quite a number of newsboys delivering THE EXAMINER to customers who make as high as $2.50 A WEEK, and all done after school, in addition to the profit that is made by selling the papers. The Examiner is giving NINETY-FIVE DOLLARS IN CASH PRIZES to the boys who secure the most customers for themselves between MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10TH AND NOVEMBER 1ST NEXT, JUST NINE WEEKS. It does not make any difference whether you have one customer or fifty customers on Monday next, it is the boys who get the greatest number of new customers that win the prizes. Supposing you did not have any customers when you started, and at the end of the contest you had fifteen, another boy had fifty when the contest started, and at the end he had sixty-four, this boy would have only got fourteen new customers. And the first boy would win the prize because he had fifteen new customers to take The Examiner while the other boy had only fourteen. It is fine experience for any boy or girl, and as there are quite a few girls who are now distributing THE EXAMINER they are ELIGIBLE TO ENTER THE CONTEST.

Mothers and fathers talk this matter over with your boys and girls. It is a good business training. There are hundreds of young men successful in business in the City and elsewhere who have at some time in their earlier days been Examiner newsboys.

SELL ONLY THE EXAMINER. Get your friends to try it for a few weeks and you will find they will be regular customers, and remember a gain of a few new customers each week may win you the $25.00 PRIZE. If there is anything you DO NOT UNDERSTAND drop into THE EXAMINER OFFICE this week and it will be explained to you.

The only condition is that Each Boy or Girl must buy their own Papers and no Prizes will be awarded to a boy who buys another boys papers and put them in as his own.

They Shall Not Pass

The Immortal Cry of Canada at the Second Battle of Ypres.

The defence of Ypres following the first ghastly gas attack April 22, 1915, exalts all history. By it our men were transfigured and the undying, imperishable Soul of Canada revealed.

In the name of these Heroes of Ypres, Festubert, Givenchy, Vimy Ridge, Lens, The Somme, Verdun---aye and the Deathless "Old Contemptibles"---we beseech you, Women of Canada, to Dedicate Yourselves and Your Families to War Service by signing the Food Service Pledge.

The sacrifice is not great. We merely want you to substitute other foods for part of the white bread, beef and bacon your family now eat.

"What follows almost defies description. The effect of these poisonous gases was so virulent as to render the whole of the line held by the French Division practically incapable of any action at all.

The Stand of the Canadians

"The left flank of the Canadian Division was thus left dangerously exposed to serious attack in flank, and there appeared to be a prospect of their being overwhelmed and of a successful attempt by the Germans to cut off the British troops occupying the salient to the East.

"In spite of the danger to which they were exposed the Canadians held their ground with a magnificent display of tenacity and courage; and it is not too much to say the bearing and conduct of these splendid troops averted a disaster which might have been attended with the most serious consequences."

Sir John French's Seventh Dispatch,
General Headquarters,
15th June, 1915

Thou Shalt Not Want

When baking use one-third oatmeal, corn, barley or rye flour. Or, order some brown bread from your baker each day.

Substitute for beef and bacon such equally nutritious foods as fish, peas, lentils, potatoes, nuts, bananas, etc.

Third, and this is most important --- positively prevent the waste of a single ounce of food in your home.

Next week a Food Service Pledge and Window Card will be delivered to you. The Pledge is your Dedication to War Service---The Window Card is your Emblem of Honour.

TO ADOPT TAXATION.

Voluntary Method of Raising Money For Patriotic Fund May Be Abandoned.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12— It is stated here that the administrators of the patriotic fund contemplate a change in the method of raising money. It is proposed to cease collecting voluntary contributions from individuals, and to turn over to the Provinces and municipalities, the task of contributing on a pro rata basis the amounts required. The putting in force of the new income tax is believed to be one of the reasons for the contemplated change.

INTERNED PRISONERS WILL WORK ON ROADS

Kingston, Ont., September 11.—A movement is on foot here to have the prisoners of war now at Kapuskasing in New Ontario, brought to Fort Henry for the winter months, so that in spring they may be used for road building. The idea is to incorporate the hole dug out of Barriefield Hill, and use this as an improved grade for the Kingston-Gananoque road at this point. REVOLT IS CRUSHED SAYS KERENSKY

Soldiers' Committee's Powers Are Limited

Kerensky Emerges Victorious From The Great Russian Crisis

Korniloff Revolt a Failure the Premier Declares --Stern Measures Are Taken to Suppress Further Trouble---Death Penalty For "Whoever Dares to Raise His Hand Against the Government."

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12, six p.m.—(Delayed)—"General Korniloff is prepared to surrender," declared Premier Kerensky in a special statement to the United Press. "The mutiny has failed completely," he declared. Kerensky's statement to the United Press followed the issuance of a formal proclamation declaring "the senseless effort of a military mutiny begun by the former Commander-in-Chief and a small party of Generals has ended in complete failure." "The guilty mutineers," the proclamation continued, "will be delivered to the revolutionary military tribunal."

The Premier announced also sweeping reforms curtailing the power of the Soldiers' Committees—the units of enlisted men who have heretofore mixed in with the strategy the commanders and sought to handle all army affairs. "Henceforth," Kerensky asserted, "the Soldiers' Committees will control only in internal affairs, and will not interfere in matters of military strategy." He went on to explain that this would confine the authority of committees purely to activity behind fighting lines. On the front the authority of military commanders will be supreme. "Generals Alexieff and Verhofsky, now with the Provisional Government forces, will form a brilliant combination, assuring solidarity," Kerensky declared.

The Korniloff revolt is regarded as having toppled over, to all practical effect, when the Premier to-day won over to his side General Alexieff, formerly chief of staff under Grand Duke Nicholas, and subsequently himself commander-in-chief of the army. Alexieff is known as one of the most brilliant strategists of the Russian army.

Petrograd has been profoundly stirred by the revolt, but not stricken with panic. All over the city workingmen have been hurriedly training and learning to shoot.. A number of formidable units were raised to support the Premier. The Korniloff revolt resulted in scores of arrests in the city. Many of those taken into custody were members of the officers' union including Colonel Clergot, President of the Military Censorship Committee. Many officers in the army who were arrested following the mutiny of troops in July, to-day formally offered their services to the Provisional Government.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, September 13. — Death for "whoever dares to raise his hand against the Government or interfere with his superiors," is democratic Russia's stern determination henceforth, Foreign Minister Tereschenko told the United Press to-day. There is to be no parley with traitors or propagandists.

"We want America to understand," said Tereschenko, "that that recent crisis has shown the Government this is not the time for propaganda, either radical or conservative. Everything from now on will be done for the prosecution of the war. We have discovered the iron hand is the only way. And the iron hand goes on now. Now is the time to do nothing but fight. Other problems can be taken up when the fighting is over.

"Alexieff did a splendid thing in accepting the position of chief of staff," Tereschenko declared, when I met him after this dramatic event. "I laboured long and hard with him. Finally he was persuaded. I consider his decision will help save Russia."

PETERBOROUGH'S BIG FAIR IS READY FOR THE PUBLIC

"Get Ready Day" Sees the Brightest Prospects For the Industrial---Splendid Displays in All Lines and a Most Attractive Programme of Special Features--Record Crowd Expected To-morrow.

With many splendid feature attractions, a steady flow of entries, and the promise of ideal weather, Peterborough's annual Industrial Exhibition opened auspiciously this morning.. President G. A. Gillespie and his fellow directors were among the first arrivals to receive the exhibitors and otherwise set the wheels in motion. But the weather man had preceded them with an exhibit of sunshine that warmed the hearts of J. H. Garbutt, R. Denne, Tom Brown and the other enthusiasts who have given their time and their efforts without the slightest recompense except the desire to keep the Exhibition alive until it can be entirely rehabilitated, and to arouse competitive interest in agriculture and its associated industries and arts. On every hand this morning there was enterprise with its encouragement, and evidences of success that aroused the hope of even a new record in this war year.

At noon the flower exhibits were practically complete, the poultry department was gathering form, the manufacturers' building, which must be mentioned in a whisper, was bustling with exhibitors whose loyalty to the Fair needs no stronger proof than their continued acceptance of conditions which if not intolerable ar certainly unworthy of Peterborough.

Cattle, sheep and swine were being allotted to their pens, and in the horse sheds there were early signs that this class will again bring out a fine show in the heavy and light divisions.

THE BIGGEST MIDWAY EVER.

The Midway would be the liviliest Peterborough has ever witnessed if there was nothing there but the Patrick features, merry-go-round, ferris wheel and a whole row of attractions that are all set for the crowds. There are other amusements, however, and in this department the directors have been unusually fortunate. In fact they have been very generous in providing grandstand features, and the rest of the fair will depend upon the work and the enthusiasm of exhibitors for whom there has been a big prize list prepared. Some of those who were at the Oshawa fair yesterday arrived here this morning, and others are expected to follow them. Lindsay, Omemee, Millbrook, Port Hope, Ida, Bowmanville, Warkworth and other towns of this district have contributed their prize stock, vegetables and grains, and there are others to hear from yet. In short, this morning's outlook was of the brightest, everything was on par with the weather, hence the public may appreciate the hopes of the directors and on Friday and Saturday see the Fair for themselves.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—M. PRICES ARE DUE FOR AN ADVANCE

What Mr. H. J. Zacks is Doing to Reduce the High Cost of Living

With prices advancing almost every day it is hardly necessary to warn Peterborough shoppers to take time by the forelock and purchase their supply of fall and winter goods now while the prices are at their lowest ebb. A trip to H. J. Zacks' store, 422 George street, opposite The Examiner will convince careful shoppers of the great buying opportunities of this store. Mr. Zacks had just returned from Montreal where he had a very successful buying trip. Mr. Zacks succeeded in securing a fine line of ladies' coats which will be offered on Friday of this week for $14.95; a bargain when you consider that the coats are worth from $25.00 to $35.00 each. Mr. Zacks has a large stock of ladies' ready-to-wear garments, and a visit to the store will reveal some exceptional values. See to-night's advertisement on page 7.

A Credit For Great Britain

Canadian Press Despatch:

MONTREAL, Sept. 13. —It is understood that negotiations to provide a credit of 75 millions for the Imperial government purchases of meats, bacon, etc., in Canada, are now in progress. This, if is aranged, would probably be spread over a fairly long period as the resources of the banks are already pretty well taken up with financing ordinary business of the country.

Thursday, Aug. 30th, 1917.

Dear Friend Jim.—Just a few lines hoping they will find you in the best of health and luck, and that the wife and family are all well. Well I guess you will be surprised to hear I landed in Blighty at last. You may have heard it before. Well, Jim, I was gassed at the Lens scrap on August 20th and was in the scrap next morning, 21st. It was a wild one. I had two hours; I got a slight wound as well, and was all in with the gas. This mustard gas is awful; my eyes are sore and my stomach and head aches. I had a good dose. I shall never forget it. Our battalion was cut up badly and lost a lot of our officers. It was an awful sight to see our boys falling. I was in the middle of ten and the snipers got them. They were all around us. One got hit between the eyes and the other in the back of the head. Both were killed and fell nearly on top of me while I was doing a bit of sniping. The Heinies had plenty of machine guns, but we got our objective, and we killed a few Huns, believe me. They were mere kids, some of them from 15 to 17, but they put up a little scrap, throwing their stick bombs, but the Boches won't fight with rifle and bayonet. We were supposed to go over the top August 19, and it was postponed for 24 hours. Our Company was holding our front line. About 4 a.m. of course the Heinies heard we were coming over and they were ready to come over the same time as us, and they put up their barrage the same time. B, C. and D. Companies got into a scrap and the word came for us to go over the top, and of course we were over. We had about 400 yards to make for their trench and it was daylight when we went over and their machine gun snipers gave them good advantage of us. Some got killed before they reached there, and whizz bangs and their "coal boxes" coming over were no joke. The barb wire tore my uniform nearly into threads. It was an awful sight. One of our boys was lying in a shell hole with his leg broke. I tried to get him out, but I was so weak and all in and my eyes were sore, I could not get him out; I had to make for the dressing station, another lad and myself, and we had about two miles to go, and the Heinnies were sniping us for some time. We had to crawl on our hands and knees in some parts of the trenches as they were blown in a good bit. We were lucky to get out; and then they sent us to the Clearing Station, and then to the Base Hospital; stayed there for three days, and then to Blighty. Well, I got up to-day. I am feeling fine. There is a concert here they are giving us. I don't think I can make it. All Jake. I hope to stay in the hospital for a while; it is all nurses in this hospital and the lads who can get about, help them. After we

FIRE CHIEF'S RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED BY COUNCIL

PTE. JOHN McGEE,

Proposed Investigation Came to An Abrupt Close—Charges Were Not Revealed—New Fire Chief Appointed — Resignation Takes Effect at Once.

THE DISCUSSION

The Council's unanimous decision to accept Fire Chief Howard's resignation at a special meeting held last evening, in the opinion of the Aldermanic body, automatically removed the necessity for an investigation into the alleged activities of the Fire Chief. The resignation came as a distinct surprise to the Aldermen and to the twenty-five or thirty citizens who had assembled in the Committee Room where the enquiry was to have been held. The Chief's resignation was first passed on by a Committee of the Whole Council and subsequently the Council met upstairs and accepted the resignation after it had been changed to read "at once" instead of at the "end of a month." The Council recommended the appointment of George Grange for the position of Fire Chief at an initial salary of $1,400 a year. Mr. Grange is now employed as caretaker at the Armouries. Some years ago he served under ex-Chief Howard as assistant chief

A Big Surprise.

When the Committee of the Whole Council gathered together at eight o'clock last evening for the purpose of opening the enquiry it had been whispered around that an eleventh-hour surprise was in store for the Aldermen. Alderman Smith asked Mayor Duffus if the meeting would be public. "All meetings are public meetings so far as I am concerned," replied the Mayor. Continuing he said: "I have called a good many meetings together from time to time, but none with as much regret as this one. Upon my return to the city after an absence of several weeks I was informed of rumours from apparently reliable sources, but I refused to believe any of them. Later on I was informed by some of the Aldermen of certain conditions that were alleged to exist and again I refused to act until the matter was properly investigated. In addition to these rumours I have been accused of furhering this movement. That I may say is false, and absolutely without foundation.

"Some days ago I was asked to write a letter to Fire Chief Howard I had no information to work on, so I had he mover and seconder of the resolution meet me in the City Clerk's Office in order to get the necessary information together."

Citizens Admitted.

had the mover and seconder of the remarks, Alderman Duncan informed the meeting that a number of people were in the Council Chamber who were anxious to be present at the meeting. Alderman Duncan wanted to know if they could come down, to which Mayor Duffus replied that he had no objection, and that it was for the Committee to decide.

Alderman Dobbin interrupted with a request for permission to address the meeting. In the meantime Mayor Duffus drew the aldermen's attention to the correspondence between Chief Howard and the Mayor which was on fyle. "Do you want to hear the letters read?" enquired the Mayor.

"I would move that Alderman Dobbin be heard," said Alderman Stratton. This was seconded by Alderman Smith. Alderman Weir was anxious to hear the letters read. Alderman Stratton"s motion was voted upon and carried.

"Strings Reach Out."

In his opening remarks, Alderman Dobbin said he did not wish to be ultra drastic in dealing with the matter. He wanted to knew that in the event of the Chief tabling his resignation would the committee consider the ad-

A WAR TO THE HILT PARTY IN GERMANY NOW

Von Tirpitz Advocate of Frightfulness Continuing to Sternly Repress All Peace Talk Vatican Hears

POPE IS DISTURBED

Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John H. Hearley, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

ROME, Sept. 13.— "A war to the Hilt" party is forming in Germany, the Von Tirpitz advocates of frightfulness combining with the leader in Mecklenberg for a stern repression of all peace talk, according to the word reaching the Vatican to-day. A sharp political struggle was reported now in progress. Pope Benedict was disturbed over this latest obstacle to peace, but was said, nevertheless, to be hopeful that the German Liberal elements would prevail. Other Vatican reports to-day indicated differences between Germany and her allies, resultant from demands by the Vienna, Sofia and Constantinople that these three capitals should have the right to approve or disapprove the Central Powers' reply to Pope Benedict before it was despatched from Berlin to Rome.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1917

IMPORTANCE OF PRECAUTIONS.

The importance of precaution and care, and the tremendous danger of neglect of care and precaution, are illustrated in the origin of the recent disastrous forest fires in British Columbia. A man dropped a lighted match, without the precaution of seeing that it was put out, upon the dry leaves on the shore of a British Columbia lake, on the 8th of last July, and passed on. Within an hour a fierce forest fire was raging, and the flames spread till they ended the work of extinction of a small army of men.

One lighted match dropped without the precaution of extinction, spread ruin and loss of millions of dollars over fifteen square miles of magnificent forest. In the same month a "dottle" of lighted tobacco dropped upon the grassy floor of a tent started a forest fire that not only destroyed millions of feet of timber, but caused the loss of eleven human lives.

The carelessness, lack of precaution, lack of looking ahead, that causes forest fires, is not confined to campers and tourists, but even affects municipal corporations.

In the average municipal corporation, lack of precaution, lack of looking ahead, and lack of providing definite system and practice, cause ineffective work and unnecessary expenditure of the people's money, in remedying conditions that precaution, foresight and adoption of system, would have provided against.

From failure of providing a grade plan of all the streets of the upon the city twenty-five years ago, at a very trifling cost, thousands of dollars have been wastefully expended in remedying mistakes in levels in the construction of permanent sidewalks.

Lack of precaution and foresight have even present day results. At the meeting of the Board of Works on Wednesday night, a citizen complained that a sidewalk had been constructed higher than his property.

The city may have to fill in the property, but if a grade plan had been adopted and in force, the man in building would know where the walk level was, would build accordingly, have the responsibility, and the city would be free.

There were complaints of "ditches" on certain streets being too deep, something that will have to be remedied; with cost to the city that would have been avoided if, when the street were graded, plan and system had been in force, and had been applied.

Other complaints of defective street drainage were presented—complaints due to lack of foresight in providing adequate drainage when the street was being graded.

A citizen was given permission to remove two "objectionable" trees in front of his residence. Adoption of precaution and plan would have prevented the existence of "objectionable" trees. If the city should assume as it should do, and should have done years ago, the responsibility of planting street trees, trees of the right kind, would be of would have been planted—trees of the right kind at proper distances apart, and on the proper lines.

Street tree planting, street construction, sidewalk building, or any other form of civic enterprise, to be lastingly satisfactory, to be exempt from perpetual tinkering; to be economical; to best serve the public interests, must be the results of properly conducted system, the fruit of precaution, forward vision, that provides not only for the present, but guarantees the future.

Foresight is the characteristic of true statesmanship, whether it is applied to ruling the state, or running a city, or a city department—something that looks to and provides for the future, and the probable contingencies incident to every human enterprise.

What a tremendous smash of the universe we should have if the system that guides without collision, or even friction, suns and worlds rolling through space, were for a moment replaced by the hap-hazard operation of discordant forces; we should have similar results of friction, imperfect result and comparative smash, in civic, industrial or commercial affairs, that are not subject to good system and executive organization

How can we reconcile the reported fact that potatoes are selling at 60 cents a bag in Perth, with the prices we have to pay in Peterborough, with the biggest local yield in our history to draw from?

WE MUST FILL THE BREACH.

There is being distributed in some places a memorandum written by Lt.-Col. Mulloy, in the spring of 1916. The memorandum purports to show that the voluntary system of recruiting an army is not reliable when the whole man force of a nation is required, and that it is contrary to the principles of democracy— equality of rights requiring equality of service. Academically regarded, these contentions are to be conceded as sound principles.

The voluntary system may be, theoretically, undemocratic, but it is democratic to the extent that it represents liberty of action in the subject, as opposed to the aristocratic or autocratic principle of force. And the results in the way of fighting forces commend voluntarism. By it the best manhood, the largest will and capacity of service are enlisted, and it provides the bravest and best troops in the world. The Canadian volunteer forces ,and those of other Dominions, though comparatively raw levies, have time and again, not only held their place before but have overcome numerically superior forces, called to forced service—conscripted—and subjected to years of drill and training. Is it for a moment assumable that the soldiers Canada sent to the battle front, would have compiled the splendid record they have done, if they had been driven to the battle lines, instead of having gone there with the splendid elan of the spirit of voluntary service that brought them to the ranks?

But, unfortunately, the voluntary movement was not given a fair chance—it lacked government backing, and its spirit was cooled and chilled by government indifference. The young men of the country came to see that what their fellows were fighting for, and what they were willing to fight for—liberty and equality of citizenship—were denied by a government that unduly deferred to the interests of the money classes; that while they were called upon to sacrifice good positions, with good pay, for the sake of the country, they saw that men of wealth were not called upon to sacrifice a fair share of their war gains, but enjoyed special privileges in the way of making money out of the agony of the war; the possible volunteer naturally argued that if the government favored wealth to the point of throwing the great burden of defence upon the working man, the working man would stick to his good pay. This position is not defensible, but it was the outcome of facts, and voluntary recruiting slowed down and became practically extinct under government official neglect of the interests of voluntary recruiting.

If voluntary recruiting were undemocratic and ineffective, and not the true policy, and if conscription were the only right policy, why has it taken the government three years to discover the undemocratic and, consequently, unpatriotic character of the voluntary system—no, spirit—for the government has never made a system of it—not been sooner discovered, and the democratic character of conscription not sooner been recognized? If conscription, enforced service, is the only truly democratic way of raising an army; the only effective means through which Canada can be brought to a full discharge of her bolstered duty, then the government deserves more blame for neglecting to employ it sooner, than credit for employing it as a last resort after three years of war?

But conscription is the law of the land, and every law-abiding citizen is called upon to fall in with its requirements and help give it effect. Parties in Parliament were partially divided as to its adoption, but both parties are a unit in cooperation with a view to its enactment, which is now so necessary.

Through government neglect and lack of interest, and lack of encouragement, voluntary recruiting languished and failed; but we must raise another army to go to the help of our Canadian soldiers in France, and we shall need two to one of new material to equal the splendid material that has won victories and reflected credit on Canada, and equalled, and bettered the best traditions of the unconquerable British soldier. In doing this, there have been many breaks in the ranks—we must fill the breach.

In former wars the "forlorn hope"—soldiers for the most desperate and dangerous service—was composed of volunteers.

Well, I don't want to go back again if I can help it. There is a lot there who have staff jobs who have never seen France; they should send them over. I can tell you Jim the people do not know one-quarter what our boys have to go through. Well, Jim, I think this is all this time. Remember me to the Chief and the boys; hoping Peterborough is still in the best of pink. Well, I'll say Au Revoir.

General Steele to the G. W. V. A.

Major W. P. Purney, president of the Great War Veterans' of Canada, has received a letter from Major-General S. B. Steele, general officer commanding troops at Shorncliffe, in which he says:

"I understand that you are at the head of a strong organization to protect the interests of Canadian returned soldiers. Being on active service, I cannot, of course, ask you to add my name to the rolls of your organization, but I take this opportunity of saying that every officer, N.C.O. and man will certainly approve the action taken by you and your colleagues and appreciate the great work you have in hand.

"If Canada amounts to anything in this war and afterwards it will be time to her soldiers who have come over to the Empire's call at great sacrifice.

"Wishing you great success in the movement, believe me to be faithfully yours,

(Signed) S. B. STEELE,
Maj.-Gen., G.O.C.,

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSIC AND THE CHILDREN'S HOUR.

After tea, when father has glanced over the evening paper, comes the hour with the children. It is a romp and fun and stories until the kiddies' bedtime. It is astonishing how many read some well written story to their children every night with the idea of giving the young minds information about nature study, or of impressing principles of unselfishness, kindness to animals, industry, desire for travel, the love of pictures and so on.

What better opportunity is there than that very time to sow the seeds of love for music. Every child has the love of music born in him. It has to be, in the scheme of things. As a mother said of her boy, while she could hardly chain him to the piano, he would follow a brass band to the other end of the town, no matter what game or playmates he had to leave to do so. The capacity for music is there; it is simply a case of diverting it into the right channel.

There are homes where there is an endeavour to have the children hear some music every day. It may be the mother singing some simple hymns, or the father playing, or the fiddle or the guitar or the ukulele; it may be some suitable melodies on the talking machine or the player piano, but let it be music and let the children have some of it every day.

Fun and stories and music—that is the children's hour.

MUSIC AND MACHINERY.

Near Aylmer in the old days there was a saw mill managed by a Civil War veteran. The man in charge of the saw was continually running into trouble, and during one week he had been forced to take the saw to town to get it set. The owner of the mill asked the veteran the reason for these frequent breakdowns, and got a complete answer: "The durn fool has no ear for music. He cannot tell when things are going wrong." It has been said often that while a stoker works with his hands, an engineer works with his ear. The man who sits before a complicated machine should be able to tell instantaneously if an abnormal sound begins to rise from it. If his ear has not been trained, the probability is that the machine will develop serious internal disorders. A Toronto electrician in charge of a battery of big dynamos attributes his success to the fact that when he was young his parents gave him a long course of violin lessons, thus developing in him a keen sense of the values and inter-relations of sound. Here is a suggestion for parents whose boys have shown mechanical ability and who have indicated a bent for some form of technical training. Let the lad's ear be trained, by a violin course. He will be a better mechanician and a better workman. Besides he will have a hobby that will bring him unending delight as long as he lives.

MUSIC—AND THE BEING-WELL-DRESSED PRINCIPLE.

Cheap tools will produce cheap workmanship is a principle that may be just as properly enunciated in music as in any other sphere. That what is worth doing is worth doing well also holds good in music. Parents starting a son or daughter on a period of musical education would be well advised to remember that with a cheap teacher, practicing on a cheap piano, using cheap music and basing the child's study on a cheap idea of music, can produce nothing but cheap results.

A man does not wear good clothes so much for what others will think of him—he wears them because being well dressed gives him more confidence in himself without which he is unlikely to ever accomplish anything worth while. The chief value of a musical education lies in what it does for the persons themselves. Proficiency in music is a goal to be longed for, the best of returns for hard work, something for which one will never cease to thank those who made its attainment possible.

With this thought in mind the greatest inspirer of confidence, and the greatest help in maintaining that viewpoint is a good teacher, a good piano, and good music. A great heart-break with teachers is the too prevalent notion that anything is good enough to practice on. She tries to show a pupil's parents that the old worn-out square piano is creating a false standard of tone in the child's ear; or maybe it is a newer instrument badly out of tune, but she meets with the same discouragement—"Oh, anything will do to practice on. When Mary can play tunes we'll get something better."

At the very beginning is when the true standard is most needed. It is then that the untrained ear is most susceptible to correct or incorrect tones. Yes, musical education is influenced by the "good" or "cheap" idea just the same as a man is by the clothes he wears.

OH! THAT TREMULO VOICE.

The funny papers have lost many an opportunity to tickle the public's fancy by concentrating on the Farmer Corntossel and mother-in-law puns to the neglect of the way in which young ladies aim at imitating the tremulo stop on the organ when they "come out" in the singing world. Sayde joins the choir of the church her parents attend, and a couple of weeks later when asked to sing for some friends she renders one of the standard songs endeavoring to add to its effect by making use of what one gentleman calls the cinematographic vocal wobble.

By what he means the forced tremulo so frequently heard among amateurs. Why they do that is hard to say. Back of the practice is the same amount of reason there is in some of our current fashions; and what that is, is past explanation. The affected tremulo voice is not a recent habit as is aeroplaning, submarining and wirelessing. It was known in Mozart's day. We read that at one time Mozart wrote: "Nothing can be more truly odious; besides, it is a style of singing quite contrary to nature. The human voice is naturally tremulous, but only so far as to be beautiful, and it is imitated not only on wind instruments, but on stringed instruments and even on the piano forte. But the moment the proper boundary is passed it is no longer beautiful, because it becomes unlike an organ when the bellows are panting." And, Mozart's view is held by some people to-day.

This great man says the affectation of the tremulo is not natural, and surely singing that is unnatural does not amount to much.

Mr. Richard J. Devey

HEINTZMAN & CO., LIMITED

B. H. Britton, Manager, Peterboro

The Heintzman & Co. Piano Preferred

Music in the home, to be at its best, needs the best of musical instruments, and to meet this requirement the Heintzman piano is demanded.

The judgment of the best musicians—those who have to use a piano—is deserving of the best attention; and the concert stage artists for solo execution show their appreciation by specifying the Heintzman piano. This was demonstrated in Peterborough, recently, as it has been many times demonstrated all over Canada.

The piano chosen for the Dorothy Allan recital, on Monday night, and for the Hollingshead Concert Company, at Conservatory Hall, last night, was the Heintzman—a beautiful "art upright classic." It was furnished by the Heintzman Company, Limited, through Mr. B. H. Britton, manager Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter street.

The appreciation and preference of distinguished musicians for the Heintzman piano for concert work is proof that it is superior for giving the best results in the most important domain—Music in the Home.

Representatives of two of our musical institutions—Prof. Allan and Mr. Gliddon—spoke very highly of the excellence of the Heintzman & Co. instruments used on the two above occasions.

Next Meeting Will Be in October —Omemee Happenings

OMEMEE, Sept. 12.—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. R. Cornwall, on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 11. The meeting was opened by singing "The Opening Ode." The President, Mrs. H. Magee, occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, after which the business was dealt with. The appointing of a delegate to the W. I. Convention at Toronto was left over until the October meeting. Short clippings were read by Mrs. Harry Lamb, Mrs. Stanley Sluggett, Mrs. Jos. Shields, and Miss Lila Parsons, after which the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. Refreshments were then served and a social half-hour spent. The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Harry Lamb.

Dogs May Run Out On Leash If Muzzled

A Saving Clause in the Dog By-law —Another Month of Quarantine

Another month under quarantine regulations was the additional penalty imposed on dogs at a meeting of the City Council held last evening. Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, appeared before the Committee and stated that the dog which one week ago was reported by its owner to have died of spinal paralysis, was actually a case of rabies. Dr. Amys suggested another month.

Ald. Stratton asked that the dogs be permitted out on leash.

The Council was informed that the existing by-law permits dogs on the street provided they are properly muzzled and secured by a strong leash. "Some of the dog owners are not aware of this privilege," said Mayor Duffus.

DISTRICT MEETING OF THE METHODIST CHURCH

Pontypool Church is to Be Purchased If Possible From Presbyterian Authorities—Jan. 3rd Social Service Day.

AN INSPIRING ADDRESS

The Financial District meeting of the Peterborough District of the Methodist Church took place yesterday in Trinity Methodist Sunday School, every minister in the district being present, and representative laymen from almost all the circuits.

The claims were received for the year from the General Conference officers and accepted by the district.

The 3rd of January was set aside by the district to be devoted to the Department of Social Service and Evangelism under the direction of Rev. W. Higgs, district secretary for that department.

Plans were laid for the next district meeting to be held on November 14th, in Millbrook for the purpose of planning evangelistic and aggressive Sunday School work.

The missions of the district were recommended to favourable consideration of the General Mission Board.

Purchase Pontypool Church.

The chairman of the district Rev. B. I. Greatrix, and Rev. J. P. Wilson were appointed to confer with a similar committee, representative of the Presbytery, regarding the purchase of the Pontypool Presbyterian Church which has been closed.

Afternoon Session.

The time of the afternoon session was largely devoted to a most eloquent and statesmanlike speech by Rev. Mr. Saunby, who has devoted the better part of his life to missionary work in Japan. In his speech Mr. Saunby said that the appeal of the Far East was for two things—Justice and Appreciation. He told of the world menace which threatens to arise from the national differences of Japan and China. Mr. Saunby was heartily thanked for his most interesting address and his splendid services in the Mission field.

Campaign Arranged For.

A missionary campaign extending over three Sundays was planned for October 28th, and November 4th and 11th. The district has entered most enthusiastically into securing their share of the necessary advance for the programme of the General Mission Board.

To Compile History.

Rev. Dr. McKee was appointed to compile a history of the Peterborough District Methodist Church for the Methodist Missionary Society.

Communicate With Hanna.

The question of the advisability of the Methodist Church taking action in a campaign against the brewing of liquors from grain, which is at the present crisis needed totally for food, was considered and the secretary authorized to communicate with Mr. Hanna upon the subject.

General Exchange of Pulpits.

A general exchange of pulpits in the Peterborough District will be made on Sunday, October 28th.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Miss Littlefield, who has been engaged at the Y. W. C. A. in Harriston, Ont., during the summer, has returned to Peterborough, and will resume her classes in Gymnasium work on the first of October.

A First Aid class is forming, under the auspices of the St. John's Ambulance Association, the lectures to be given by Dr. G. S. Cameron. The First Aid course will be followed by a course of lectures in Home Nursing. Examinations will be held and diplomas awarded from the St. John's Ambulance Association. The class will commence about the first of October, and it is advisable that those who are interested should register at once.

Classes are also being formed for the study of literature and expression, under the direction of Miss Winnifred Parker, who will give class and private lessons in elocution, interpretation and dramatic art.

Fire Protection For the Quaker Oats Plant—Permission to Erect Canopy

At a special meeting of the City Council last evening Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill was granted permission to erect a canopy over the entrance to the new apartments recently constructed by Mr. Goodwill. The Council intimated that future construction of this nature will not be permitted unless the plans are approved by the Council before the work is begun. Ald. Smith objected to the methods of local contractors in erecting parts of buildings and then asking the Council for the necessary permission. He referred to the sun parlours which jut out on the south side of the building. The canopy has yet to be erected.

Deline Responsibility.

It was reported to the City Council that Annie Deline, who was recently sent to the Mercer reformatory from this city, had been admitted as a patient in the Toronto General Hospital, and that the city would be liable for her maintenance. The city declines to be held responsible and will refer the matter to the proper authorities.

A recommendation from the Board of Health respecting the erection of a sewer on Dufferin street, will be referred to the Board of Health.

Fire Protection.

The Quaker Oats Company desire to encircle their plant with an eight inch water main for fire protection purposes. It is proposed to make one connection on Hunter street and another from a new main partly constructed in East City. This would give the company two independent sources of supply and would not leave them handicapped as they were when the water main broke at the time of the big fire. To make the East City connection it will be necessary to construct a new stretch of water main. The matter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light committee with instructions to report back to the Council.

Clean Up Days.

The secretary of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs addressed a communication to the Council calling attention to the proposed inauguration of two "clean-up and fire prevention days" in each year. On each of the two days the citizens will be asked to co-operate with the authorities in cleaning up their premises and removing all possible cause of fire due to the accumulation of refuse. One day will be held in May and the other in October. The letter was received.

A letter was received from Robert Reid calling the Council's attention to the condition of Brown street due to the traffic created by the Quaker Oats Company's trucks in operating between the plant and the gravel pit. An application of oil was recommended for the street. The matter will be looked into by the chairman of the Board of Works, also that portion of Water street north of the G.T.R. tracks.

Ald. Smith reported the absence of light on Hunter street. The matter will be referred to Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission.

SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

The first service of the Harvest Festival services in St. John's Church was held at 10 a.m. this morning, when the Holy Communion was celebrated by the Rev. Walter Archbold, D.D. A selection of Harvest and Thanksgiving hymns was played on the chimes by Mr. R. J. Davey after the service.

Choral Evensong and Sermon tonight at 8 p.m.

All-Star Concert An Artistic Triumph

The golden voice of Mr. Redferne Hollinshead, the brilliant playing of Mr. Richard Tattersall and the dramatic readings of Mr. Harold R. Hollinshead, combined to make the concert in the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening a treasure trove of good things (musically). All three) artists scored heavily and the all-star combination resulted in a programme that was not only generous in quantity, and varied in character, but uniform in excellence. The audience was not as large as it should have been, but was appreciative to a degree and the artists received a hearty reception.

Mr. Redferne Hollinshead who has on many occasions in the past delighted a Peterborough audience was in splendid voice last evening. All his numbers were sung finely presented and it is difficult to select his most pleasing offering, although he perhaps arose to his greatest height of success in the stirring "Vesti la giubba" from Pagliacci, in which the wonderful qualities of his beautiful tenor voice displayed to fullest advantage. Other numbers that were most delightful were "Oh, Thou Billowy Harvest Field," a translation of Rachmaninoff's song and "Jeune Fillethe" a rollicking old French folk song. All Mr. Hollinshead's numbers were encored One of his recall numbers a new version of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was one of the most enjoyable of the programme.

Duets by the Messrs. Hollinshead were an appreciated feature. Their opening offering was the ever popular "Excelsior," which was most delightfully sung. Later on the two splendid voices were heard to advantage in a number from Bizet's "I Pescatori de Perle." As an encore "Drink to me only with Thine Eyes" was given.

Mr. Harold Hollinshead proved most successful as a character delineator. His Dickens' monologue introducing characters from "David Copperfield," "The Old Curiosity Shop" and "The Tale of Two Cities" was given in costume and was a treat, indeed, the portrayal of the difficult characters being decidedly clever. Mr. Hollinshead's dramatic reading of Longfellow's poem "King Robert of Sicily" was another proof of his ability as an entertainer and he showed his versatality by giving the old English favourite "Please Pass the Salt."

Mr. Tattersall had his full share of the honours of the evening. In addition to perfectly filling the arduous task of accompanist, he contributed hugely to the enjoyment of the occasion by his brilliant solo numbers. His opening number Chopin's "Scherzo in B flat" captivated his audience and an encore was enthusiastically demanded. He was equally successful in his Lisat numbers and in the "Hungarian Rhapsody No. II." especially scored a triumph. This number was probably his best of the evening and revealed him as a wonderful pianist whom last night's audience would be glad to have more opportunity to hear.

Excelsior — Balfe — Redferne and Harold R. Hollinshead.

Scherzo in B. flat Minor—Chopin—Richard Tattersall.

"Vesti la giubba" (Canio's Lament) from Pagliacci— Leoncavallo — Redferne Hollinshead.

(a) Liebe's Traume—Lisat.

(b) Hungarian Rhapsody No. II.—Lisat.

Mr. Tattersall

(a) Oh, Thou Billows Harvest Field—Rachmaninoff.

(b) "Jeune Fillethe"—Weckerlin.

(c) "Mattenaha"—De Crescenzo.

Redferne Hollinshead.

King Robert of Sicily—Longfellow.

Harold R. Hollinshead

The piano used throughout the concert was a Heintzman, kindly loaned by Mr. B. H. Britton, manager of Heintzman Hall.

U. S. Artillery Now in France

Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. P. Pegler, J. P. Staff Correspondent.

Headquarters of the American Army in France, Sept. 13.—American artillery was on the job to-day, blasting away at distant tree tops, and scarring grazing fields with practice volleys.

(This is the first word that has been received indicating that American artillery has arrived in France and is training for the battle line.)

London Soldier Killed Spy Who Had Dishonoured Him

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The unwritten law case is sharing space in the newspapers with the Stockholm revelation and the Korniloff-Kerensky crisis. Lieut. Malcolm was charged at the Old Bailey with the murder of Anton Baumberg, the bogus Count de Borch, for carrying on an intrigue with Mrs. Malcolm while the husband was at the front in France. There is an imposing array of counsel. Malcolm has plenty of money. Counsel for the prosecution warned the jury that there was no such thing in law as the unwritten law. He admitted that Malcolm had learned from Scotland Yard that Baumberg was engaged in the white slave traffic, and was probably a German spy, but counsel stated that no provocation by words was sufficient to reduce the crime of murder to manslaughter.

"Except a statement by the wife admitting adultery by her," was remarked by the judge.

Two points were brought out in the evidence. One was that Baumberg bought a pistol, and said he would use it against Malcolm if the latter tried to thrash him a second time. Malcolm knew this and made his will, leaving his estate to his wife. Before the final tragedy Malcolm's wife and Baumberg were preparing to leave the country when the lieutenant got leave from the front and returned to England to prevent such action. An unexpected sensation was caused when the secretary of the Junior Conservative Club testified that the German woman with whom Baumberg had been living had been suspected of spying and been caught by French police and, "I understand, shot."

This woman was known as Mrs. Meyer, alias Baroness Vernenberg, and was said at the inquest to have come from New York

SLEUTHS IN KINGSTON WITH LOADED RIFLES

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 8.—With loaded rifles five Montreal detectives were in the city over night and till noon yesterday combing the city and district for two men wanted in connection with the recent dynamiting outrages at Montreal. They could get no clue of the men wanted here, and left for Napanee and points west to continue the search. It is said that four Kingston young men returning from Gananoque, while stalled on the roadside, saw a grey car with two men and a girl travelling at the rate of sixty miles an hour on Thursday night.

One new fashion feature among evening gowns is the slanting girdle.

Hon. Ed. Brown For New Cabinet

It is Believed in Winnipeg That He Will Be Manitoba's Representative

Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WINNIPEG, Sept. 13.—The hurried departure of Hon. Edward Brown, Provincial Treasurer, for Ottawa, for a conference with Sir Robert Borden on Union Government, gives rise to the belief that he will be Manitoba's representative in the new Borden cabinet. "Borden is willing to accept Brown, but not Hon. A. H. Hudson," said a prominent local politician, who declared that it was because the Western Liberals desire to have Hudson included in the slate that Union Government negotiations are tied up at the present time. If Brown is accepted at the expense of Hudson, local Liberals declare that neither J. A. Calder of Regina, nor T. A. Crerar, of Winnipeg, will be in the new cabinet. Brown has been outspoken right along for a Union Government, with Borden as Premier. He has two sons overseas.

Shot Dog That Worried His Sheep

A dog, which it is claimed belonged to Mr. Porter, of South Ops, was shot and killed by Mr. Wm. Skuce, of Manvers, who also owns property in Ops, near the boundary. Mr. Skuce, it is reported, saw the dog after it had killed his sheep and forthwith despatched it with a rifle bullet.

From reports it is said that a lawsuit will eminate out of the shooting.

According to the Ontario statutes, it is understoo ddogs can be shot any time when caught worrying or running sheep, and all dogs found on other than their owner's premises after dark can be destroyed with impunity by the party upon whose property the dog is found.

DISTINGUISHED ORGANIST COMING TO PETERBORO'

Mr. H. A. Fricker, organist and choirmaster, Metropolitan Church, Toronto, will give an organ recital in Peterborough, some time early in October.

Mr. Fricker is described as one of the greatest of living organists. He was organist of the city of Leeds, and gave frequent recitals in Victoria Hall, on one of the largest organs in England.

He is a musician of great reputation and after months of search and investigation, was selected by Mr. Voght as the new leader of the noted Mendelsshon Choir, of Toronto, so that his musical capabilities must be of the highest.

Some Peterborough gentlemen have secured Mr. Fricker to give an organ recital in Peterborough, in the interests of patriotic funds, on a date, in October, and place to be announced later.

Peerless Specimen of the "Tree Hydrangea"

Mr. Walter Scott, has the lawn of his residence, 548 Charlotte street ornamented with what can be safely claimed to be the finest "tree hydrangea" or hydrangea paniculata in the city. If there is a better it would be interesting to know it. It stands near the street and attracts the attention and elicits the admiring comment of every observant passer-by. The shrub is a venerable one, yet perfectly sound; and healthy to exuberance, with a trunk between three and four inches in diameter near the ground. Its beautiful symmetrically irregular branches, the growth evenly balanced in all directions, have a spread of more than ten feet, and they are a veritable mass of beautiful bloom, some of the panicles being more than a foot in length. It stands, a beautiful sight, with its hundreds of blooms, of glowing white, delicately tinted with the rose pink of the early frost.

IF PRUSSIA WINS SLAVERY IS SURE TO BE REVIVED

Candid Review of Conditions We Are Up Against—What Would Happen Should We Fail—Only a Complete Victory Can Save Europe From Future Disaster.

"If Prussia comes out of this war unconquered, slavery will re-arise in Europe.

"The power of the people to order their lives, the power of acting from below, the renascence of human dignity in the mass, is lost. Of such magnitude is this war. Upon such a side is this business upon which we all in our various capacities are engaged. And those who continue to think of this war in terms of the old diplomacy, of arrangement for this and for that, of whether this decayed family or that shall nominally wear a Crown and the rest of it, are like children playing with toys when there is mortal illness in the house.

"Take care. We are within the next few months to decide whether all that we have known as Europe and all that we have known as England is to continue or no, and if the siege is not prosecuted to its full conclusion, and if complete victory is not attained, we have lost."

So says Mr. Hilaire Belloc in a powerful article in Land and Water, and the assumptions and facts on which he bases these grave statements will meet with general assent.

"For the war to end without the defeat of Prussia would mean that the generations to come, I know not for how long a time, would suffer increasingly from the Prussian flavour and be tinged with the Prussian colour," says Mr. Belloc. "It is so and has always been so in Europe when something which has challenged Europe has proved victorious in arms.

New Acts In War.

"But let us go into points more concrete and detailed. The war has produced more strikingly than anything else a number of new acts in war, which may or may not become precedents.

"The enemy has made use of weapons which had been thought ruled out of our civilization. He has used treachery. He has torn up treaties. He has used poison. He has tortured prisoners He has enslaved. He has murdered non-combatants. He has sunk innumerable non-combatant ships without warning, neutral as well as allied. He has terrorized civilians by the bombardment of open towns. If these things remain without punishment they have come to stay. There are those who say that they have come to stay in any case. I am not of their opinion. As it seems to me, history proves the power of the human mind to recover itself and to be rid of abnormal evil. But only upon the condition that abnormal evil is made to suffer something that shall be a lesson to it and a warning. We know how it is with an individual life. A man will sink slowly into a habit which destroys his soul. By what is he rescued? Not by argument or by persuasion. But by a shock, some great suffering, some moral proof of the difference between what he was and what he is wakes him up. So it will be with Europe. If those who have done these things are heavily punished for them —and only military success can secure that effect— I do not believe that they will rearise in Europe.

If There is No Punishment.

"But if there is no punishment then war has changed into a much more evil thing than our race ever knew before and into a thing that will be wholly destructive to our civilization.

Consider for a moment what will follow if these things do become precedents and if the future regards what has been gradually imposed upon modern war by Germany as actions normal to all war.

"Of the effect upon this country there can be no doubt. It will be at the mercy of constant immediate unforceable attack upon its merchandise by sea and upon its civilian population by air. The strain of preparation against such attack, awful as it was before 1914, will become far greater than ever it was before. The instability from which Europe suffered for so long will become something worse than instability. It will become (and the process of its coming will not last long) a sort of toppling; a crash that may come at any moment.

"We can, if we will, but only by a complete victory, eliminate the thing for good. We can make it impossible for it to enter the mind of the European that he should torture or ansold enslave, that he should murder upon the high seas, that he should break a treaty with impunity. But that change of the mind has for its absolutely necessary condition military success complete success in the field.

What Would Happen.

"Consider, again, what sort of nations those would be who would arise in this new and Prussianised Europe. There would be a Poland no doubt. It would be a Poland moderated and controlled from Berlin. That is inevitable. It would be forbidden access to the sea. It would be mutilated. It would be under tutelage.

"There would be a Scandinavian group—a Holland and perhaps a Belgium, but not one of those five small nations would exist save at the will of the German organization, of which they would be the fringe.

"There would be a France, as there will always be, but it would be a France that said to itself 'I was beaten once in war. In the second occasion I made the brunt of the fighting. I drove the vastly superior enemy to earth; I wore him down till he was just on breaking point. But the fruit of that vast and salutary effort was not gathered. The Alliance failed, and I received nothing save what I received at the will of my enemies.'

"And there would be an Italy, an Italy that would say, 'I helped the Alliance, and for my reward I have incorporated this or that district which is of my own blood, but the Power which held them once may hold them again, and my seas are not mine own.'

"More especially there would be an England which would say to itself—and the more bitterly because men would hesitate to say it publicly and openly, I accepted the challenge and I fought hard, but I could not do my will, and now at every moment with these new fashions of war I am in peril. My old pride is gone and my old State.'

The Few and The Many.

"It is perhaps wise to conclude such a survey with the most intimate question of all—a question that has exercised the mind of every thinking man in our generation; I mean the relation between the few who possess and the many who work for them.

"What does Europe in which Prussia is the model promise to those who are most concerned with this most vital matter?

"The Prussian attitude towards this tremendous business of domestic or social organization is well known to us. We have seen it, not only in the Prussian losses, but most strikingly in the attitude of the Prussian Socialist party and in, I do not say the unwillingness, but the incapacity of the Prussianised German to act save under orders. His inability to organise from below.

"The modern German conception—the Prussian conception of a settlement in this vast affair, is that the proletarian majority shall be given a certain security and sufficiency by law, but that all power and direction and enjoyment for that matter, shall remain with the possessing few. What we have copied from Prussia in recent years in our legislation is precisely that idea.

That is the Truth.

"No scheme which leaves power—especially economic power — in the hands of the populace has any meaning to the Prussian mind. It conceives of the mass as a herd—to be kept efficient, ordered, trained to work for masters. And the Prussian herd agrees. Well, in the strictest sense of the term that idea means servitude. It means, using the words in their most accurate sense, without rhetoric and without violence, the return of slavery in Europe.

"The thing is so great, the two spirits engaged so overshadow all mankind that one hesitates to write it thus in an ephemeral article lest we should seem to be debating too lightly upon things upon which the future of mankind must turn.

"That is the truth. If Prussia comes out of this war unconquered, slavery will re-arise in Europe," concludes Mr. Belloc.

Doctors Said Operation

When Chatham Lady Suffered From Extreme Nervous Exhaustion — Now Feeling Fine and Working Large Garden.

CHATHAM, Ont. Sept. 13. — This letter will interest every lady reader, because it describes a condition for which many doctors advise an operation. That the operation is often unnecessary and very often leaves the patient an invalid for life is well known.

You will read here of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for this lady and will then understand the great good it is accomplishing in many thousands of similar cases throughout the continent.

Every woman should think long and earnestly before consenting to an operation of this kind. It is a simple matter to give Dr. Chases Nerve Food a trial and the results are almost always entirely satisfactory. You not only avoid the risk and expense of an operation, but find yourself restored to health and vigor.

Mrs. E. M. Ford, 82 Delaware Avenue, Chatham, Ont., writes: "For four years I suffered from my nerves. I was restless and could not sleep well. I had headaches, neuralgic pains through the body and backache. There was a buzzing in my ears and twitching of nerves and muscles. I also had palpitation of the heart, which caused shortness of breath. I was easily tired and always drowsy after eating. When walking or on my feet very much my feet would seem to go dead in my shoes. I consulted two doctors and both told me that I would have to have an examination and probably an operation, but I would not have either. Shortly after this I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I can say I am now feeling fine, I am able to do my household duties without difficulty, and besides this, attend to a half-acre of garden I can go about without that dead feeling in my feet, and am grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for my cure. I think very highly of this medicine, and recommend it to other sufferers whenever I have an opportunity."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Why Reinforcements Are Needed

The Toronto Star says:

There are some who profess to believe that there is a doubt as to the need for the reinforcements that will be raised by the drafting of men. There is no room whatever for any doubt as to that. The direct assurances of Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, in command of the Canadian forces at the front, are sufficient in themselves. Some figures were given out recently by the Department of Militia and Defence which show that our forces abroad have been seriously reduced during 1917, and must be reinforced or they will be unable to continue the part they have been performing in the war.

For the seven months of the year ending with July 31, the enlistments in Canada numbered 44,690, including the 2,642 men recruited in the United States and taken on the strength here. But of the 44,690 enlistments, only 16,367 men were for the infantry. The casualties for the same period of seven months numbered 37,971. Here are the figures:

Enlistment, C.E.F., Canada.

	Infantry.	All Others.	Total Enlist.
January	5,707	3,487	9,184
February	2,356	4,451	6,807
March	2,286	4,354	6,640
April	1,794	3,536	5,330
May	1,208	5,199	6,407
June	1,566	4,753	6,348
July	1,419	2,463	3,882

July	1,638	3,637

During those seven months there were 37,971 casualties overseas and 15,300 men discharged in Canada, mostly, we suppose, after having been sent home. The heaviest casualties are in the infantry, not only on account of the service they are in, but because the infantry is most numerous, and is, in fact, the main body of the army. The casualties of the seven months are shown to be nearly three times as many as the enlistments in Canada for the main body of the army. Not only so, but since July 31 recruiting has practically ceased. But the casualties have not. On August 21 at Hill 70 the Canadian casualties for one day were 2,300, and there and around Lens the losses have been twelve or fifteen thousand.

There is a fifth division in England, filled with troops in training. It was hoped that this division could be sent across the Channel to serve as a division in reserve, so that with five divisions there, four could be in the line and one in rest, or so that there could be brigades in reserve for the divisions in the line. This fifth division has already been drawn upon for reinforcements, and last week it was reported that Gen. Sir Arthur Currie's visit to England was in connection with the probable abandonment of the fifth division in view of the necessity for the heavy reinforcements of the four divisions in the field.

No matter how soon drafts are made in Canada, and no matter how speedily the work of assembling and training may now proceed, there is going to be difficulty this fall in keeping the forces at the front reinforced, as every man there has a right to expect that they will be reinforced by the country they represent.

A Pair of Prolific Red June Plum Trees

Miss Carver, 592 Charlotte street, has, in a little back garden, a pair of Red June plum trees that have nobly responded to the national call of greater production. From the two trees she has gathered 215 quarts or nearly seven bushells of beautifully formed and perfect plums. The trees were so heavily laden that the burdened branches had to be supported by props and stayed by wires. Miss Carver's care and cultivation may have a good deal to do with this excellent yield, for, alongside one of the trees a few days ago was to be seen a trellis of sweet peas so plentifully studded with vari-coloured bloom that hardly a leaf of the foliage was visible—probably the most prolific stand of sweet pea bloom in the city.

Mid-week Meeting Was A Great Success

Evangelist Harper Delivers an Impassioned Address

Harold Harper dealt in a impassioned exposition of Matt XI. 28-30 with God's marvelous provision for human need at Gospel Hall. The text was "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." He dealt first with the "person who invites." Showing his dignity as the Son of David and the Son of God. He was promised, said the speaker from the beginning of the history of the race after sin had entered and man began his long career downward. As each succeeding prophet came upon the scene they each spoke of One who was to come who would redeem the people by His death. One day an old man, Simeon, by name, came into the temple and saw a mother bringing in a babe. Taking up the babe he said, "Lord now lettest thy servant depart in peace for my eyes have seen thy Salvation." It was the long promised Messiah. Thus He came, and lived, but at last He died upon a Cross in order to redeem mankind. Continuing Mr. Harper spoke about the people who were invited. It was the weary, heavy laden ones sin brings unrest—for we read the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest. "How many restless hearts are here to-night," he said, "who need to accept this loving invitation." Following this he spoke about the "purpose of the invitation." To give rest from sins penalty and power and in a coming day from sins presence. He closed with an earnest appeal to all unsaved ones to come to the Lord Jesus Christ.

To-night Mr. Harper will speak on the subject, "A Religious Man, earnest and zealous, but lost." Meetings are opened with a song service at 8 o'clock. The public are invited to attend.

Fire Chief's Resignation Is Accepted

visability of dropping the investigation. "The strings of this affair appear to reach out further than many of you are aware," said Alderman Dobbin. "As chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee I realize that whether the Fire Chief is guilty or not he will have to go. If we retain him we will never have the same loyalty of service in the Fire Hall. We will have to get another fire chief as soon as possible. Would this committee be willing to accept the Chief's resignation and drop the matter?"

Alderman Duncan — "Did he hand his resignation to you Alderman Dobbin?"

Alderman Dobbin—"That is hardly the point. Would you accept the proposal I have outlined."

"That is for this Committee to decide," said Mayor Duffus.

"That is a question that should be answered," said Alderman Duncan.

Alderman Dobbin—"I will present his resignation to the meeting if the investigation is dropped."

The Facts.

Alderman Duncan—"As an alderman of the city I felt that something should be done. I did not get the necessary backing at the last Council meeting when I asked for the Chief's resignation. I would be willing to accept the resignation, but I think the investigation should go on. Now we are ready the public should know the facts."

Alderman Weir—"I think it would be all right to accept the resignation."

Alderman Stratton—"We as Aldermen have to protect the city. The Chief is an officer of the city and the city pays him. He is under our jurisdiction. As an officer of the city we should go into the matter fully while he is an officer. If he has resigned he is no longer an officer of the city, and there is no reason for continuing the investigation."

Alderman Smith—"I went into the matter fully in regard to the question of evidence, and I doubt if any of it could be proven in a court of law. I would move that the resignation be accepted and the matter dropped." This was seconded by Alderman Saunders.

"The resolution having been moved and seconded, I hand you the resignation Mr. Mayor," said Alderman Dobbin drawing the envelope containing the document from his pocket.

"The aldermen are not satisfied and I think they should hear the evidence," said Alderman Duncan.

Alderman Smith—"None of the evidence has been given under oath and there is no evidence in hand that would make me cast my vote against the Chief."

"Goes Out Guilty."

Alderman Worth—"It seems rather a pity that the Chief is putting his resignation in that way. He goes out as guilty."

"It is his own choice," observed Alderman Dobbin.

Alderman Taylor—"I went to a lot of trouble to get the evidence, and I think the citizens are entitled to know what has been going on."

It was moved and seconded that the Fire Chief's resignation take effect at once and not in a month's time as specified by the Chief in his letter. The Chief was communicated with on the telephone and he agreed to the change. He was asked to go to the City Buildings and revise the original copy which he did a few minutes later.

Alderman Duncan's motion to have the evidence heard was defeated.

Action Confirmed.

The Committee then adjourned and the Aldermen reassembled in the Council Chamber as a council and confirmed the action of the Committee in recommending the acceptance of the resignation.

A little probing on the part of Alderman Stratton and the Mayor revealed the fact that Alderman Dobbin had a suggesion to make which in effect was that George Grange, now caretaker at the Armouries, be temporarily appointed to the position. Alderman Dobbin did not think that the present assistant chief was competent to grapple with a big fire.

Alderman Smith said he had no objection to George Grange taking charge, but he was not convinced that he was a capable man for the position of Chief of the Fire Department.

Mayor Duffus intimated his intention of supporting Mr. Grange for the position of Fire Chief. "I will support him until he falls down," said the Mayor.

Alderman Smith said he was willing to employ Mr. Grange strictly on his merit.

The Mayor and Alderman Dobbin were instructed by the Council to employ Mr. Grange at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars a year. The permanence of the position will altogether depend upon the qualifications shown by Mr. Grange during the remainder of the year.

Names For New Soldiers

Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13—Several names have been suggested for the men to be taken under the Military Service Act. Some favour "Selectives," others suggest "drafted men." All agree that "conscript" is an ugly word and must not be used. The consensus of general opinion seems to be that the men should simply be called soldiers like any other military units and that no distinction, even of name, should be made between the men thus taken and those who enlisted voluntarily.

The funeral of the late George Milne was held yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 191 Sherbrooke street to the Little Lake Cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue, St. Paul's Church, of which deceased was a respected member and the funeral was in charge of the Independent Order of Foresters, of which the deceased was a faithful member. A representation of the employees of the Peter Hamilton Mfg., Co., marched in a body, as did also the pallbearers as a special tribute of honour and respect for deceased. The pallbearers for the Foresters were: Brothers W. G. McKee, J. W. Bayers, and G. W. Powell, and for the Peter Hamilton Co., Messrs. Robert Mulligan, J. Brownlee and J. B. Gillespie.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, including wreathes from Court Chemong 530, I.O.F. The Peter Hamilton Company and from the family and friends.

Names For New Soldiers

Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13—Several names have been suggested for the men to be taken under the Military Service Act. Some favour "Selectives," others suggest "drafted men." All agree that "conscript" is an ugly word and must not be used. The consensus of general opinion seems to be that the men should simply be called soldiers like any other military units and that no distinction, even of name, should be made between the men thus taken and those who enlisted voluntarily.

Council Considers Disposal of Cans

The disposal of tin cans is getting to be a problem in this city. Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, appeared before the Council last evening and suggested that some means be adopted of disposing of tin cans which accumulate rapidly at the hospitals. Dr. Amys said that the cans could be dumped in a vacant lot and rolled with a steam roller, at intervals. Mayor Duffus thought that a portion of the river front owned by the city, could be filled in and valuable land reclaimed. The matter will be looked into.

Juvenile Lodge Of S.O.E. Is Organized

An event of unusual interest took place last evening, when a Juvenile Lodge of the Sons of England was instituted and fittingly celebrated.

Bro. Harry Beal (District Deputy) occupied the President's chair, and conducted the initiatory ceremonies, supported by Bros. Follis, Waram, Wood, Smith, Lemmon, Roberts, Kingdon, Buntin, Wyatt.

There were seventeen boys in line for initiation, they forming the Charter members of the new Lansdowne Juvenile Lodge.

The following are the officers elect:

Worthy President—Rene Follis.
Worthy Vice-President—Cecil A. Church.
Secretary—J. Ralph Turner.
Chaplain—Clifford Smith.
1st Comm.—Louis V. Batchelor.
2nd Comm.—J. W. Batley.
3rd Comm.—Stanley Church.
Inner Guard—Clayton Turner.
Outer Guard—Gordon B. Thomas.
Advisory Committee from Senior Lodge:
Worthy Chief Advisor — Bro. R. Waram.
Worthy Vice Chief Adviser—Bro. A. Follis.
Worthy Sec.-Treas.—Bro. A. Kingdon.
Auditors—Bro. C. Wood, Bro. W. Shiner.
Trustees—Bro. F. Smith, Bro. B. Lemmon.

The business being finished the members adjourned to the dining-room, where a banquet had been prepared to celebrate the occasion. After full justice had been done to the delicacies, Bro. Waram called upon the newly-elected officers to make their maiden speech, which was in every case, excellent, and to the point.

Brothers of the Juvenile Branch of Lansdowne Lodge, S.O.E.B.S.—I thank you for the honour you have done me in electing me your First President. I will endeavour, with your help to be worthy of the confidence you have placed in me. I hope you will all rally round me and give me your support by your presence at all the meetings. Let us uphold the principles that our Mother Country is fighting for at this present time and cherish the memories of those who have fallen, and those who are still fighting for righteousness, liberty and justice. I thank the members of the men's lodge for the help they are giving us and I hope we shall be able to help them in return for their kindness to us. I have nothing more to say at this time. Trusting our Lodge will meet with success in numbers and usefulness.

All of the officers responded as they were called and each one was enthusiastically received.

Mr. Chas. Coleman entertained the boys in several humorous songs and was heartily encored.

Bro. R. Waram then presented badges to the newly initiated members as a gift, after which the happy occasion was brought to a close at 10 p.m. by the singing of the National Anthem.

The installation of officers will take place on Friday evening, Sept. 21st.

Peterboro's Big Fair Is Ready

Flowers and Vegetables.

The flower tent is in its usual location east of the manufacturers' building. It shows an increase in the number, and particularly the general quality of the exhibits. Opposite the west door of the tent Jordan Brothers have a fine display of Coleus, and in the central position an immense exhibit of all kinds of plants. This display was arranged yesterday afternoon, and the care and labour expended on it, thereby enhancing the attractiveness of the flower department, deserves special mention.

On the north side of the tent the Jordan contribution includes rex and flowering begonias, geraniums and ferns completing a display that should win the admiration of every lover of flowers. Opposite the east door, J. H. Callander has another fine show of ferns and kindred plants.

The Peterborough Floral Company have the only exhibit in the decorated table competition. The flowers used are Ophelia roses with smilax streamers. This company has a beautiful design in "Gates Ajar" in which the lovely Ophelia is again used with fine effect. The deep pink roses shown in another design are Russels.

Asters Are Glorious.

Perhaps no single flower is shown in greater profusion and excellence than the aster. Among those showing are Mrs. Tom, Arnott and Mr. A. B. Downer. There are others worthy of mention, but the complete list will appear when the judge, Mr. Wm. Ford, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, makes his awards. Mr. Tom Arnott will apparently give Kitney Bros. a run for the $10 prize to the best collection of vegetables. The former has his display on the south side near the east door, and the Kitney vegetables are near the west door.

The Y.M.C.A. Contest.

Mr. C. H. Meserve had a busy morning arranging the display of potatoes and vegetables submitted in the boys' contest. This is quite an interesting feature and deserves the approval of the public, apart from the special prizes offered.

One prize of $25, offered by Mr. Thos. Barrie, is divided into $12, $8 and $5, to be awarded to the boys showing the largest production. Mr. Joseph Wearing has given three prize for the best collection of six varieties of vegetables grown by boys, and there are the Oke and Smith prizes, solely for potatoes. Early in the season when Great Production was the inspiration, Mr. W. J. Oke distributed Irish Cobbler seed potatoes to boys. Each received one peck, and to the boy showing the greatest yield from that measure Mr. Oke offered a gold watch. Mr. J. E. Smith added a fountain pen, gymnasium running shoes and a jack knife.

This exhibit is just inside the eastern door of the flower tent. The potatoes have been arranged in special containers on the floor, but some of the boys have only a remnant of their crops, having eaten some of the Oke yield. Most of the potatoes are unusually large and altogether make an exhibit that will scarcely be surpassed in the regular Fair contests.

To-morrow's Programme.

Friday, the second day of the Exhibition, will find everything at its height. The afternoon proceedings include a parade from Central Park, headed by the 57th Regimental Band. It will proceed to the Park, where the formal ceremony will be commenced at two o'clock with addresses by Judge Huycke, R. J. Soden, Mayor Duffus and President Gillespie.

Don't Miss the Soldiers' Exhibit.

A visit to this year's fair should not omit the model trench erected by the Great War Veterans' Association. It is back of the dining tents and near it is an interesting display of four hundred war souvenirs. Visitors will, of course, have to imagine the real trench accompaniments of shrapnel, gas, machine-gun sprays, and all the realism the boys who man the trenches experienced.

HARD COAL SHIPMENTS.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 12 — The shipments of anthracite coal for August, as reported to the anthracite bureau of information, amounted to 7,013,996 tons, the second time in the history of anthracite mining that the shipments in any one month exceeded 7,000,000 tons. The August figures are within 85,041 tons of the high-water mark made in June of this year.

"Liberty Motor" For Aeroplanes Evolved By Nation's Experts In "Greatest Achievement Of War"

Mr. Baker Announces Invention of a Standardized Engine the Biggest Problem of America's Programme to Win by Domination of the Air—Dramatic Circumstances Mark Speedy Completion of the Tests.

BIG PROBLEM SETTLED

WASHINGTON, D.C., September 14.—The greatest problem in the way of the ambitious American programme of winning the war by the domination of the air has been solved.. American engineering intelligence, concentrated in Washington, with the experience of foreign and native engineers before it, has evolved an aviation engine that excels any that has been produced under the impetus of war emergency.. It is known as the Liberty motor.

The War Department announced to-day that the most racking tests had been met. One was conducted at the summit of Pike's Peak in order that the effect of altitude on the operation of the engine might be determined. In a recent flying test one of the engines recently set a new American altitude record.

The motor that has been evolved is not only so standardized that the highest degree of quantity production is assured, but it also compares most favourably in power, speed, serviceability and minimum weight with the best that has been produced in Europe.

The manner in which the Liberty motor was designed constitutes, according to the Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, the most striking industrial achievement of the war. American engineers and motor manufacturers joined their forces in producing it. Trade secrets were freely disclosed. The best that was to be had in America was given.

Five Women in the U. S. Call French Ex-Hero Their Husband

ROCHESTER, Sept. 14.—Rochester police are investigating reports received that Luvien D'Hilly, recently arrested at Holley on a charge of bigamy and whose pose as a member of the Lafayette escadrille led the Aero Club of America, had not two but five wives — and perhaps more.

When he was was arrested D'Hilly, admitted that besides Mrs. Helen Geraldine Shabolt D'Hilly, whom he married in Rochester, on June 15, he had a wife and son in Cortland, where he worked as a mechanic in a garage.

One letter received by the chief of police to-day from a woman in New York, claiming to be English born, said: "I married Hilly in London, England, many years ago and am his wife."

Another letter from a St. Louis woman who signed herself "Mrs. Lucien Dudley Hilly," suggested that Hilly be sent to St. Louis "so I can get my hands on him."

A third letter dated "Somewhere in Pennsylvania" notified the police of a "wife of Hilly's in Germany who sacrificed her fortune of $8,000 so that Hilly could receive instructions in aviation."

MEDICAL BOARDS WILL BE READY IN ABOUT TEN DAYS

Col. John H. Moss Explains Some of the Provisions of the Military Service Act—How Employers Can Assist in Carrying Out the Act

TORONTO, Sept. 14. — That the Compulsory Service Act would be enforced "sincerely, fairly, and vigorously," and proclamations issued calling upon men of the first class to report "as soon as practicable" and medical examination boards established in Toronto as well as elsewhere within ten days, were some of the outstanding points in an address by Col.. John H. Moss, member of the Advisory Board in connection with the compulsory draft measure, at a well attended meeting of the Board of Trade in the Royal Bank Building this afternoon.

After explaining some of the provisions of the Act, Col. Moss pointed out five ways in which employers could assist materially in carrying out the Act. He summarized his pointers as follows:

1. Take immediate steps to find out what employees they have within the first class, and ascertain how many of them are physically fit.

2. Refrain from making claims for exemption on behalf of employees unless it is absolutely necessary to do so.

3. Make necessary claims for exemption as soon as possible after the proclamation is issued.

4. Encourage and assist employees to send in reports for service or claims for exemption on personal grounds as early as possible.

5. After the time for exemption has passed, to induce employees to report promptly, and to register the names of any employees who haven't reported or claimed exemption.

Advisory Board's Duties.

At the outset Col. Moss said the time had gone by when there was any use talking about the comparative advantages of the Compulsory Service Act over the voluntary system. "The Military Service Act is now the law of the land, and as such it will be enforced," he declared amid applause. With regard to the duties of the new Advisory Board, of which he is a member, Col. Moss explained that the executive responsibility in connection with the Act rested with the Government. The Government, in other words, had not handed over the administration of the Act to a Commission.

"There is no question as to the intention of the Government to enforce this Act sincerely, fairly and vigorously. The intention of the Government is to call up by formal proclamation as soon as practicable the first class mentioned in the Act, namely, single men and widowers without children, between the ages of 20 and 34. The proclamation will be issued just as soon as the necessary machinery and arrangements are made for taking care of the work.

Civil Administration.

The whole scope of the draft measure is based on civil administration, Col. Moss explained. "Questions of exemption will be dealt with by tribunals established by order-in-Council and the constitution of these boards will be entirely non-military and non-political."

Dealing with the exemption clauses in the Act, Col. Moss emphasized that the first consideration was the national interest, and where a man was of better service to the country at his present employment than he would be in the firing line, he would be kept at home. "The smooth operation of the Act will depend to a very large extent on the measure in which the people of Canada grasp that distinction. If the people regard this exemption question as a lawsuit in which their wits are to be matched against the wits of the Government and if the citizens of Canada adopt the attitude of seeing how many men they can get out of service, the administration of the Act will be fraught with tremendous difficulties and result in unpleasant consequences."

Exempt Medical Students.

Regarding the third ground of exemption, namely, that it is expedient in the national interest that a person should continue to be educated to fit him for some special work, Col. Moss instanced the case of an advanced medical student who would come under this clause. "It would obviously be much better for the country that an advanced medical student should finish his course and become a doctor than that he should serve in the colours."

Speaking of the fourth clause where a person may be exempted where serious hardship would ensue if a man were placed in active service on account of exceptional financial, business or domestic obligations, he did not think that the clause would be given effect to in very many cases.

Method of Procedure.

"Generally speaking the procedure will be something like this: As soon as practicable the proclamation will be issued calling out class one. That notice will call upon single men or widowers without children, from 20 to 34 years of age, either to put in a claim for exemption or to report for service on or before a certain date to be named, dates for exemption being slightly anterior to the dates for reporting for service. Forms for these purposes will be distributed to postmasters and the class affected will be required to report for service or make a claim for exemption. Applications for exemption could be made by the person affected, near relative or the employer.

Draft In Instalments.

"It is hoped that the military exigencies of the situation will not render it necessary to call the whole 100,000 men to the actual colours immediately. It is hoped that the withdrawal of these men from civilian life will be made by instalments. Just what these instalments will be will depend upon the military situation from time to time."

The forms filled in would be brought together in the office of the registrar appointed for the purpose, and then distributed to the tribunals.

"In order to minimize the strain on the machinery of the Act, medical boards for the examination of men will be established in Toronto and elsewhere within a week or ten days, and men can go there in advance of the proclamation and determine their fitness for service without prejudicing their claim for exemption."

New Drug Acts on Every Organ of Body

Makes Your Checks Rosy.

A pale face, sallow complexion, weak stomach, clogged liver, painful kidneys, catarrh affections, rheumatic pain, run-down and anemic conditions of the whole system are caused from an impure, thin and watery condition of the blood. All these organs of the body are directly dependant on the blood for their source of strength. It will be a great boom to all these thousands of weak, anaemic, nervous, run-down people to hear and learn about this new drug "Bonised Phosphorus with Iron." After each meal and at bedtime take from two to three of these tabloids with a little water. You will note that you will get results after the first few doses the iron acts immediately upon the blood while the phosphorus goes direct to the spine, the center of the nervous system.

As soon as you get the blood purified and the nerves soothed, the stomach, liver and kidneys begin to do their work and in 9 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger. Your blood pressure will be increased, making your cheeks rosy and you once more have that vigorous, vivacious, keen, bright, alert feeling of boyhood days. The new drug is dispensed by F. O. Webber.

EMBARGO ON APPLES CANNOT BE LIFTED

Tonnage Demand Makes It Impossible For Britain to Do This.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—The embargo upon apple imports will not be lifted by the British authorities. In reply to a question in the Commons Sir George Foster stated that he had received a cable to that effect.

"The cable from the Secretary of State for the Colonies expressed regret that it was impossible to remove the embargo on apples," said the Minister. "That matter was given very thorough and sympathetic consideration, but owing to financial and tonnage conditions it had been found impossible to make the concession asked for."

By Anna Alice Chapin

"Before you say good-bye," said Mrs Forsythe, faintly. She was in fact terribly anxious to be free from his presence. And it was not solely repulsion that she felt, shocked as she had been to learn of his duplicity. There was also in her heart an unreasoning pity and regret that one who had stood so high in the eyes of men should be brought so low even in his own. She added impulsively: "I'm sorry—Arthur."

The Judge compressed his lips a bit more firmly. "I thank you, Edith," he said, with his old, beautiful courtly bow, and went out slowly into the morning light.

"Edith, there are tears in your eyes," said Richard Mason.

"Oh, Richard," she said, "my heart aches for—for almost everyone, I think to-day. Do you—oh, do you believe that I shall have my little girl back safe and sound?"

"I believe that young Radnor would swim the Styx to get her back," said the Toll-keeper. "Sit down, dear woman, and try to rest a little. You must be worn out!"

"Why—look!" Polly's voice was full of amusement. The eyes of the others followed her outstretched hand.

Down the muddy, streaming yellow road that led to the farther side of the Ridge, with his back turned toward the Warm Spring Valley, and all within it, walked a man. He did not stride with the free tread of one used to going on foot, but slowly, even awkwardly, like a man moving with bandaged eyes. So did Judge Denby walk out of their lives and out of his two diverse and extensive careers to regions unknown. No one of them—not even his son—ever saw him again.

CHAPTER XXIX.

SUNSHINE AT THE FOUR TRAIL CROSSING.

Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole long day?
From morn to night, my friend.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night
Those who have gone before.
Then must I knock, or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at the door.

—Christina Rossetti.

The ego that was Enid Forsythe struggled up through infinite fathoms of unconsciousness.

First came bewilderment; then physical discomfort: stiffened limbs, and a sense of chill. Then darkness again. But Enid was superbly healthy. She was not really hurt, and her splendid youth was already at work in its healing processes. Even as she lay motionless on the ground she was remembering why she had come and all that had happened.... And then she heard a horse coming and the creak of leather.

"Wouldn't it be funny," she thought languidly, "if after I had come to find him, Martin Hale should find me?"

She struggled to lift herself, and gave a little cry to attract the rider's attention. Then she sank back into half-swoon once more.

As she drifted off a low, almost a harsh exclamation sounded in her ears: "Enid!"

She had not the smallest doubt that it was Martin Hale now. He had found her, just as she had imagined he might. He was big and strong. He would take care of her.

She felt herself caught up almost roughly in strong arms, and thrilled, even through the enervation of her fatigue, at the uncompromising masterful way in which she was being handled.

"Thank God for a man," she whispered in her heart, but there was a sting in the thought, too. If it could have been Jack. "But it could never have been Jack!" she told herself recklessly.

"I may love him best in one way," but in the Big Primitive Things of Life women want something Big and Primitive to hold on to!"

She had an odd sense of trying to convince herself of something against her own will.

"I came here—I braved everything for Martin Hale—and he has found me!....Better yet—I have found myself!"

She was so exhausted that her very mental processes were confused. She felt herself lifted to the man's saddle—like a sack of meal; felt the spring of the horse beneath her, the steady grip of the hands that held her, the warm strength of the firm body against which she rested. In the semi-stupor of her state she seemed to see, as in an hallucination, the shadowy figure of Jack Radnor fading into infinitudes of distance. Her eyelids drooped into a sort of frown, but the vision persisted. It might be Martin Hale, Primitive Man of the Hills who held her, who had rescued her, but as her senses swam into oblivion it was Jack Radnor of whom she thought with a dull ache, Jack Radnor, whom, after all, she loved!

She was—she admitted it to herself with a sort of sick singing at the heart—miserable because it was Martin Hale that had rescued her.

It was bright sunlight when Jack Radnor carried his light burden into the Toll-gate House. He laid Enid on the couch and leaned against the table suddenly dizzy with the reaction of his hours of anguish.

Mrs. Forsythe and Polly flew to the half-conscious girl and the Toll-keeper piled wood upon the fire and put on the kettle. The sunshine streamed into the room. The long night was gone like a bad dream.

But though color had come back to Enid's lips and cheeks she did not seem to wish to make any effort to become herself again.

She lay lethargically on the couch, too weary in heart and body to open her eyes or move. She was reluctant, too, for with each pulse of returning strength in her blood she resented Martin Hale's rescue of her, and longed for the man she really loved. Dully, and as though from a distance, she heard voices, Martin Hale's among them, but could only hear a word now and then. "Must be pretty well done up"...."riding half of the night"...."worst storm on record."

"Mamma!" she whispered softly, but still she did not open her eyes.

"Thank God! Thank God!" whispered her mother, caressing her with trembling hands. "And Jack," she added with a broken laugh, "for bringing you back to me!"

Enid's great golden eyes flashed suddenly wide open and a fiery flush swept from her chin to her shining hair. Jack! Impossible! Jack wasn't the sort who rode all night in storms in search of stray maidens! It—But standing close beside her was, undoubtedly Jack. A very different Jack from the man to whom she had believed herself to be engaged—but the same. He was haggard with anxiety and sleeplessness and he needed a shave badly. But the whole of Enid's heart and soul leaped in her throat as she saw him, and she sobbed, "Jack!" in such a tone that the others were fain to turn their eyes away. Radnor went up to her, as she lay a little figure of burning gold in the blaze of the golden sunshine that was streaming into the room.

"Are you strong enough to come outside with me" he asked her in a low voice. For answer she sprang up, life running swift and eager in her healthy young veins. For her trail, too, was clear before her at last: nothing could ever be able to cross it again.

But if Enid expected a love scene, she was doomed to astonishment.

For, when he had her outside the Toll-gate House, Jack seized her by the shoulders and confronted her with a look she had never seen before. It was a look which went very well with the headlong rescue of her at dawn. He was extremely pale—as white as a dark man can get—and there were shadows about his eyes. His usual correct dress was in startling disarray and his hair was in a wet tumble above the most stormingly scowling brows she had ever seen. His lips, however, trembled and so did the strong hands that held her with a grasp that hurt. There was something of genuine anger as well as love in the passion that shook him.

"How dared you," he said in a queer breathless voice that she would never have dreamed could come from his lips. "How dared you frighten me like this?"

"Frighten?" She was too surprised to more than repeat the word feebly.

He almost groaned. "I've died almost twenty deaths in the last three hours," he said, fiercely. "I've seen you in fragments at the bottom of cliffs, and drowned, and stunned by lightning and——" He broke off. "You little fiend," he muttered, very low, but vehemently. "And you've nearly killed your mother as well!"

"But, Jack," she stammered, wild-eyed, "it—it's so queer. I never dreamed you'd feel like that!"

"Didn't you?" he said grimly.

"And then he shook her, not at all gently; and then clasping her close, kissed her lips over and over again—hard, stormy kisses that took her breath away. His arms felt to her like white-hot steel quivering from some pulsing flame within them.....

"Oh, Jack!" gasped Enid when she could speak, "why—why didn't you do that before?"

AMERICAN MEDICAL OFFICERS TO TAKE CHARGE

LONDON, Sept. 14.—According to the Manchester Guardian, American medical officers will next week take over charge of the military hospitals at Manchester, Salford, Liverpool, Leeds, Birmingham and Cardiff, and the civil medical practitioners at present in charge of those hospitals will be informed that their services are no longer required. Eleven American medical officers have been allocated to Manchester, it is stated.

It is understood that the reason for the change, says the newspaper, is that the services of the civilian doctors are required for the needs of the population who have been inadequately served, owing to the attendance of so many physicians at the hospitals.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

SORROW FOR THE DEAD.

The following article from a once noted and eminent writer, cannot but meet with the general approbation of a thinking and conservative people.

The sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we refuse to be divorced. Every other wound we seek to heal, every other affliction to forget; but this wound we consider it a duty to keep open. This affection we chesih, and brood over in solitude. Where is the mother who would willingly forget the infant that has perished like a blossom from her arms, though recollection is a pang? Where is the child that would willingl yforget a tender parent, though to remember be but to lament? Who, even in the hour of agony, would forget the friend over whom he mourns?

No, the love which survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes of the soul. If it has its woes, it has likewise its delights; and when the overwhelming burst of grief is calmed into the gentle tear of recollection, when the sudden anguish and the convulsive agony over the present ruins of all that we most loved, is softened away into pensive meditation on all that it was in the days of its loveliness, who would root out such a sorrow from the heart? Though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gayety, or spread a deeper sadness over the hour of gloom; yet, who would exchange it even for the song of pleasure, or the burst of revelry? NUo there is a voice from the tomb sweeter than song. There is a remembrance of the dead to which we turn even from the charms of the living.

Oh, the grave! the grave! It buries every error, covers every defect, extinguishes every resentment! From its peaceful bosom spring none but fond regrets and tender recollections. Who can look down upon the grave even of an enemy, and not feel a compunctious throb, that he should have warred with the poor handful of earth that lies molding before him But the grave of those we loved—what a place of meditation! There it is that we call up, in long review, the wwhole history of virtue and gentleness, and the thousand endearments lavished upon us, almost unheeded in the daily intercourse of intimacy; there it is that we dwell upon the tenderness, the solemn, awful tenderness of the parting scne; the bed of death, with all its stifled griefs, its noiseless attendance, its mute, watchful assiduities, the last testimonies of expiring love, the feeble fluttering, thrilling--Oh! how thrilling—pressure of the hand, the last fond look of the glasing eye turning upon us, even from the threshold of existence, the faint, faltering accents, struggling in death to give the one more assurance of affection.

Ay, go to the grave of a buried love, and meditate. There settle the account with thy conscience for every past benefit of unrequited, every past endearment unregarded, of that departed being, who can never, never, never return to be soothed by thy contrition! If thou art a child, and hast ever added a sorrow to the soul or a furrow to the silvered brow of an affectionate parent; if thou art a husband and hast ever caused the fond bosom that ventured its whole happiness in thy arms to doubt one moment of thy kindness or thy truth; if thou art a friend, and hast ever wronged, in thought, or word, or deed, the spirit that generosity confided in thee; if thou hast given one unmerited pang to that true heart, which now lies cold and still beneath thy feet; then be sure that every unkind look, every ungracious word, every ungentle action, will come thronging back upon thy memory, and knocking dolefully at thy soul; then be sure that thou wilt lie down sorrowing and repentant on the grave, and utter the unheard groan, and pour the unavailing tear; more deep, more bitter, because unheard and unavailing.

Let us then bow down to the will of an "All Wise" and "Beneficent God" and henceforth be more considerate and affectionate in the discharge of our duty to the living.

* * *

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pockets and thousands without even a pocket, are rich. A man born with a good sound constitution, a good stomach, a good heart and limbs, a pretty good head piece, is rich. Good bones are better than gold; tough muscles, than silver and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function, and it is better than a landed estate to have the right kind of a father and mother. The man is rich who has a good disposition, who is naturally kind, patient, cheerful, forgiving, hopeful, and who has a flavour of fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a despondent and complaining fellow, a time and care burdened man, these are all born deformed on the inside. They do not limp, but their thoughts sometimes do.

* * *

The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 409,000 are 16 years of age, and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose future mothers spend their girlhood days behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture, charm society and enthuse men to leap to glory in noble achievements?

* * *

Who does not feel more cheerful and contented for receiving a polite bow, a genial "good morning," a hearty shake of the hand? Who does not make himself the happier by these little expressions of fellow-feeling and good will? Silence and a stiff unbending reserve are specially selfish and essentially vulgar.

WAFFLES.

Mix one quart each milk and flour, five tablespoonfuls yeast, and a teaspoonful of salt. Set this over night as a sponge. In the morning add two eggs and a tablespoonful of melted butter, and bake in waffle-irons.

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.

MUFFINS.

One cupful milk, one-half teaspoonful each of butter and lard melted, a little salt, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, flour to make batter like cake. Bake in quick oven.

WHEAT MUFFINS.

One pint sour milk, one-fourth teaspoonful soda, one and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one beaten egg, flour enough to make stiff as cake batter. Grease muffin tins; fill half ful and bake in a quick oven. Sweet milk without the soda may be used. Add an extra teaspoonful of baking powder.

BREAKFAST GEMS.

One heaping pint flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, butter half the size of an egg, one teacupful water. Bake fifteen minutes.

RICE AND CORNMEAL WAFFLES

Mix a cupful cold-boiled rice, half-cupful each flour and cornmeal, two well-beaten eggs and milk to make soft batter. Add a tablespoonful melted butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder, and a teaspoonful of salt. Beat smooth and bake in waffle-irons, greasing your irons.

GRIDDLE CAKES.

Take one cupful flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, and a sprinkle of salt. Sift the dry ingredients together into a bowl. Beat an egg, add a scant cupful of milk and stir in gradually the dry ingredients, to make a smooth batter. Place an iron or soapstone griddle over the fire and grease it with a little dripping. When the fat begins to smoke dip out the batter with a tablespoon or ladle, and pour it on the griddle to form cakes. When the cakes are full of bubbles, turn them so that both sides may be brown. Serve on hot plates, with syrup, or butter and sugar, or place them in layers with butter, sugar and cinnamon between.

The cakes may be varied by adding half-cupful of cold boiled rice, hominy, wheatena, oatmeal or canned corn, to the ingredients called for. By using a half-cupful of cornmeal, rye, graham flour or bread crumbs, instead of the flour called for in the recipe, various kinds of griddle cakes may be made.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.

Take a quart of buckwheat flour, a teaspoonful of salt, a handful of Indian meal, two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Add four tablespoonfuls of yeast and enough warm water to make a thin batter. Beat well and set to use in a warm place. Let rise till morning and bake quickly on a hot iron.

PICKLES

Dill pickles—To make brine boil two gallons of water and one pound of course salt. Select medium sized cucumbers, wash and wipe carefully. Have ready a stone crock that will hold a layer of cucumbers and one of grape leaves with a bunch of dill on the stalk until the crock is full. Cover top with cabbage leaves, and on the very top put a large plate and add a clean stone as a heavy weight. Fill up with brine and let stand. The cucumbers will be ready for use in two weeks.

Sweet pickles—Let cucumbers stand in salt brine three days. Rinse well. Put in a cheesecloth bag one-half teacupful of whole English mustard seed, two tablespoonsful each of whole allspice, cloves and black pepper, one-half teacupful cinnamon sticks, and boil with a little vinegar. Measure sufficient vinegar to cover the cucumbers well. Add a pound of brown sugar, scald and pour over pickles, repeating for five consecutive days. Before sealing pour a little molasses over pickles.

Cucumber pickles—Allow one pint of salt to 100 pickles. Pour boiling water over pickles and let stand twenty-four hours. Pour off water, add the salt and cover again with boiling water. Let stand another day, then pour off the water and cover with ice water for two hours or until plump. Put a generous piece of ice in the water to keep it cold. Boil suffioient vinegar to cover the pickles, adding mixed spices. Drain pickles, place in bottles or jars, cover with the vinegar preparation and seal.

Use only porcelain or enamel kettles and silver or wooden mixing spoons.

The Business Woman

To-day, more than ever before, is woman's opportunity. Many new occupations are now opened to her, which, before the war, she was deemed unfitted to fill. And truth to tell she has risen to the opportunity, and now shares many business responsibilities in former times confined to men. But, as women are subject to more frequent fluctuations of health than men, many will be handicapped early, if they regard their health requirements too lightly.

The nervous strain, long hours and prolonged mental or physical fatigue thin the blood and weaken the nerves. Such conditions as women are now called upon to undergo can only be endured by a full-blooded constitution. This is as true for men as for women, only weaker women suffer soonest. The woman worker, in any line, requires her blood replenished frequently. She needs new, rich blood to keep her health under the trying conditions of business life, and to fortify her system against the effects of overwork. This applies also to the woman in the home, who, perhaps, has more worries and anxieties than usual. So let all girls and women take heed and renew their blood promptly at the first approach of pallor, lack of appetite, headache or backache. This can be best and most effectively accomplished by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which make new, rich blood and thus help womankind so perfectly. No woman need fear failure of health if they take these pills occasionally to keep them well, or give them a fair trial if they find themselves rundown.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The New School Frocks Are Ready

Cotton Frocks Trimmed With Wool Embroidery, and Wool Dresses in Military Styles, Are Novelties of the Season

New York, September 1

School days are around the corner. The few days of vacation that are left mean that mother's needle must fly very swiftly in order to get all the clothes her children need to have them fitted out for the school term. The styles are very much to her advantage for they are simple and are therefore very easily made.

Plenty of cotton frocks and some woollen ones for the cool days should form the main part of the school outfit. The familiar chambray and gingham, and also cotton poplin and repp which have served for children's school frocks generations upon generations have not been supplanted by any other material for the cotton tub frock this year. These little dresses may be made very smart by the use of simple embroideries in heavy cotton or wool. Simple little one-piece frocks, cut with the body and sleeves in one, have the edge of the neck and sleeves finished with a narrow crocheted edge of wool or a plain scallop. The rope stitch is another of those effective embroideries which work up so quickly that it is just a joy to trim little frocks with them.

A Patriotic Dress in Military Style

Cross- stitch and little embroidered motifs in outline stitch for trimming collars, cuffs and yokes, and sometimes belts smarten the simple school frocks and make them much more attractive to the children who wear them. Very often little frocks are trimmed only with bindings of a contrasting color. Nothing is easier to accomplish than this and it is a good way of using up those small pieces of cloth which have remained over from other dresses.

This fall there is something new in styles for both girls and boys and this is the military element which is frequently noticed. The sketch above shows a military dress for the girls, buttoned down the front and provided with an ample supply of pockets. The dress is developed in blue serge with flannel collar, and cuffs, and a red silk tie makes a kind of patriotic costume which is sure to appeal to the patriotic instinct of the school girl. There are some of these dresses made with detachable capes reaching about to the waist line. Some of these capes have turned back revers in front, faced with pretty colored silk which is also used for the lining of the cape. One of these dresses in serge or gabardine is just the thing for autumn wear as the cape makes a separate coat unnecessary at the beginning of the cold weather.

Some of the suits for little boys are also equipped with these military capes. Boys have this year trench suits and trench coats—just the very name alone will excite the interest but the styles too will please them. The coats are cut like those of the soldiers and belted at the waist with leather belts. Little suits for small boys are made with straight knee trousers and long blouses. Double breasted effects, straight closings and vests are featured in the blouses which are sometimes finished with small round collars and again with sailor collars.

The fall coats for children are made of soft woolly materials. For best wear, velvet and velveteen are fur. Shoulder capes and jackets add distinction and interest to the little models.

BREAKFAST CAKES.

Take one quart bread crumbs, pour enough boiling water over to soak them. Add quart buttermilk, three eggs, one-half teaspoonful salt, tablespoonful of lard, teaspoonful soda. Stir well and thicken with flour to the right thickness for griddle cakes.

Knit to "Nature's" Last

Ordinary hosiery is stretched into shape over a form while the hosiery is damp. It loses this shape when washed.

Mercury Hosiery retains its shape, because it is knitted to "Nature's Last" on new machines.

The finish of this new Mercury Hosiery is even superior to the high-class foreign lines formerly imported. The wear is better.

Allied Nations Snatch Slackers

Citizens in Countries Aligned With Entente Subject to Draft

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Citizens of allied nations, who reside in other countries alligned with the entente powers, will soon be subject to draft into the military service of the country in which they reside.

Negotiations are under way between all the allies to this end, it was stated to-day. Russia, Great Britain and France have already signed agreements between the United States and her allies. Embassies here to-day said the Russian-French-British agreements did not give citizens thus drafted the option of entering the army of their home country. American officials, however, indicated such a stipulation would probably be included in any agreement signed by the United States.

The British Embassy explained that the agreements were primarily intended to reach slackers who had left their home countries to avoid service.

Drafting of all aliens in the United States except Germans; others exempt by treaty, and those of countries allied with Germany who have resided in this country one year is proposed in a joint resolution to-day by the Senate and sent to the House. It is estimated that more than one million aliens will be affected.

Under the resolution by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the Senate military affairs, subjects of all of the allies or neutrals claiming treaty exemption would be allowed to leave the country within ninety days.

CLERK RAN AWAY WITH $1,700 PAYROLL

SENT TO BANK FOR MONEY AFTER BEING WITH COMPANY THREE WEEKS.

WELLAND, Sept. 8.—A. A. Martin, aged 46 years, timekeeper and shipping clerk for Metals Chemical, Ltd., was sent to the Royal Bank on Tuesday afternoon to draw the pay roll and has not yet returned, nor has the company seen anything of the pay roll. The loss involved is $1,700. After he had secured the money from the bank, he went to the Welland Garage on Hellem's Avenue and engaged an automobile to go to Niagara Falls, N.Y., where he said his brother was very sick. He left with the car and chauffeur about three o'clock, reaching Niagara Falls. He stopped the car about a block away from the upper bridge and told the driver to wait there until he came back. When he did not return in an hour the driver came back to Welland. No clue as to Martin's whereabouts has since been received. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Martin came to Welland from the Southern States about a year ago. Three weeks ago he joined the staff of Metals Chemical and was not bonded.

PUBLIC OPINION

PREDICTIONS.

(Southern Lumberman.)

Whether or not Mr. Gerard is a prophet, will be known before long. Here are some of the things which he says won't happen:

"The German nation is not one which makes revolutions. There will be scattered riots in the country but no simultaneous rising of the whole people. The officers of the army are all of one class—and of a class devoted to the ideals of autocracy."

"Nor should anybody believe that Germany will break under starvation. There is far greater danger of the starvation of our allies than of the starvation of Germany. Every available inch of ground in Germany is cultivated by the aid of the old men, the boys and the women and the 2,000,000 prisoners of war."

Mr. Gerard declares that Americans do not grasp either the magnitude or the importance of the war.

THE STRAITS OF DOVER.

(Christian Science Monitor).

The Strait of Dover, the narrow sea which separates England from France, is, perhaps, one of the best-known pieces of water in the world. For Englishmen, all through the centuries, it has ever appeared to epitomize the island character of their country, and has been ever regarded by them as one of their great bulwarks of defence. The silver streak which runs between the Pas-de-Calais and the coast of Kent has, indeed, always been the obstacle of obstacles to the invader. It was to cross this barrier that Julius Caesar prepared his long-beaked ships, some fifty years or so before the Christian era; that William the Norman got together his great fleet of flat-bottomed boats eleven hundred years afterwards; that Philip of Spain prepared his Armada in the Sixteenth Century, and that Napoleon, some two hundred years later still, assembled his fleet of specially prepared ships at Boulogne. "Let me be master of the Channel for six hours, and we are masters of the world," he declared to his staff, as they contemplated the great army encamped on the heights above the town; but, as all the world knows, of course, the six hours never came.

Utica Press:—"How deeply President Wilson's scorching characterization of the German government as an irresponsible, conscienceless, unprincipled organization has burned into the thickskinned German managers of it, is illustrated by a long outgiving of the Kaiser's Chancellor within the present week. It is merely one more instance of self absolution of guilt for bringing on the war that has been so common from that quarter from the beginning.

CLIQUE RULES PRUSSIA.

(American Review of Reviews.)

The executive government of Prussia is wholly in the hands of the King, whose council of ministers is appointed by royal decree. The Prussian law making body has two chambers, the upper one of which is made up of royal princes, territorial nobility, and a number of magnates named by the King, with a few burgomasters of large cities. The lower house, which has 418 members, is elected by the great body of Prussian citizens above the age of 25, and the now famous three-class system. Those who pay the highest taxes to the total extent of one-third of all the taxes paid, constitute the first-class and exercise one-third of the electoral power. Those whose taxes in the aggregate constitute a second amount equal to a third of the whole, form the voters of the second class, and they in turn have a third of the voting power. All the rest of the citizens who pay taxes constitute the third class. How this works out in practical effect we have more than once explained in this Review, when alluding to German politics. The first and second classes, made up of the large taxpayers, and constituting perhaps 15 per cent. of the entire number of voters, have twice as much political power as the remaining five per cent. of the voters. Thus, as we have previously stated, a voter of the first class in Berlin has fifty times as much political power as a voter of the third class. In the Essen district, where the Krupp works are located, it is within bounds to say that one voter of the first class has as much voting power as fifty thousand voters of the third class.

KNEELING HORSES.

In ancient times, before the invention of stirrups and luxurious saddles, horses were taught to kneel to permit their riders to mount. A beautiful Greek vase in one of the museums in Petrograd shows a war horse of many centuries ago kneeling low before an amazon. The riders in those days mounted from the "off side in contradiction to the modern usage. Plutarch tells how in the first century of this era certain effeminate Roman riders found even the horse block of too little assistance

Once More Canada Must Stand in the Gap.
Once More Must Hold the Lines of Communication

As, when at Ypres, Canada's Gallant Sons stood in the Gap and held back the Hunnish Hordes---and shed Immortal Glory on Canada's fair name---

So, in their homes, Canada's Noble Women are now called upon to Stand in the Gap and hold back the spectre of hunger from our troops.

The men "out there" must have sufficient food. Only certain kinds of food are suitable for export.

And so we ask you to Pledge yourself and your family to eat less of these foods, so that there may be sufficient of them for export.

For example---if you do your own baking use one-third oatmeal, corn, barley or rye flour with your white flour. If you buy from a baker, order some brown bread each day.

Substitute for beef and bacon such equally nutritious foods as fish, peas, lentils, potatoes, nuts, bananas, etc.

And---this is most important---positively prevent the waste of a single ounce of food in your household.

Next week a Food Service Pledge and Window Card will be delivered to you. The Pledge is your Dedication to War Service--- The Window Card is your Emblem of Honour.

THE FOOD VALUE OF FISH

People have got more or less into the habit of eating fish on Friday only. Fish are just as appetizing and nourishing on Tuesdays and Thursdays as on Fridays, and if you and your neighbors will buy fish any day in the week, you will get cheaper fish and better fish. Hundreds of carloads of fish are sent from Canada to cities in the United States because the people living here do not appreciate the value of fish as a food, and do not buy it as often as they should.

Fish is just as nourishing as lean meat, and if eaten with bread, potatoes, etc., will supply all the needs of the body.

The meat part of almost any fish may be cooked separately. If you ask your fish dealer to remove the meat part of the fish for you, the trimmings will consist of the head, the skeleton and the fins. The skeleton can be used in making excellent fish soups and fish sauces.

Many people go to a fish store and buy the filets of a fish instead of buying the whole fish. A filet of fish is nothing more or less than the meat of the fish stripped from the skeleton. Some fish dealers have these filets all ready on a platter for sale, but if you buy them that way you will pay about 15 cents a pound more for them than if you bought the entire fish and asked your fish dealer to strip the fish off for you and give you the trimmings.

HOW TO TELL WHEN FISH IS FRESH. In fresh fish the eyes are bright, the gills red, and the flesh firm and odorless.

Put fish in water, and if it sinks you will know it is fresh. If it floats, it is a sign that it is not fresh, and it should not be used. Serious illness is apt to follow the eating of fish that is not fresh.

FROZEN FISH. During the year, when certain fish are very plentiful, they are caught in such large numbers that it is impossible to dispose of all of them immediately because of the comparatively small demand for fish on the part of our housewives. This surplus fish is sent to cold storage in order that it may be preserved and eaten when the same variety of fish cannot be freshly caught. In this way you usually can get, at any time of the year, any kind of fish you particularly like.

Ask your dealer if he keeps frozen fish (cold-storage fish). Tell him you want to make a practice of buying frozen fish in place of fresh fish. See that he sells it to you for one-third less than the price of fresh fish.

Making New Embroidery from Old

This shows the old embroidery basted to the new piece of material and sewn to it. Where it has been cut away from the old material can be seen at the left half, while the embroidery not yet cut away is seen at the right on the old material. In this picture the linen has not had the final dampening and pressing.

TO satisfy readers who are interested in hand embroideries I am going to interrupt the lessons in filet lace to show you how to reapply old embroideries on new materials.

This appears to me to be more economical than many persons realize, because when the goods on which the embroidery is done is worn out such embroidery is otherwise useless.

It is a great mistake, in no matter what sort of embroidery you reapply, to cut away the embroidery from the foundation on which it has been embroidered before it is reapplied on to a new material.

The work which I am going to show you is seldom possible with perforated embroideries. In those designs which have only a few perforations the perforated parts can often be re-embroidered anew in the new material if the worker knows how to embroider.

First, the old piece of embroidery is well basted on a piece of material, if you wish to reproduce, with every appearance of verity, new embroidery that will look exactly like the old. The stitches are all taken on the back of the new material, the needle going through the two materials to the back of the old embroidery. The stitches are very short ones, taken all about the edges of the entire design, as just explained, on the wrong side of the new material. Be careful that these stitches have exactly the direction of the old embroidery stitches, so that they will be lost among the stitches of the embroidery, if they show on the right side.

When all the old embroidery has been sewn to the new material I counsel that a very warm iron be passed on the back of the whole thing, so as to facilitate the cutting out along the exact edge of the old embroidery.

Of course, before this the main part of the old embroidery has been cut away first, after the old embroidery has been well sewn to the new material. Then with a very sharp pair of scissors the little that is left of the old embroidery is cut to the very edge of the design as close as possible so that every thread of the outside old material will be cut away.

The best thing to do is to dampen and press. That gives it a final pressing and will make the two materials, old and new, be pressed so closely together that one cannot tell that it is not all one piece.

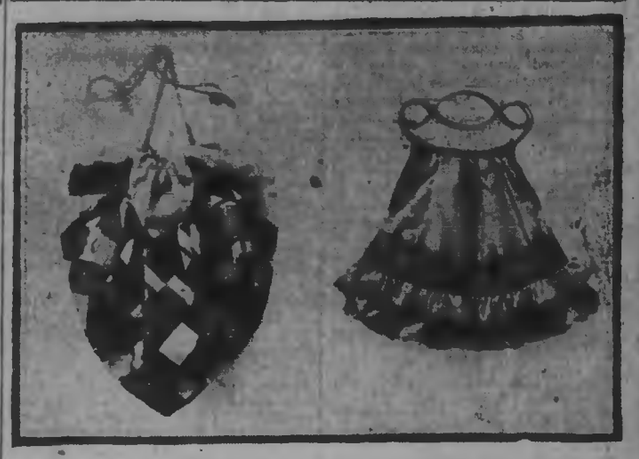
When an old design of embroidery must be arranged on a different sized or shaped piece of material use the design in as much the same sense as possible. Those you have to cut apart should be changed as little as possible, sewing them on the new material before cutting them to their very edge.

Women in "Hooveralls" in Conservation Campaign

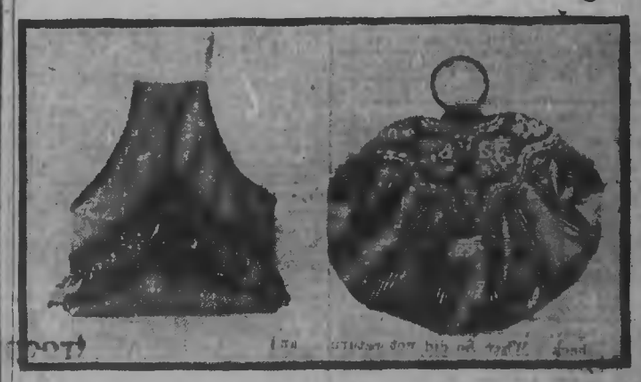
A CAMPAIGN of the Home Economics Department of the National League for Women's Service to obtain pledges from the housewives of the country to aid Herbert C. Hoover, Food Commissioner, in saving food and avoiding waste, was begun in New York when more than fifty women were sent to ten of the largest department stores to induce women shoppers to sign the pledges.

The women are dressed in the Hoover aprons or "Hooveralls," as they have been dubbed, and are supplied with pen, ink and a large number of the pledge cards. The Home Economics Department hopes to obtain 50,000 signatures during its campaign.

The War Work Bag of Silk



You can put your individuality in the silken work bag, for there are as many shapes and colors as could be wished. At the left is a graceful looking bag of beige and white silk, lined with white silk. This hangs over the arm with beige cord. These bags should match or contrast harmoniously with the dress worn. The bag at the right has a fancy metal frame and is of rose pink taffeta; it is trimmed with as many ruffles and gold lace as if it were an opera bag. These bags, in fact, are already seen at social affairs, carried by those who have evidently imposed upon themselves the admirable task of knitting as many sweaters, scarfs and helmets as possible for the soldiers and sailors. Already some of the girls can finish a whole garment with hardly a glance at their work. They have in a short time acquired the proficiency of the European women, whose eyes never rest on their knitting.



A very popular form of arm work bag, or war work bags, as they are sometimes called, is pictured at the left. The bag material is extended to make the handle. This charming specimen is a rich looking affair of gold taffeta, with frilly fringed ruffle, gold lace and gold gimp about the edge. The beauty of a golden bag is that it will go with any colored costume and reflects lovely lights in the evening. At the right is pictured a gayly striped rose and blue taffeta bag, with a top of very fine figured cretonne. This bag hangs from the wrist by a bracelet and opens by a flap.

Sympathetic Chaperon Talks

DEAR GIRLS:—Insist upon knowing some trade or profession, and know it well enough to make your living by it. Do not take it up as a makeshift, saying to yourselves, "I'll do this until some one comes along and asks me to marry him," but go into it in a wholehearted, business way. This will not be difficult if you choose something for which you have a decided inclination. Perhaps you may never marry. Perhaps the father who can give you all you want may lose his money and be unable to keep the home together. Perhaps if you do marry your husband may be a poor business man, or he may become an invalid, or die and leave you with children to care for. Then the desperate need of money to educate and care for them can be met by your skill in something you learned, and learned well, when you were a girl.

I have seen and known girls who were brought up with every imaginable luxury become the breadwinners of the family. I have one in mind as I write—a beautiful girl of nineteen whose father had been very wealthy.

This girl had been given everything she wished for all her life; had been educated in fashionable schools, had travelled and studied abroad. Her father lost his money. Not part of it, but all he had—his home, everything. This girl was the youngest of a large family, the only one at home, the child of his old age. It was impossible for the father to rehabilitate himself, so this delicately brought up girl, who never had been without a personal maid and every conceivable luxury, turned the one practical talent she possessed to use.

"What did she do, Miss Dawson?" inquired Grace. Her father had just met with reverses, and she was anxious to do something to help, so was interested in my little lecture.

She always had had a talent for designing. Many of her girl friends used to come to her to design their party frocks, and often she made them from the sheer love of doing it. Then she studied designing for her own pleasure, never dreaming she would be obliged to make a living by it. When it became necessary for her to support her father and mother as well as herself she went to these people, friends and companions of her days of plenty, and sewed for them. At first in their own homes, then in a little establishment of her own. She knew her business so well, although learned when she had no need, that she could charge big prices, and before she was thirty years old she was making ten thousand a year. Her father and mother are in consequence spending their last years in comfort.

"Wasn't she wonderful?" Grace breathed.

"Only wonderful in knowing how to do some one thing so well that when necessity arose she could put it to practical use," I replied.

There's another thing, girls. You all expect to marry, but the economically independent girl can wait until the right man comes along instead of taking the first or even the second because her family expect it and show her that they do, and that it is her duty to make way for the others—especially if there are younger sisters.

The dance in evening trousers.

Little remains to be told. When the news was flashed from Chicago that the semi-annual garment snow had decreed the trousered evening gown for women, strong men in this and other cities hastily gathered up their dress trousers and hurried to safety deposit vaults, armories, forts, club houses and other places where they could safeguard their last vestige of superiority.

When women took to tight fitting breeches, ostensibly for riding, automobiling and motorcycling, but really for "well type your own libretti,"—men sighed and made little protest. When the fair ones took to overalls for farming and munition factory work and for repairing the limousine, men looked startled, but muttered something about "war necessity."

But when women invade the sacred prerogative of men, i. e., and also to wit, viz.—evening dress trousers—good evening! Dot gone it, isn't there any place left that is exclusive! for men? Are the men going to submit meekly to sharing with women the "artistic, conventional black twir stovepipe effects which have made men in evening clothes such dashing figures?

Practical Ways to Do Our "Bit"

ON every hand one sees the evidence of war—the men in khaki, the women and girls in Red Cross uniforms, newsboys crying their extras in the streets, announcements in the papers of hastened marriages because of the news of the grooms' sudden call to the colors. These and countless other details go to make up the picture of the nation's great travail.

And we women who must remain at home, stirred by the bugle call, caught in the exaltation of the times, feel a choking sense of obligation, and wonder dumbly what it is that we may do, how we may serve, we "who only stand and wait."

Many of us want to be sent to the front as Red Cross nurses. But there are other ways we may and must serve, for that is impractical and impossible to the majority.

Here is something that may cause some of you to think for a moment and then to help. For, after all, most of us are earnest and willing when it comes to doing anything for our country.

Enthusiastic Ignorance.

A letter from a nurse who has been in the hospitals of France all through the war is the reason for this little talk.

"One of the hardest things we have to combat," she wrote, "is the enthusiastic ignorance of the woman who wants to help but does not know how. There are a great many of her."

"One, a woman of rank and fashion, was talking to me the other day. 'It is strange,' she said, 'the way they discriminate against the woman of wealth and position. It is impossible to understand. Here am I, ready and willing to serve my country, yet I am not given a chance. Surely with my social training I could do more to ease the tedium of hospital life to the soldier than that woman, for instance,' pointing to one of our most capable Red Cross nurses. 'She has not led the life to fit her for the graces.'

"'Madam,' I said, 'it is not graces we want, but grace—the power to be patient and kind.'

"It is women like that who madden one—so willing but so incapable. Why don't the women get in training for what may come?

"But there are women of an entirely different type, women who keep you on your knees to them, in spirit. One came to the hospital and begged to be taken in. 'I will do anything,' she said; 'the most menial task, if only I may serve.'

"'Will you scrub floors and clean filth?' I asked.

"'Anything—anything in the world,' she answered.

And so she who had never worked, who had never known the fret or jar of life, whose beauty had been the talk of an adoring public for more than one season; whose father was close to royalty and whose uncle had been a Prime Minister, went into the hospital as a floor scrubber.

"So she served her country until she had learned how to do other and more useful labor. No greater sacrifice could she have made than to take upon herself these menial tasks.

"But far greater purpose could she have served if she had only been trained in some one line.

"We work twelve hours a day and terribly hard, but we are thankful we can do it. Your own men are going into real war soon. Give them all the help you can.

"When you send them things, send them what they want. Men always retain a great deal of the 'little boy' spirit in their make-up, and when they are wounded and weak they are pitifully childlike.

A Little Time and Thought.

"The other day some boxes were sent, and we went through the hospitals distributing our treasures. How glad they were, like so many boys, until the pipes gave out. Then what a tragedy! They wept like children. There were other things in the boxes, but nothing that could really interest them.

"I went out and with my own money—though I had not much, just then—I bought eighty-four pipes and a sack of tobacco and a cake of chocolate for each. I will not try to tell you of their gratitude. Then I sat down to write you this letter.

"Whatever you do, try to get our women of America interested.

"When they send the boys things ask them to send the articles they will like.

"There are so many here who will be pleased with a little gift. Surely our women will make it a duty to send them."

Think it over, women. What will you do?

Rose Gathering

I'VE been visiting where there was a rose garden.

Every morning I walked along the grassy paths with my hostess as she cut the flowers.

My eagerness to do likewise got the better of me, as I exclaimed, "Do let me do some of the cutting!"

"Would you like to take a lesson in rose cutting?" she asked.

"Of course I would. Don't you cut extra long stems to fill tall vases?"

"Yes you could do that, if you didn't care whether you raised another rose this season," she explained.

"Really? I'd create havoc with these bushes if I were left to satisfy my impulses in a garden."

"Now look at the stem of this rose," explained by hostess, "count five leaves up from the bottom where it starts to grow. Then cut your rose stem, at the leaf joint, on a slant."

"Oh, yes; I see what you mean" as I discovered on the same bush a place where a new shoot had already sprung forth and budded. "That means another rose this season, doesn't it?"

"That's just the point! Watching roses grow is the fascination of owning a garden. Nothing ever monotonous about it. Every day, surprises in color and form on every bush."

Choosing Wisely

GIRLS, being loved is a pleasant sensation.

Being loved agrees with our vanity—this wonderful feeling of assurance that some one likes our caresses and is ready to serve our whims.

But there is no particular reason why the first man who awakens this feeling is the one man on earth who deserves you.

Your first lover may sweep you along with his ardor, gain your gratitude by devotion, reason you into acceptance, marry you. To these things women surrender, unconscious that they are not in love—until the awakening comes.

Every true woman leads an inner life.

Ask yourselves, girls, if you really could be happy with the man whom you could subdue and conquer with your beauty alone. Beauty will fade.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Daniel 10th chapter, an 7th verse.—"Daniel's Last Vision."—And I Daniel also saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them; so that they fled to hide themselves.

This chapter begins Daniel's vision of the Scriptures of truth, which is continued to the end of the book, and it is stated that as the things revealed would certainly take place, so the time would be long before all would be accomplished; indeed it would appear that many parts are not yet accomplished, but look forward, almost to the end of time.

Daniel at this time could not be less than ninety years of age, yet he spent three weeks in humbling himself before God, perhaps affected at the backwardness of the Jews to avail themselves of the proclamation of Cyrus, and the difficulties thrown in their way.

During this time he abstained from all those indulgencies which his station, age and circumstances seemed to demand. While walking with attendant on the banks of the river he saw One in the form of a Man who could be no other than the Son of God, whom it must be, for he appeared in the same resemblance wherein he appeared to St. John in the Isle of Patmos. Rev. 1, 13-15. He was clothed in linen at the High Priets in the day of Atonement: this garment was an emblem of his purity and the excellency of his work as Mediator. His girdle may denote his faithfulness to his word. His body like the beryl may signify his heavenly beauty and excellency. His face as lightning and his eyes as fire might show the terror of his frown and his discernment. His arms and feet as polished brass, denote his glorious power, and the voice of his words the extensive efficacy of his words to save or to destroy.

This glorious did Christ appear and it should engage us to think highly and honourably of him. Now consider how great this Man is, and in all things let him have the preeminence. Let us admire his condescension for us and for our salvation. Over all his splendour he drew a veil, when he took upon him the form of a servant, and emptied himself.

Daniel's attendants saw not the vision: it is the honour of those who are beloved of God, that what is hid from others is known to them. Christ manifests himself to them but not to the world. John 14:22. But though they saw not the vision they were seized with trembling so that they fled to hide themselves. Many have a spirit of bondage to fear, who never receive a spirit of adoption: to whom Christ has been and may never be otherwise than a terror. This was a confirmation of the truth of the vision; for it had a real, powerful and strange effect on those about him. He himself saw it but he was not able to bear the sight of it. There remained no strength in him, his body was left in a manner lifeless and spiritless. The greatest and the best of men cannot bear the immediate discoveries of divine glory; no man can see it and live, but glorified saints see Christ as he is, and can bear the sight.

It seems that when this vision of Christ terrified Daniel, the voice of his words composed him and silenced the prophet's fears. When he saw the vision he saw himself prostrate, into a posture of humble adoration, and fell asleep, not as careless of what he heard and saw, but as overcome with it. However dreadful Christ may appear to those who are under conviction of sin and in terror by reason of it, there is enough in his words to quiet their spirits and to make them easy if they will but attend to it, and apply it. While Daniel thus lay prostrate a hand touched him. This seems to have been a created angel, who encouraged him by the assurance that he was particularly dear to the Lord, and called upon him to attend to the information that he was about to receive.

Before God gives strength and power unto his people he makes them sensible of their own weakness. See how well it is for us that the treasure of divine revelation is put into earthern vessels; that God speaks to us by men like ourselves and not by angels. If Daniel could not bear it, how could we. Whenever we enter into communion with God it becomes us to have a due sense of the vast distance between us and the holy angels, and of the infinite distance between us and the holy God, and to acknowledge that we cannot order our speech aright by reason of our darkness. How shall we that are dust and ashes speak to the Lord of glory? Nothing is more likely, nothing more effectual, to revive the drooping spirits of the saints above than to be assured of God's love to them. Those are greatly beloved indeed whom God loves. It is comfort indeed to know it. The angels assured Daniel that from the first day wherein he had set himself to understand his people's calamities, and to humble himself, his prayer had been heard.

From the first day that we begin to look toward God in a way of duty, he is ready to meet us in a way of mercy. Thus really is God to hear prayer. The angel then states that he had been engaged during the three weeks of Daniel's fasting and prayer in watching against designs which were rising against the Jews, in the Persian court. Some think that an evil angel is here meant. Some have even explained it of a guardian angel entrusted with the care of Persia, but there seems little scriptural ground for the idea of presiding angels, and none for one holy angel being set to oppose another holy angel. While thus employed he would not have succeeded but that Michael the first or chief angel, whom many consider to denote Christ, came to his assistance.

Daniel was again overcome with astonishment and his sorrowful feelings returned, but he was again strengthened. To those who like Daniel here have no might God increases strength. Isa. 40:29. And we cannot keep our communion with God unless by strength derived from him, but when he is pleased to put strength into us, we must make a good use of it, and say, Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth. Let God enable us to comply with his will and then whatever it is, we shall stand complete in it.

The angel inquired whether Daniel understood for what purpose he was sent to him. When he had instructed the prophet respecting the things to come he was to return and continue to counteract the decrees of the Persian Kings against the Jews. Though much was done against them by the Kings of Persia, God permitting, much more mischief would have been done to them, if God had not prevented it. Afterwards the Grecian Empire under Alexander and his successors would be established, and troubles to the Jews would arise from thence. He would now proceed more fully to show what were God's purposes of which the prophecies form an abstract. The divine decrees are spoken of as if registered in a book. See Deut. 32:34; Ps. 56:8; Isa. 65:6; Mali. 3:16. As there are Scriptures for the revealed will of God, which are published to the world, so there are Scriptures for the secret will of God, the book of his decrees. Both are Scriptures of truth; nothing shall be added to or taken from either of them.

The secret things belong not to us, only now and then some few paragraphs from the book of God's counsels have been delivered to the prophets for the use of the church, as here to Daniel; but they are the things revealed, even the words of this law, which belong to us and to our children; and we are concerned to study what is written in these Scriptures, for they belong to our everlasting peace. The angel then assures Daniel that though he was high in authority in Persia; he had no friend in that court to forward his designs for his people but Michael their prince, even the Son of God, to whom he must look to turn the hearts and designs of the rulers. While Satan and his angels and various evil counsellors, excite princes to devise mischief against the church, we may rejoice that Christ our Prince, and all his mighty angels, counteract our enemies; but we ought not to expect many favours from the world, especially in the courts of princes; yet the whole counsel of God shall be established.

Let us not pass from this chapter till we have duly pondered what is here said of Daniel's comeliness turned into corruption, in view of the Holy One. How solemn, how awful, how overwhelming must be the open view of Christ in his glory. What must be the feelings of the soul after death, after the departure from the body, and at the first glimpse of the Lord Jesus? How solemn, how affecting, even to souls that are regenerated! But what must it be to those who come from a bed of death, without having a surety, without the Redeemer's righteousness, and without Christ as an advocate!

We can and may now pray, Lord Jesus, be thou our righteousness now—and then thou will be our everlasting confidence through life, in death, and throughout eternity.

THE MAKING OF PAPER.

Thrift Was the Order of the Day When Only Rag Stock Was Used.

It was in the year 1867 that the first wood pulp paper in the United States was manufactured, and it would be difficult to estimate the benefit this has conferred upon the world, for it was a step in the dissemination of knowledge, particularly current news, just as was the invention of movable types and the printing press.

It will be remembered by many still living with what care every rag was saved to be converted into paper in the days when only rag stock was used in its manufacture and how the paper, after it had served its purpose at the printer's, was carefully put aside for wrapping parcels. Those were days of automatically imposed thrift, which were followed by disregard of economies so widespread that already, after only half a century, we are confronted by a prospect of serious shortage of supply of the new raw material.

Just as the supply of rags in the sixties would not have sufficed for growing needs, so it appears that soon there will not be enough wood pulp to go around. But we have grown so accustomed to finding substitutes when we had to have them that the world is not alarmed.

They Simply Won't Be Married.

Several young men were recently asked by a writer in the Woman's Home Companion why they refused to be married. Their answers throw considerable light on what is becoming a national problem. One said that girls are too clever for the men nowadays—that he wanted "just a wife," and the girl he had been engaged to marry was making more money than he was and refused to give up her work. Another complained of the expensive tastes of the modern young woman, another that he had set out to accomplish certain things before marrying. Still another refused to be sentenced to hard labor for life, and one complained that the local girls were "a bit narrow."

EVERYDAY READING

It seems a very difficult matter for people to separate themselves from their "church" or other religious organization that they are joined to; or even to openly acknowledge the wrong doing in them, even though they are thoroughly aware of the unrighteousness existing therein. True it takes a set determination to thus take their stand, especially when it means severing long-time associations, and walking with the few, if not alone altogether. Many see the wrong, but lazily fold their hands and acquiesce, not heeding the fact "light receivist calls for light to be walked in." Notwithstanding this fact, no doubt some are vainly trying to persuade themselves that something will take place t bring about a restoration in their "church," perhaps hoping a "Gypsy Smith" or a "Billy" Sunday will bring about the desired result; but evangelists and "special revivial services" fail. It is my candid opinion that reformation insid the pale of the "church" is impossible. Nothing short of a revolution in the religious world seems now to be the only way out. To some it may seem my statements are too far fetched. Be that as it may, I am far from being alone in my conclusions. Charles Finney, that keen observer of the condition of affairs, near the close of his life, said "that until you could convince the people that current Christianity was not the religion of the Bible, there was no hope of a genuine revival." Please note I am not condemning the righteous, those who live out the Christ life in the various "churches" and who have not, as yet, received light concerning the need of coming out and being separate from wrong associations. If people only knew the freedom, beauty and satisfaction of being out in the will of God, methinks club, lodge or church associations would fail to attract them. There is righteousness, freedom and power in Jesus and the possession of these gifts satisfies.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Which Was Which?

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Lucy," said Lucinda, "I don't believe your Bob or my Dick can tell us apart."

"Not in the dark," was the reply.

"Nor in the light. Suppose we change our engagement rings and see if it doesn't fool them. I'll exchange my diamond solitaire for your sapphire. We dress alike, and Dick has said that we look more alike than any twins he has ever known. The only difference in any of the things about us is our engagement rings."

"We can try it anyway."

So the girls exchanged rings. It was Saturday, and their lovers usually called on that evening. Lucy's fiance came in first, and Lucinda went down to receive him with her sister's diamond ring on her finger.

Bob Brackett arrived half an hour after Weatherbee. He was shown, as usual, into the library, where he found Lucy with her sister's sapphire on her finger. He, too, was deceived. The pair had not been long together when Brackett and Lucinda came into the room where they were.

"We've been discussing the wedding," Brackett said, "and there are points we must talk over with you two. How about the ushers? Shall we limit the reception to relatives or make it general?"

A number of such questions were taken up and discussed. The girls soon dropped their fiances out of the argument, deliberating with each other. Dick winked at Bob and said:

"Let's go and have a smoke, Bob. We don't count in these wedding plans."

The young men went to the smoking room, and Dick said to Bob, "Seen anything unusual in your girl?"

"No. Why do you ask?"

"They're putting up a job on us. It wasn't Lucinda who received you; it was Lucy."

"You don't mean it!"

"Yes, I do. I found out that Lucinda was with me by talking with her. When I mentioned something that only Lucy knew she was dead ignorant of it. But I didn't let on. I pretended still to be fooled. Now I tell you what we do. When they laugh at us for being fooled we'll declare we're not fooled at all. You cling to Lucy, and I'll do the same by Lucinda."

"Good boy! We'll do it!"

They returned to the library after their smoke without manifesting the slightest evidence that they had discovered the ruse that was being practiced upon them. When they arose to go Dick, bidding good night to Lucinda, offered the usual kiss. She drew back, laughing. He stood looking at her with well feigned surprise.

"I'm not your girl; I'm Lucinda," she said.

"Oh, come! You can't impose on me in that way," said Dick. "You don't suppose I can't tell the girl I love from some other girl, do you?"

At this juncture Lucy, who in like manner had refused Bob a kiss, found it necessary to struggle with him. He pretended to take the matter in high dudgeon. Then the girls, both talking at once and both laughing, tried to explain that they had been playing a joke on their lovers. Dick, who led the way for both, winked at Bob, then walked up to Lucy and took her in his arms, whereupon Bob angrily pulled him away. Dick, in a fine stage passion, struck the man who had interfered with him, and a fracas ensued, the girls trying to part the antagonists. Bob declared that Lucy was the girl he loved and he would have no other. Dick veered around to his opinion, saying that he believed Bob was right and, having engaged himself to the girl who wore the ring he had given her, he didn't propose to marry her sister. Finally the two young men left the house, neither of their fiancees having received the usual parting kiss.

The girls stood looking at each other. They had some time before ceased to laugh.

"This is serious," said Lucy.

"Who proposed it?"

"I, but I didn't think they would be so stupid as to mistake us permanently."

"How are we going to prove which is which?"

"Mother'll have to set them right."

"I'm not sure they'll believe even her."

The next day Lucy called up her Dick on the phone.

"Dick," she said, "I'm Lucy."

"Which Lucy—the real one or the one whom it was attempted to foist on me last night?"

"Why, I'm the real Lucy. I wore Lucinda's ring."

There was a click, then a silence which Lucy could not break. She suggested that Lucinda call up Bob and try to appease him. Lucinda did so and, by promising that he and Dick might choose for themselves, secured his promise to call the same evening and bring Dick with him.

When the two men called each girl wore her own engagement ring.

"Now, which is which?" said Lucy.

Each man walked up to the girl he was really engaged to and gave her a kiss, which she received willingly. The girls were much relieved. The men refused to admit that they had changed rings and that each man had not passed the evening with his fiancee. But after awhile they told the story of their collusion and, having been roundly scolded for joking on so serious a subject, were forgiven.

Imprisoned in the Wind.

Butterflies may be imprisoned and uninjured in the midst of a whirlwind. Gales in a genuine typhoon are so terrible that the stoutest ships can scarcely hope to weather them, but there is a spot at the very center of the storm where something like a dead calm prevails. From the outer edge of the disturbance, which may be 300 miles across, the wind velocity increases toward the center until within a few miles of that point there comes a sudden lull. There the rain ceases and the sky often clears. In this little calm area, which sailors call "the eye of the storm," a group of butterflies has frequently been imprisoned, and their dainty, delicate forms are as safe in this aerial cage as if hovering in sunny meadows, but as helpless as if in a collector's bottle.

Soap Bubbles and Portraits.

Professor Boys of England, experimenting with bubbles, obtained some very large ones, which in the sunshine changed colors so beautifully that he conceived the idea of using them as backgrounds for photographs.

The large bubbles were blown with an ordinary bellows, says the Popular Science Monthly. The soap solution was heated and a large mouthed funnel was dipped into it. The bellows, connected with the funnel, was then worked very gently. Bubbles with as great a circumference as two and a half feet were easily obtained.

Not Always.

"And now, boys," concluded the eminent visitor to the school, "never be in too great a hurry. More haste, less speed. Remember the hare and the tortoise. Let 'slow, but sure,' be your motto. Then you can't go wrong. Be slow and you will be sure."

"Not always, sir," piped a young urchin.

"Not always? How do you make that out?"

"There's lots of things that's slow, but they ain't sure."

"Oh! Name one, then."

"Please, sir, a watch."—Exchange.

GUNPOWDER USED NOW TO CLEAN OUT CHIMNEY

MAKE CRUDE CANNON OF OLD PIECE OF SHAFTING, LOAD IT AND SHOOT IT UP INSIDE, IS ADVICE.

Gunpowder is now employed to free large smokestacks or kiln chimneys from the soot that has accumulated in them and is choking the draft. All that is required is a stack gun and some blasting powder. This gun can be used in cleaning either lined or unlined brick or steel stacks without injuring either the stack or the lining.

An old piece of shafting about four inches in diameter and from fourteen to sixteen inches long is the gun, which can be mounted on a pedestal about six inches in diameter so that it will stand in an upright position. A hole one and three-quarter inches in diameter and ten inches long is bored in the center of the shaft, with another one-quarter inch in diameter at right angles to it. The second hole, which extends to the bottom of the central hole, serves as a touch hole for inserting the fuse.

To clean the stack blasting powder is poured into the mouth of the gun to about two inches from the top and covered with dry clay. A short piece of fuse is inserted in the touch hole in contact with the main powder charge. The flue door at the bottom of the stack is opened and the gun placed on the floor in the center of the stack. After lighting the fuse the flue door is closed and the resulting explosion shakes and loosens the soot adhering to the sides, causing it to fall to the bottom, where it is readily removed through the flue door.

A charge of eight inches of powder, one and three-quarter inches in diameter, is sufficient for a stack four feet or more in diameter and one hundred feet high, according to the "Scientific American." The number of shots required to clean the stack thoroughly, of course, depends upon its condition, but ordinarily three or four shots will be enough unless there is a large accumulation of soot. The size of the charge can be regulated to suit the height and diameter of the stack. —Exchange.

A lively line of criticism has been launched in the House of Lords over the alleged scandals in connection with the distribution of birthday honours. It was time. In democratic Canada, at least, this birthday honour business has about played out, and we all pretty well agree with the Earl of Selborne, who moved that hereafter the public be given particulars as to why honours are bestowed and also the cash price, if any. In England it has become a regular habit to "honour" those who contribute largely to party funds, but at the same time Baron Beresford complains that the money changing hands too often goes into the pockets of those offering the "honours" for sale. If we are to have honours, why not place them on an established cash basis, so much for a plain knighthood, so much for a knighthood with frills, so much for a baronet, and so on up the list. There would then be no further deception. All would be out in the open and plain sailing. Under this system, the millionaire who had accumulated his pile would simply size up the honour he desired and ask the latest quotation. He might get a discount for cash in advance or arrange to pay the net price when the goods were delivered. As a commercial nation, with huge bills to meet, the British people should see the possibilities of opening up a first-class trade in titles, particularly for export.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Which Was Which?

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Lucy," said Lucinda, "I don't believe your Bob or my Dick can tell us apart."

"Not in the dark," was the reply.

"Nor in the light. Suppose we change our engagement rings and see if it doesn't fool them. I'll exchange my diamond solitaire for your sapphire. We dress alike, and Dick has said that we look more alike than any twins he has ever known. The only difference in any of the things about us is our engagement rings."

"We can try it anyway."

So the girls exchanged rings. It was Saturday, and their lovers usually called on that evening. Lucy's fiance came in first, and Lucinda went down to receive him with her sister's diamond ring on her finger.

Bob Brackett arrived half an hour after Weatherbee. He was shown, as usual, into the library, where he found Lucy with her sister's sapphire on her finger. He, too, was deceived. The pair had not been long together when Brackett and Lucinda came into the room where they were.

"We've been discussing the wedding," Brackett said, "and there are points we must talk over with you two. How about the ushers? Shall we limit the reception to relatives or make it general?"

A number of such questions were taken up and discussed. The girls soon dropped their fiances out of the argument, deliberating with each other. Dick winked at Bob and said:

"Let's go and have a smoke, Bob. We don't count in these wedding plans."

The young men went to the smoking room, and Dick said to Bob, "Seen anything unusual in your girl?"

"No. Why do you ask?"

"They're putting up a job on us. It wasn't Lucinda who received you; it was Lucy."

"You don't mean it!"

"Yes, I do. I found out that Lucinda was with me by talking with her. When I mentioned something that only Lucy knew she was dead ignorant of it. But I didn't let on. I pretended still to be fooled. Now I tell you what we do. When they laugh at us for being fooled we'll declare we're not fooled at all. You cling to Lucy, and I'll do the same by Lucinda."

"Good boy! We'll do it!"

They returned to the library after their smoke without manifesting the slightest evidence that they had discovered the ruse that was being practiced upon them. When they arose to go Dick, bidding good night to Lucinda, offered the usual kiss. She drew back, laughing. He stood looking at her with well feigned surprise.

"I'm not your girl; I'm Lucinda," she said.

"Oh, come! You can't impose on me in that way," said Dick. "You don't suppose I can't tell the girl I love from some other girl, do you?"

At this juncture Lucy, who in like manner had refused Bob a kiss, found it necessary to struggle with him. He pretended to take the matter in high dudgeon. Then the girls, both talking at once and both laughing, tried to explain that they had been playing a joke on their lovers. Dick, who led the way for both, winked at Bob, then walked up to Lucy and took her in his arms, whereupon Bob angrily pulled him away. Dick, in a fine stage passion, struck the man who had interfered with him, and a fracas ensued, the girls trying to part the antagonists. Bob declared that Lucy was the girl he loved and he would have no other. Dick veered around to his opinion, saying that he believed Bob was right and, having engaged himself to the girl who wore the ring he had given her, he didn't propose to marry her sister. Finally the two young men left the house, neither of their fiancees having received the usual parting kiss.

The girls stood looking at each other. They had some time before ceased to laugh.

"This is serious," said Lucy.

"Who proposed it?"

"I, but I didn't think they would be so stupid as to mistake us permanently."

"How are we going to prove which is which?"

"Mother'll have to set them right."

"I'm not sure they'll believe even her."

The next day Lucy called up her Dick on the phone.

"Dick," she said, "I'm Lucy."

"Which Lucy—the real one or the one whom it was attempted to foist on me last night?"

"Why, I'm the real Lucy. I wore Lucinda's ring."

There was a click, then a silence which Lucy could not break. She suggested that Lucinda call up Bob and try to appease him. Lucinda did so and, by promising that he and Dick might choose for themselves, secured his promise to call the same evening and bring Dick with him.

"Now, which is which?" said Lucy.

Each man walked up to the girl he was really engaged to and gave her a kiss, which she received willingly. The girls were much relieved. The men refused to admit that they had changed rings and that each man had not passed the evening with his fiancee. But after awhile they told the story of their collusion and, having been roundly scolded for joking on so serious a subject, were forgiven.

Imprisoned in the Wind.

Butterflies may be imprisoned and uninjured in the midst of a whirlwind. Gales in a genuine typhoon are so terrible that the stoutest ships can scarcely hope to weather them, but there is a spot at the very center of the storm where something like a dead calm prevails. From the outer edge of the disturbance, which may be 300 miles across, the wind velocity increases toward the center until within a few miles of that point there comes a sudden lull. There the rain ceases and the sky often clears. SUCCESSFULLY RAN GAUNTLET OF GERMAN FORTS ON SCHELDT

Motorboat, Flying Teuton Admiral's Flag, Leaves Antwerp With Belgians For the Belgian Army and Lands Them in Flanders

AMSTERDAM, September 14.—The Telegraaf gives particulars of the adventure of the Belgian motor-boat Scaldish, which left Antwerp on Sunday and arrived at Walvoorden, East Zeeland, in Flanders, by way of Holland, with Belgians for the Belgian army. The Scaldish belongs to the Belgian Government, but was confiscated by the Germans, who re-christened her Scheldo and fitted her luxuriously for the use of the highest officers. The Belgian pilot, van Dingen, always known as "Jof," was appointed captain because he knew the river intimately. He frequently had the Governor-General aboard, and generally floated the admiral's flag, for which every guard on the Scheldt and the Wilhebrook canal showed respect. He determined on a serious attempt to convey Belgian civilians to Holland, these men being so weary of German tyranny that they were willing to risk their lives to escape. "Jof" had orders to take Governor-General Falkenhous from Antwerp to Brussels last Monday. He reckoned if he cruised northward on Sunday the guards on the Scheldt would think the Governor-General was taking a trip to the frontier along the forts. He started on Sunday at midday, hoisting the admiral's flag. The Belgian civilians were hidden below the deck and the captain and two assistants alone remained on deck. They passed the forts of South Maria and Phillip do Paddro by Liefkensoek and Doel, the German flag being saluted everywhere and the soldiers presenting arms. At Doel the whole guard turned out. Close to the frontier the motor stopped, the petrol being almost exhausted. A German patrol boat approached, but no assistance being asked, apparently did not dare to come alongside a boat flying the admiral's flag. A friendly salute by "Jof" indicated that he did not require assistance. His salute was returned. By good luck the motors were made to work a little longer, and the tide also helped the vessel ultimately to reach Holland, where after a visit of examination by the Dutch naval authorities enough petrol was obtained to enable the boat to reach Walvoorden, where the captain and passengers were heartily welcomed and congratulated on the success of the daring and dangerous adventure. The incident created much amusement on the whole Scheldt.

FARMERS— Protect Your Interests

There is great danger from fire during the threshing season. We respectfully offer the following suggestions as precautionary measures:

1.—Use coal as fuel if possible.

2.—Do not thresh when a heavy wind blows directly into your barn.

3.—Be sure that an adequate supply of water is close at hand in accordance with the conditions of your insurance policy.

4.—See that the engine is at least 20 feet from the nearest building or stack.

5.—When stopped during meal time see to it that a competent person is left in charge of the engine with plenty of water at hand.

6.—Allow no smoking about your buildings at any time.

7.—Remember that any thresher not using a proper screen or spark arrester is liable to imprisonment and fine.

By keeping these points in mind you may save yourself and the Company heavy loss.

CATTLE TRADE SLOW, PRICES ABOUT STEADY

Only Common to Medium Qualities Offering on Week End Market —Hogs Firm

The strong opening of Monday's market failed to hold good throughout the week. With a moderately heavy run of cattle offering, including a few good to choice lots, prices made an early advance of 25c to 30c over the previous week. The offerings for succeeding days were not up to Monday's average in quality, by far the larger bulk consisting of common to medium quality, with too many of the light eastern rough variety. Choice export steers were conspicuously absent all through the week, though there is a good steady market for this class to fill the demands of the New York and Eastern points. Choice butcher steers and heifers of more handy weights were not as plentiful as desired. For the rest there was but an indifferent demand, and prices generally were inclined to ease off.

The demand for stocks and heifers of good breedy quality was fairly steady, but on the whole not as good as the week before.

Butcher cows and bulls were generally of poor quality, and prices were barely steady.

The demand for the small stock was good all through. Calves were firm and a little higher as the week advanced. Sheep were steady, while lambs advanced 75c to a dollar early in the week, and held steady at the advance all through.

Receipts of hogs were disappointingly small, and after early attempts to get prices down a little, the leading packers were reluctantly compelled to bid up to last week's closing price at $18.25, fed and watered, but managed to get a quarter off on the closing market.

MARRIAGE BY PROXY FOR ANZAC TROOPS

Australian Government Will Consult Churches in This Connection.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 14.—William M. Hughes, Premier of Australia, announced in the House of Representatives that the Government intended to consult the churches regarding some form of marriage by proxy between Australians at the front and women in Australia.

In a New England town a local celebrity was brought up before the justice for stealing chickens, relates Case and Casement. The prisoner was noted for never telling the truth when he could help it and consequently there was general surprise when he pleaded guilty. It evidently staggered the justice. He rubbed his glasses and then scratched his head. "I guess —I'm afraid—well, Hiram," said he, after a thoughtful pause, "I guess I'll have to more evidence before I sentence you."

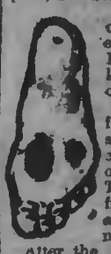
PEEL OFF CALLUSES WITH THE FINGERS

To painlessly and quickly remove any callus spots from the bottom of the feet apply a few drops of freezone directly upon the hardened skin and shortly it will peel right off without pain, soreness or bleeding.



This drug is an ether compound. It simply loosens the dead callused skin. It doesn't eat it away, but loosens it so it peels right off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of this freezone costs little at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath and surrounding, is found pink and healthy, and not inflamed, or even irritated. This is a good thing to know.

Children should be trained to be particular about washing their hands before meals.

There isn't a member of the family need suffer from indigestion, sick headaches, biliousness, fermented stomach, etc., if he or she will take Chamberlain's Tablets. LITTLE BOY HAD DIARRHOEA

Only Blood Passed Bowels

Diarrhoea, dysentery and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially of children, during the summer months, than any other form of disease.

Diarrhoea does not need to persist for any length of time until the whole system is weakened and no other disease so quickly undermines the strength and brings about a condition of prostration and often collapse.

Mrs. E. Stoddard, Lower Clark's Harbour, N.S., writes. "When my little boy was a year and a half old he was taken awfully bad with diarrhoea. I had the doctor, but he got worse so that only blood passed his bowels. I tried everything, but he got no relief. One day while I was at work, I picked up a piece of paper, and on it was an advertisement for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. After trying a bottle he began to get better and the second one made a cure. I would not be without it in the house for my little ones. I am proud to say "Dr. Fowler's" saved my little boy's life."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 72 years and there are many imitations of this wonderful bowel complaint remedy. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c.

DEATH PROBABLE PENALTY FOR KORNILOFF

A GERMAN SUB. OFF THE ATLANTIC COAST

The British Troops Make Gains In Attack On The Belgian Front

Positions Improved Field Marshal Haig Announces and German Attempts to Retake Lost Ground Were Dispersed by Artillery Fire---German Submarines Reported 65 Miles East of Nantucket Light Ship.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 15.—British troops last night made a slight advance on the Belgian front east of Westhook, and improved their positions, according to the British official statement issued to-day. A strong German detachment which attempted to regain the ground captured by the British earlier in the day northeast of St. Julien, was dispersed by artillery fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, September 15.—British steamer Bat which arrived here to-day, reported that early yesterday morning a wireless "S.O.S." call was heard stating that the ship from which the message came was being shelled by a German submarine, the location being 65 miles east of Nantucket Lightship.

Additional information that the submarine was in the Western Atlantic was brought by another British liner which arrived here to-day from an English port. Officers of the liner said they had been instructed to watch out for U-boats† when nearing the American coast. The vessel which sent the S.O.S. had a name ending with "Abby," of which there are several in Atlantic trade.

BERLIN, via London, September 15.—The Berlin Vossische Zeitung to-day suggested "Spurlos Versenkt" treatment for Count Luxburg, the German Minister at Buenos Aires. "His intentions were of the best," the editorial declared, "but he was too temperamental. He should be recalled. Let him spurlos Versenkt."—"Spurlos Versenkt" means literally "sunk without a trace." It was Luxburg's own terminology of how Germany should deal with certain Argentine ships, revealed by the American State Department.

WASHINGTON, September 15.—The Central Powers' reported reply to the Vatican peace proposal aroused only curiosity here to-day. Inasmuch as the vague forecasts of it gave no hope of the fulfillment of President Wilson's demands for the elimination of Kaiserism, authorities here showed little interest. The single possibility it offers is that it will create new peace discussion—interfering with America's war work—and perhaps inspire the Pope to further proffers. That the United States will stand pat on its declarations to the Pope is certain, and the Allies will be with her. The United States Government is positive that the tide can be turned against Germany by both military and economic blows, and hence is not interested in any half-way peace offers of Germany. Kaiserism must go—that is the sum and substance of American demands. Meantime Germany is being chocked by the embargo. Diplomatic quarters buzzed with talk of the Dutch Minister Van Rappard's recall. Some quarters thought there might be some connecting link between that and Roman matters, though official explanation was lacking. Van Rappard himself offered no immediate explanation, though it was not due to any inability on his part to induce the United States to relax its embargo further. The Russian situation appears still to have much dynamite about it, though Russian officials here insisted that Kerensky has so demonstrated his strength that he will be able to rid the next storm—the thratened Cabinet upheaval.

LIQUID FIRE INSTRUCTION FOR THE SAMMIES

WILL EMPLOY MORE WOMEN

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 15.—"It will mean that we will have to use more girls." This was the reply of H. M. Tucker, assistant general manager of the T. Eaton Company's store here, when asked what effect conscription would have upon the company's business here. "I think women will rise to the occasion," he continued. "We have about 300 men in the first class, but I don't know how many of them are eligible. I expect that we will be able to get women who will fill their places. Women have been surprisingly good in other places they have filled, and I think they will respond all right."

RUSSIAN PEOPLE SEE ONLY DEATH FOR KORNILOFF

Only Two Courses, Surrender or Suicide, Open to Generalissimo Who Misjudged Russia and Now Must Pay the Penalty

BY HIS OWN DECREE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PETROGRAD, Sept. 15.—Korniloff misjudged Russia, therefore it seems he must die. His fate had not yet been officially decided to-day. He has not yet formally surrendered, but Petrograd sees only two courses open to him—suicide or surrender.

The one means death just as certainly as the other, in the view of the populace. Korniloff himself decreed that punishment for revolters in the army. It was the main issue which he projected into the Moscow Convention. He put it into effect at once. Probably a number of Russian private soldiers have already paid the penalty of infractions of discipline.

It was at the Moscow Conference that Korniloff planned his coup. I believe the idea sprang full grown into his brain at the dramatic moment when the great army commander stood on the platform in the City Hall of Moscow, acclaimed a hero, in five minutes' tumultuous demonstrations. A splendid audience of bankers, merchants, manufacturers and intellectuals in complacent confidence arose from the boxes and galleries. They cheered the militant figure tumultuously. For five minutes the noise continued unabated. Even Korniloff's stoicism melted under the warmth. He visibly expanded.

That was the moment as I see it today, that the idea of power was established in the Commander-in-Chief's mind. He believed the cheers were those of all Russia, but in one corner of the vast hall 300 men—only a tenth of the great assembly—sat grim and silent throughout the cheers. The frenzied ones jeered at them. Yells demanded they arise and join. But they sat silent. Korniloff, the General, the military man par excellence, did not know them. He was ignorant of what was happening away from the battle front. Constantly surrounded by military affairs, constantly studying military strategy, ever thinking in terms of army life, the generalissimo thought all the voice of Russia spoke to him in this great demonstration. If Korniloff thought at all about the silent 300, he thought they were a minority. He was wrong. They represented the armed citizens of Russia, the majority. Every man of the 300 had been elected by the votes of thousands of soldiers at the front and by workers throughout the nation. To them Korniloff represented everything in Russia that they had overthrown by the revolution—the cold power of military force. Yet Korniloff disdained to look at them. In his ears there resounded the sweet sound of 2,700 wildly acclaiming delegates, and he forgot the chorus was not joined in by the grim 300. It must have been at this dramatic moment that the idea of revolt came to Korniloff. Thus it happened when Korniloff's troops met those of the Provisional Government forty miles from Petrograd, there was no fighting. On the contrary the men of the two sides fraternized and not a shot was fired. The men in the ranks on both sides understood.

PICKPOCKETS APPREHENDED

Four Men Alleged to Have Been Operating at the Peterboro' Fair Came to Grief Yesterday — Had Over a Thousand Dollars Concealed in Their Clothing

WERE REMANDED

Yesterday was a poor day for pickpockets at the Peterborough Industrial Fair. A record breaking crowd did not prevent the police from capturing four promising looking suspects, who this morning appeared in Police Court and pleaded not guilty to a nominal charge of vagrancy. The quartette was remanded for one week in order to enable the police to look up the criminal records of the accused. Their names are Thomas Flynn, Owen Foley, Samuel Scarting and Francis Davis. The latter was characterized as the "tout" of the gang, which apparently operated under the direction of Flynn. Two other members of the gang, including a woman, got away in an automobile, and were reported to be heading for Toronto. The police throughout Ontario have been notified, and the fugitives may be arrested any moment.

A Big Haul.

After the four men were placed in the cells yesterday a search revealed over a thousand dollars, concealed in their clothing. This money was concealed on the men in sundry places. Some of it was found in their socks, garters, shirts and underwear, while a few wads were taken from their pockets. The leader of the gang had over five hundred dollars concealed in various parts of his clothing. After a preliminary search had been made of one man, he was again removed from the cell and searched. This time another two hundred dollars was unearthed. One man hid a substantial roll in his cell. "The money was stuck all over them," said Chief Thompson.

Four Victims.

Four victims to the Fair reported the loss of money during the day. One man lost fifty dollars and another fifty-five dollars. The plain-clothesmen were active all afternoon, and they were not long in spotting the quartette. The men evidently became suspicious of Detectives Newhall and Meagher, and late in the afternoon Scarting left the grounds and made his way to the C.P.R. Station. He was followed and arrested just as he was boarding a train. The other three men were followed to the G.T.R. Station shortly after five o'clock. When they discovered they were being followed they made a pretence of boarding a passenger train, only to walk through one of the coaches and jump off on the other side from the station. They ran down Bethune Street, and were lost sight of by the police. A message was sent into the Police Station to the effect that the men might be found at the Empress Hotel. Chief Thompson went down, and in the bar of the Empress discovered the two men having a little libation. The Chief walked between them and placed them under arrest. "What do you want? We are staying here," protested the accused. "You can come and stay with me for a while," replied the Chief, as he escorted the men to the station. The fourth man of the party was picked up a few minutes later.

The men hail from Montreal and Boston. They are believed to have operated in Oshawa during the Fair, when upwards of four hundred dollars was reported missing as a result of pickpockets.

The men will sojourn in the County Gaol for a week, and in the meantime their photographs and finger prints will be forwarded to the Criminal Bureau for identification.

CANADA MUST NOT DESERT THEM

The Allied Armies must have men, but the armies must have food. It is still true that an army fights upon its stomach. Victory will eventually go to the army that can hold out the longest; holding out depends entirely upon food. The Allied Armies have established a supremacy over the Armies of the Central Powers. Germany is now fighting a defensive war on land in the hope that her submarines will reduce Great Britain and France and Italy to starvation and submission, before the collapse of her own armies.

Germany knows there is a world famine in wheat;:. Germany knows there is a world shortage of beef; Germany knows the world's supply of bacon is fast decreasing; Germany knows that if she can prevent wheat, beef and bacon from reaching the European Allies she has a gambler's chance of snatching victory from the Allies, or of negotiating a compromise, and to her, an advantageous peace.

The countries to whom the European Allies look for the minimum supplies of food to keep them going are Canada and the United States. While it is true that Australia produces more food than she needs, and while New Zealand, the Argentine and India have exportable supplies of foodstuffs, these foods are not readily available to the Allies because of the lack of shipping. A ship can make nearly three round trips between British and Canadian ports in the time that it would take to make a round trip to Australia, New Zealand or India. She can make two trips in the time it would take to go to the Argentine. Moreover, the hazard of bringing food from the Argentine is very great; and as far as wheat is concerned, there is none now to be had because their last crop was a failure.

What Canadians and people in the United States are asked to do is, eat less white bread, less beef, and less bacon; and in addition, to stop wasting food. Every Canadian household is to be asked to sign a Food Service Pledge. This pledge involves the solemn obligation to substitute other foods for 25 per cent. of the white bread, beef and bacon they now consume.

It is to be hoped that Canada will not fail in this service. Canada must not desert her men on the firing line, nor those of her Allies, to whom the war is a more terrible reality than it has so for been to us.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—An order-in-Council providing for the issue of war badges by the Canadian Government to members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who have honourably retired or have been honourably discharged or who have been rejected as medically unfit, was tabled in the Commons yesterday. Heretofore, there has been no provision for a special distinctive badge to be given exclusively to men who have seen active service overseas. Badges for this purpose have been issued by the voluntary efforts of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the St. John Ambulance Association to a large number of the returned men. The order-in-Council states that great value is attached to these badges by the holders, and that it is desirable for the Government to take over and continue their issue.

The Four Classes.

Those men who are entitled to receive badges are divided into four classes. The first class consists of members of the C.E.F. who have seen active service at the front and of officers who have been honourably retired or in the case of N.C.O.'s and men who have been honourably discharged — or have been returned to, or retained in, Canada on duty.

The second class consists of officers or men who have been honourably discharged on account of old age, wounds or sickness which would render them permanently unfit for further military service.

The third class consists of members of the C.E.F., not includedd in the preceding classes, who have been honourably retired on account of old age, wounds or sickness.

Class four consists of those who prior to August 10 offered themselves for active service and were rejected, as, and are still, medically unfit.

The order-in-Council prescribed the form of badge to be issued to the men of each class. For Class A. the Union Jack button, bearing the words, "For service at the front," similar to those at present issued by the Canadian Patriotic Fund will be continued.

Penalties for Fraud.

A silver badge to be issued by the Imperial authorities will be given to the men of Class B. The men of Class C will be given a metal button bearing a crown, the word "Canada," and also "Honourable service," for the fourth class a metal button bearing the words "Honourably exempt" and "Canada" will be issued.

Applications may be made on forms supplied for the purpose and proofs consisting of discharge certificates or medical certificates of unfitness must be furnished by applicants.

The order-in-Council provides that everyone now in possession of a badge issued by the Canadian Patriotic Fund must apply to the authorities to have the same registered and obtain a certificate. Failure to do this may render the wearer liable to a fine of $500, or six months in jail. Penalties for misrepresentation, falsely wearing a badge, or illegally manufacturing them, are provided.

Mrs. Sanderson, Braidwood Avenue, has received a letter from her brother, Sapper Wm. J. Hamilton, of the Canadian Engineers, who was reported wounded on August 17th. Sapper Hamilton writes that he was hit in the left foot and the right side.

Mrs. A. Stanley, 164 Charlotte street, has received an interesting letter from her husband, Sergt. Albert Stanley, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is now at the front with the 21st Battalion. Speaking of the Lens scrap, the letter, which has been censored, says: "Sergt. Searight was killed and Sergt. Norman Saxby and Andy Rutter were wounded. I don't think either was very bad—just a nice blighty. Your humble came out without a scratch, although at one time I did not think I would. Fritzy made a counter attack on us and drove us out of the front line; (this is the time Saxby and Rutter were wounded), but we went back and reorganised, and just four and a half minutes (official time) after he took the line off us we had it back again. I got three souvenirs, two Andy gave me, an eagle off a Prussian guard's helmet and a Fritzy killed, and one I got myself—a belt. The belt has an extra value attached to it as it has a bullet hole through where I shot the owner.

We are now on rest and expect to be out for between two and three weeks. Mr. Widdifield got wounded the same time as Andy. I wish I could have taken a photograph of Saxby just after he got woundtd. His rifle "jammed" on him. He threw it down with a few polite remarks about it, and went at the Heinies with his fists. He is some boxer and he was pretty mad at the time, laying out three Germans, which afterward we killed. It was worth five dollars to see that little bit of scrapping.

There is no doubt that the Great War Veterans' model trench has made one of the biggest hits ever recorded at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. From before noon, yesterday, until late last night the trench was crowded with visitors, thousands passing through and viewing the points of interest. It is safe to say that the people of Peterborough and district know more about the appearance of a front line trench to-

Friday's Figures of Paid Admissions Were 11,155 as Compared With 7702 A Year Ago—Total Attendance For First Two Days is 11,994.

YESTERDAY'S EVENTS

FAIR FIGURES.

Second Day Attendance.

1917	11,155
Increase	3,453

These totals of the paid admissions on the second day of the Fair establish a new record for the Industrial Exhibition, according to the information available this morning. Mr. Felix Browncombe, who is the statistician and especially the official that handles the bills and bullion as it comes in bulk from the ticket sellers, made the announcement of yesterday's splendid crowd. The figures do not give an adequate idea of the attendance, for there were many exhibitors and workers who were not contributors at the gate.

Morning	688
Afternoon	7,068
Evening	3,621
	11,155
Last year they were:
Morning	331
Afternoon	5,184
Evening	2,187
	7,702

Thursday's total attendance was 839 against nothing of a year ago. Thus the total for the first two days is 11,994 compared with 7,702 in 1916.

THE AFTERNOON PROGRAMME.

The afternoon programme, before the grandstand, was opened by short addresses from Mayor Duffus, Mr. E. J. Soden and His Honour Judge Huycke, the speakers using a motor car as a platform. All three referred to the success of the Greater Production movement and congratulated the people generally upon what had been accomplished. Judge Huycke, who formally declared the Exhibition open, referred to the importance of the event in bringing the people of the city and country more closely together.

The band then played the National Anthem.

A march past of the Peterborough Fire Department, with Chief Grange making his first public appearance in that capacity, made a splendid showing.

The Aerial Howards.

The feature of the grandstand performance was the sensational act of the aerial Howards, whose thrilling feats on a lofty wire left the crowd breathless. The woman member of the team rides a bicycle along the slender wire while suspended from the wheel, is a trapeze upon which Mr. Howard performs difficult feats. As the cyclist rode backwards and forwards the man below hung by his heels and performed other similar stunts. The climax, however, came when the act proper was over. The wire was a little higher at one end and when Mrs. Howard attempted to drive the bicycle back to the platform from which she started she could not make the grade. Half a dozen times she tried and failed, and the crowd was growing very ner-

SATURDAY, SEPT. 15, 1917

A HOUSE FAMINE.

A condition closely related to the growth of Peterborough consists in a very decided scarcity of houses for rental. A real estate agent, in casual conversation, to-day, stated that he had many clients applying to him every day, and he was compelled to turn them away, houseless. He is thirty houses short of the demands made upon him. In his distress he applied to other house agents, and they were in a similar condition; they had nothing on their lists to help him out. He has five or six applications daily for houses for persons coming from Sudbury, Orillia, Campbellford, Cobourg and other surrounding towns, but is unable to supply the demand. There are a few dwelling houses vacant, but, for the most part they are either too large or too small, or otherwise undesirable to meet the wants of persons desiring homes.

The agent referred to is only one of five or six, and the others are said to be in no better position to meet the demand. This is a serious condition of affairs. In the interests of the growth of the city and of meeting the demands for employment, it is not desirable to be compelled to turn away prospective new citizens for lack of roofs to shelter them. We naturally look to the City Council, the Board of Trade, and the Greater Peterborough Association to take hold of the matter and make some effort to meet the situation. The proposal of Alderman Dobbin, to convert the old West Ward school building into several apartments, offers a partial solution, and similar treatment of unoccupied or unused upper floors of stores would be a help. How to co-ordinate civic and quasi civic activities is the problem.

Owing to the high price of materials of all kinds for building purposes, there have been very few houses erected in recent years; but it is evident that something must be done to supply the lack of houses. There is need for a large number of new houses of moderate size to meet the requirements of the average tenant.

Conscription is a win-the-war measure; the Borden government's disfranchising franchise bill is a win-the-election scheme.

WHERE THE BLAME LIES.

Newspaper articles appearing at the end of the first full year of the Ontario Temperance Act, record its wonderful success as apparent in the great decrease of arrests for drunkenness. No doubt the same would apply to statistics from other parts of the province. What would the results have been if we had had total prohibition—prohibition of importation as well as of sale over the bar and in shops?

Statistics regarding the decrease of arrests for drunkenness are only surface indications of the benefits derived. They do not indicate an undercurrent of evil and demoralization, impossible of statistical tabulation, that has resulted and is resulting from the failure of the Dominion Government to do, as the United States Government has done—prohibit absolutely the importation of liquor into States that have adopted prohibitory legislation; failure to do as the United States has done—prohibit the use of food grains and food articles for making whisky.

But instead of these help win the war measure, we have in full play facilities for the importation of strong drink into Ontario, contrary to the spirit and intention of the law, and contrary to war-winning interests. We have almost every house in Ontario flooded with whisky circulars, from Montreal dealers; we have their advertisements damned in the newspapers. We have every possible inducement presented to facilitate, the illicit importation of strong drink, and the opportunity is liberally used. The express companies are waxing fat over the increased business of carrying whisky parcels into Ontario. It is this permitted importation that contributes to, if it does not mainly cause, the offences committed against the Act. Few as they are compared to similar offences under the open bar, they would have been almost entirely absent, if importation of drink had not been permitted.

But convictions for drunkenness are not the worst or most perilous results of permitted importation. This importation is, it is feared, working a terrible domestic demoralization, developing the pantry habit of drinking. In hundreds of homes where there was no strong drink except for medical purposed when free access to the bar was permitted, there are stocks of strong drink that are tempting to its social use and abuse, and helping fix individual habits of drink upon persons that never drank before—upon women as well as men who would never dream of entering a bar. This deplorable condition and menace of worse conditions—would never have resulted and would not exist now, if it were not for the government violation of the spirit and intention of the Ontario Temperance Ac, by he permission of the unimpeded or farcically restricted, importation of strong drink.

The failure of the Dominion Government to act in the matter of prohibition of importation not only contributes to breach of the provisions of the law, and the promotion of secret drinking, but it discredits the act; and tends to affect public sentiment in relation to the popular endorsation of the Act in 1919.

One of the hundreds of ways we can help win the war is preventing food waste in the home.

CONSERVATION.

Twenty dolairs per hundred pounds for hogs in Chicago and an approximate figure in Canadian markets seem to be the high water mark of living cost. Beef cattle prices are a close second. Never before have farmers received such figures for their stock; and although feed prices are high they do not fully explain the high cost of hogs and beef stock; and the price of feed is far more than offset by those for live stock.

There does not seem to much prospect for immediate relief. Those who should know say that the high prices will continle for years after the war, which is mediately, if not directly the cause of the high prices prevailing. In the United States the hog supply is three million short of five years ago; and in Canada we have so great a scarcity of hogs that we cannot meet the domestic demand from our own stock, but import large quantities of United States' pork, hams and becon. In the matter of beef cattle there is a great shortage all over owing largely to the extraordinary demand and shortage of stock. The beef cattle of the United States have decreased, with more people to feed, some seven million head in the past nine or ten years.

The remoter causes of this shortage, consist in our failure to practice conservation—the key note of maintenance of al lour resources—health or moral conditions or material resources. We have at this time shortage of financial resources. We cannot finance allied orders for munitions and other supplies, and we have therefore a slackening in munition orders and and orders for our bacon. We have spent money too lavishly in ways that might have been avoided, without injury to our intrtest in way waging. We are suffering the penalty of forest waste in the high prices of lumber. We have in the past cut recklessly, not sparing immature timber, nor replacing the matured growth, necessarily removed, by planing. We have promitted, or, at least, suffered, untold loss by forest fires, entirely preventable, fires that not only virtually destroyed mature timber growth, young forest—the forest of the future.

In the matter of beef cattle we have been short sighted in the matter of conservation of supply. For the past quarter of a century we havt run strongly to dairying, and too much has been sacrificed to the production of milk and butter and cheese. Calves have been killed by millions that might have been reared for beef stock. It was thought the better way; but we are paying the penalty now in beef scarcity and exorbitant beef cost. Prof. Rutherford, the leading authority on live stock subjects, speaking recently on the beef supply shortage, said: "There has been a tremendous waste in the slaughter of calves."

And the war's needs and the beef famine are not teaching us wisdom. The Government Food Controller, Hon. Mr. Hanna, prescribes meatless days to save beef and bacon, but permits the use of veal and lamb; thus contributing to what Prof. Rutherford calls a tremendous waste of beef stock. In the national area where millions of animals are concerned a little saving, a little conservation, is bound to have a tremendous aggregate result. Scarcity of feed may be pleaded as an excuse for slaughtering calves; but that has less force in view of the way we have this year demonstrated our capacity for greater soil production, and our ability to provide feed for more growing stock. Every little done by erybody will help. In the matter of hog feeding we are urged by authorities not to slaughter pigs till they have reached a proper stage of maturity—not to kill pigs under 200 pounds. Thirty or forty pounds added to the weight of every hog in Canada, would mean a great increase in aggregate bulk of pork product.

We are living in a period of high prices of foods. Where these are not caused by piratical combinations to enhance prices, or to uncontrollable demand, we can adjust ourselves to conditions by the practice of rigid economy; by practising conservation; by preventing waste. This may mean sacrifice; but this is a time when sacrifice, great or small, for every citizen, great or small, is called for and can be made.

The Japanese are a nation of fishermen, and their diet is principally fish; and a hardier of healthier race does not exist.

BRITANNIA'S ROLL CALL

As in a dream I saw a host
Like sands beside the sea,
And every man was but the ghost
Of what he used to be.
Yet still they marched with martial mien,
Scars healed and cripples whole,
And answered, while with sobs between
Britannia called the roll.

"We are the men who died for you
From castle, court and hall,
The gilded youth, the tried and true,
Who had, and gave you all;
Noblesse oblige—at your command,
Through war's red gate we passed
To that strange unimagined land
Wherein the first are last.

"We are the men who died for you,
In stifling, baffling waves;
For us no tears, as tribute due,
On peaceful churchyard graves.
Instead, our weary bones are tossed
To alien deeps and bourns,
Where only for the loved and lost
The lonely seabird mourns.

"We are the men who died for you,
From factories, shops and farms;
We dropped the tasks we used to do
And changed our tools for arms,
And in the inch by inch advance
Through labyrinths of caves,
We filled the ruined fields of France
With harvests of fresh graves.

"We are the men who died for you,
The disinherited,
The low-born, slum-bred, reckless few
Who also fought and bled
In life dishonoured and denied,
With the elect we stand,
They asked us where we lived and died,
We said—in No Man's Land.

"We are the men who died for you,
Gathered from ends of earth,
As welcome and as loyal, too,
As men of English birth.
We gave to serve our mother's needs
Our love, our blood, our breath
Of different breeds and different creeds,
But brothers all in death.

"We whom the gods love died for you,
By water, air or fire,
And some to war's wild wreckage threw
Rent lute and unstrung lyre;
Others shall hear your trumpets blow
When victory ends the strife,
We are content for now you know
We loved you more than life.

—Julia S. Dinsmore.

MEXICO IS EXCITED OVER DISCLOSURES

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, HOWEVER, STILL WITHOUT DETAILS OF DISCLOSURE.

Mexico City, Sept. 14.—The revelation that Heinrich Von Eckhardt, the German Minister to Mexico, has been employing Folke Cronholm, the former Swedish charge d'affaires here, to convey information from Minister Von Eckhardt to the Berlin Foreign Office, has excited tremendous interest in both Mexican and foreign circles in the capital.

The Government officials still were without official information regarding the disclosures, but they gave the newspaper accounts their close attention. None would give an opinion on the subject, however, and it is believed the attitude the Mexican Government means to take will not be disclosed until a copy of Minister Von Eckhardt's letter is formally forwarded through Ambassador Bonillas or delivered by the American Ambassador here.

The Poultry Prize-winners

Mr. Jas. Brown, Coxwell avenue, Toronto, who judged the poultry entries, said that Peterborough's Fair Board deserved congratulations upon the success not only of this particular section, but also of the entire Exhibition. He remarked that the competition was particularly keen in White Wyandottes, dark and light Brahmas, Rhode Island Reds and the black, silver and gold Hamburgs. The quality of the birds shown was an evidence that there are many poultry fanciers in this district. Mr. Brown paid Superintendent Paxman a compliment on the efficiency of his cooping.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

Be Clean Internally

Over 500,000 People Are Now Doing So

For many years physicians have agreed that 95 per cent. of human ills was caused by accumulated waste in the Lower Intestine; that in our present way of living Nature could not remove all this waste without assistance, no matter how regular we might be; and that the poisons from this waste circulated through the blood pulled us away down below par and were responsible for many diseases of a serious nature.

During this time the "J. B. L. Cascade" for Internal Bathing has, because of their recommendation and those of its users, been steadily growing in favor.

Recently, however, the startling news which has been covering the country that great surgeons and specialists have been operating on the Lower Intestine in such serious diseases as Tuberculosis, and attribute such conditions of chronic ill-health as Nervous Debility and Rheumatism to this cause, also saying that these poisons are favorable to the development of Cancer and Tuberculosis (as stated in a recent article in The New York Times), has caused people to become thoroughly awake to the importance of keeping the Lower Intestine free from all poisonous waste matter, and over 500,000 are now using Internal Baths.

The enthusiastic and grateful letter is by no means an exceptional one amongst the hundreds on our files—

763 7th Ave. South, Lethbridge, Alberta.

Dr. Tyrrell, Toronto:

Dear Doctor Tyrrell.—After using your "J. B. L. Cascade" for four months, I feel it my duty as a thankful patient to express my enthusiasm for the great blessing it has been to me. You cannot feel my emotions as I write this letter in praise of you in your great work. Words simply fail to express my thankfulness for the learning of your Cascade. Previous to using it I could not go a day without a dose of some sort, and since using it I have not, on my word of honor, swallowed five cents' worth of drugs. I spent over $200.00 in the two years previous to hearing of the "J. B. L." Would that all the young men and women I see in this town with their faces covered with horrid, unsightly pimples would use it. They would soon get rid of them, as I did. I must close for I will be keeping you from your work, but I could fill ten more pages of my past condition of health, also in praise of the "J. B. L." May you enjoy this life to the full.

Sincerely yours,
William Devey.

If you try the "J. B. L. Cascade" you will find yourself always bright, confident and capable—the poisonous waste makes us bilious, blue, dull and nervous. Internal Baths are Nature's own cure for Constipation—just warm water properly applied. Drugs force Nature—the "J. B. L. Cascade" gently assists her.

Character Given Men Held for Complicity in Dynamiting Case.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—Speaking of Arthur Blackwell, charged with having dynamite in his possession, and one of the men arrested in connection with the blowing up of Lord Atholstan's country home in Cartiersville, his counsel, after making a plea for a speedy trial, said he was a valued man in the locomotive plant where he was employed. Council also pointed out that Blackwell had been detained in jail while others were released on bail, that he was the superintendent of a Maisonneuve Sunday school and also a scoutmaster. The Court agreed to take Blackwell's case in eight days.

IMPRESSIONS OF A TRIP TO SCOTLAND

By Sergt. D. H. Anderson, of Peterborough

The following most interesting article was written by Sergt. D. H. Anderson of Peterborough who went overseas with the 235th Battalion.

Headquarters, Otterpool Camp,
Kent, England,
August 27th, 1917

Dear Brother, Sister and Wee Lads,—Just a little note to say that I hope you are all well as this leaves me quite so at present. I have just returned from my six days' leave in Scotland and am going to tell you about it, so prepare for a diary.

I arrived in London at about 1.30 p.m. and after having a lunch I took a taxi to the Tower of London. After depositing all your luggage with a caretaker and paying a penny for a guide book you proceed to view the wonder of London. Every corner had its policeman or guide to direct you and all through the tower were many others who, themselves looked like things of antiquity, and some of them were so old they sat sleeping.

The Tower of London was first built by William the Conqueror, for the purpose of protecting and controlling the city. As first planned it lay within the city walls, but its enlargement late in the 12th century carried its boundaries eastward beyond the walls. Part, therefore, of the Tower is in the City of London, and part outside the city, but it forms, with its surrounding fortifications, a precinct in itself. It covers an area of 18 acres within the garden rails.

The present buildings are partly of the Norman period; but architecture of almost all the styles which have flourished in England may be found within the walls. It is well to remember that though the Tower is no longer a place of great military strength it has in time past been a fortress, a palace, and a prison, and to view it rightly we must regard it in this three-fold aspect.

The oldest, and most important building is the Great Tower or Keep, called the "White Tower." The inner ward is defended by a wall, flanked by thirteen towers, the entrance to it being on the south side under the Bloody Tower. The outer ward is defended by a second wall, flanked by six Towers on the river face and by three semicircular bastions on the north face. A Ditch or Moat, now dry, encircles the whole.

The Tower was occupied as a palace by all our Kings and Queens down to Charles II. It was the custom for each monarch to lodge in the Tower before his coronation, and to ride in procession to Westminster through the city. The Palace buildings stood eastward of the Bloody Tower.

The security and thickness of the walls made it an ideal prison, or State prison, the first known prisoner being Ralf Flambard, Bishop of Durham, who had been active under William Rufus in pushing on the buildings. From that time the Tower was seldom without some captive, English or foreign, of rank and importance.

EXECUTIONS IN TOWER.

In the Tudor period the Green within the Tower was used on very rare and special occasions for executions, and condemned prisoners were usually beheaded on Tower Hill. The space in front of the chapel is called Tower Green, and was used as a burial ground; in the middle is a small square plot, paved with granite, showing the site on which stood at rare intervals the scaffold on which private executions took place. It has been specially paved by the orders of the late Queen Victoria. The following persons are known to have been executed on this spot:—

Lord Hastings, by order of the Duke of Gloucester in 1483.

Margaret Countess of Salisbury, the last of the old Angevin or Plantagenet family, 27th May, 1541.

Queen Katharine Howard, fifth wife of Henry VIII, 13th February, 1542.

Jane Viscountess Rochford, 13th February 1542.

Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, 25th February, 1601.

They were all beheaded with an axe except Queen Anne Boleyn, whose head was cut off with a sword by an executioner brought over from St. Omer for that purpose. The executioner of the Earl of Essex was not able to do his work with less than three strokes, and was mobbed and beaten by the people on his way home. The bodies of all seven were buried in the Chapel of St. Peter.

Upon entering the Tower and being told the history of each separate part of it, some of cruel, cold-blooded murder, some torture, etc., a queer feeling crept over me, one akin to loathe and horror yet of romance at being in a palace which figured so largely in our British history. It was a sight I would not have missed seeing for a good bit. There was the most wonderfull collection of armour, big guns, flint-locks and experimental makes, swords, daggers, pistols spears, etc., a collection which dated back to about the 10th Century, or at least had its origin at that time.

After seeing all I could of the Tower in the limited time I had before catching my train for Edinburg I went over to another kind of museum known as Madame Tussard's Exhibition. Here is to be found a collection of wax statutes of all the noted characters in the world, from all our Kings and Queens right down to the most wretched murderer such as Crippen who murdered his wife and ran away to Canada with another woman, she in disguise of a boy, and were discovered to be on the ship Montrose by means of a wireless message from this Country. They were arrested in Quebec and brought back to this country and executed at Pentonville, November 23, 1910. They even have the spectacles and trousers he wore at that time on this wax statute. They are all so life like that you almost feel like speaking to them and asking questions.

OFF FOR EDINBURGH

There were many other places I should have liked to see but my time to catch my train for Edinburgh was very near, so I just went and had a light lunch and then caught the 7.15 train for Edinburgh. I travelled all night, arriving in Edinburgh at 5.30 in the morning, where I visited a free Canteen for soldiers and sailors. I then took the 6.06 train for Glasgow, arriving at 9.30 a.m. where I again visited a Canteen. It is quite noticeable upon going from England to Scotland, the difference in the dispositions of the people. With the Scotch, the moment that you enter their homes there is that air about it which compels you to make yourself at home and enjoy yourself. I have heard a great deal about Scotch hospitality, but what I have experienced of it has passed all my expectations. Well, to get on with my yarn I had an hour or so in Glasgow, which I found to be a very clean and artistic city, where the people were very genial and things or commodities were very reasonable in price. I left on the 1.31 train for Dumbarton, arriving at 2.30 p.m. I didn't like it a little bit. It was a dirty, narrow streeted, dilapidated, ramshackle little place where the people stood, open-mouthed and gaped at you, hawing, as I afterwards found out, scarcely seen a Canadian soldier before. As I passed by groups of them on the street I could hear them say: "Australian, no, Canadian." I did not stay there long, I can tell you, and soon caught a tram for Balloch, at the foot of Loch Lomond, where I engaged a room and immediately proceeded to have a bath and general clean up after my journey. After coming down stairs, I was made acquainted to several Australian boys, of which there are a large number at Loch Lomond. We were soon making plans as to what we would do for a little pleasure, so finally decided to hire a row boat and go up the Loch for a little way. We went up to a little island called Inch Calliach, Inch, in Scotch, means Island. Here we explored and took a few snaps. The Loch, which we found to our own cost was very treacherous, being surrounded by high hills and mountains and the wind would come sweeping in through the Glens at most unexpected angles, chopping the Lock up in a very short time. We found it to be a very long, hard pull before we reached the hotel, as our muscles were very lax. When we arrived we were escorted into our waiting supper, and were well prepared to receive it, too. We did the food justice and were encouraged and coached by the two lady proprietors, (Old Maids) who insisted upon our eating more and more. They gave me a sensation of sitting on pins and needles, as I do not care to be watched while eating. That evening we had a little music and retired at about mid-night, I for one, glad of a nice clean bed to sleep in, after the slivers of leaky tent and was off to slumberland immediately my head touched the pillow and it seemed no longer before it was time to get up next morning. After having breakfast one of my Australian acquaintances and I decided to go up the Loch on the steamer, "Prince George." We called at many little places on the way up the Loch, Balmaha, Luss and Rowardennan, where we commenced to climb Ben Lomond. My friend was not long out of hospital and therefore not very strong, so on that account we had to go rather slowly. On the way up we took many snaps, which, if they turn out well, I will send you. We flushed many birds, which looked very much like partridge, but found out later they were grouse. The heather grew about in such wild profusion and gave off such an aromatic odour that we could scarcely resist picking it, but desisted until coming down. We finally reached the top, (3192 ft.) and after carving our initials "D.H.A. and S.V.E." on the flat rock at the top and taking a few snaps, we commenced to descend again. Just then we saw our boat making its return trip to Balloch, and knowing that we could not catch it then, decided to make the best of a bad job, and after rolling, slipping, sliding and falling we finally reached the forest area far down the Ben where we saw a sight which thrilled us with its beauty. Just ahead about four hundred yards or so was a herd of about seven stags who gracefully raised their heads and pricked their ears at our aproach, then wheeled and glided down the steep, bluffy side of the Ben into the forest, where we lost sight of them. I will never forget the view from the top of the Ben. It was magnificent from such a height. On one side was the blue, wavy line of sparkling water of Loch Katrine, on another the hazy peak of Ben Nevis, capped with a cloud of mist, on another was the indistinct, hazy line of the Atlantic and on the other the vague outline of Edinburg Castle, for we were fortunate in being up there when there was practically no fog. While we sat as the writer says, drinking in the beauty of it all and becoming intoxicated and fascinated with such glorious scenery, the sun sank peacefully to rest behind a rugged peak, sparely capped with pine trees, illuminating the upper air with its soft golden rays.

HUNTING FOR A BED.

It was about nine-thirty when we reached the hotel at Rowardennan, where we made enquiries as to some mode of conveyance, but were informed that there was none obtainable that night, so we asked for lodging and a hearty supper. We were told that the place was filled to overflowing then, but they would give us something to eat. We certainly had a feed of asparagus soup, new potatoes, carrots, cabbage, tomatoes, salad, pudding and a whole host of delicacies. We were so full we could scarcely rise. We were then ferried across the Loch to a place called Inverbeg Inn where we were told we could get lodging for the night but upon wrapping at the door a big fat Scot put his head out of a window and said, "Dinna ken we're an bed this hour the nicht?" and immediately withdrew it. We trudged on down the road for about three miles until we saw a light on the side of the road. My friend was rather tired, so we decided to go in and see if we could get something to eat anyway. So upon knocking at the door an old Scotch lady answered, with a baby in her arms. We asked her if it was correct that this was an Inn. (A jolly lie.) She said, "No it was no' an Inn," but she would get us a wee bite to eat. We apologized for having intruded and went inside. She gave us the baby to nurse, which we did alternately, while she got us a cup o' tea. It was soon ready and we enjoyed a hearty lunch. She said she was glad of our company and especially glad to do something for such bra' soldier laddies. She told us that her children were away to a party and would return shortly, "12.00" so we sat in front of the grate and a roaring fire, for it was chilly up there in the hills, until presently there was a thump! thump! thump! on the front door and in bounded a jolly sailor lad followed by half a dozen laughing lassies. We soon were acquainted and swapping experiences. Presently we suggested that we would be going on, but they were almost offended and would hear none of it. The sailor lad then showed us our bedroom, two wooden bunks built into the wall. My friend laughed fit to kill himself, as he had never seen one before. He said: "Now, if you feel anything walking around in that bed you will know that it is just bugs!" He then went out leaving us in doubt as to whether to go to bed or not, but being very tired, we decided to take a chance on it and soon were fast asleep and knew nothing more until we were awakened by a thump! thump! thump! on our door and in walked the "Tar" who announced that it was eleven o'clock and to get up for they were going to have both breakfast and dinner. He then left us, vowing different things if we failed to jump out. He continued his rounds, hanging on the girls' door, declaring he would go in and pull them out if they didn't get up. Soon we were down in the kitchen where they were getting the meal ready, and pitched in and made toast, doing odd jobs such as setting the table, which we did in a way which did not meet with the approval of the ladies. Finally we sat in to the board and punished that food, the "Tar" keeping us in peals of laughter with his unexhaustible supply of sea jokes. After breakfast we went out in front and took a few snaps then came in and prepared to start on, but they insisted on our having a wee cup o' milk and a wee bit biscuit before we gang awa', so we did, then said good-bye with promises to write.

A SCOTCH INN.

We walked down the road about three miles to a little place called Luss where we again halted at an Inn at the "sign of the Thistle." Here we ordered the limit of the menu, for the Scotch air seemed to deprive one of his natural appetite and give a horse's in lieu, but we found the menu to be rather lengthy before we had finished. We had soup, or as the Scotch calls it "Hotch-Potch" which is all kinds of tended garden vegetables ground up with a little tender meat and highly flavoured, scons, bread, real butter, potatoes, cabbage, carrots tomatoes, steak pie, etc., winding up with a Charlotte Russe pudding with plenty of brandy in it We then went exploring and to look for some kodak films. During our search we met an Old Sea Captain, who, when we had told him our mission and circumstances, insisted upon our becoming his guests for a few days—(a typical example of Scotch hospitality.) He had no sleeping quarters for us so he went to a private house and engaged a room for us entirely at his own expense and had us eat at his own table which was ladened with every kind of delicacy desirable from soup, pastries, fruit to spirits, or as the Scotch call it "Toddy" or a "Wee Deoch-an'-Doris," and he would sit and watch us eat and chuckle when we passed for a second helping. He had travelled all over the world and had visited practically every country and had fought pirates, savages and battled with the tempest. He was a professional lecturer, musician, entertainer, seaman, engineer, in fact, really accomplished along all lines. We spent or at least, I did, two days and a half of the most happy and enjoyable hours of my life. He owned a motor car, a launch and row boats, and we enjoyed the pleasure of each alternately. Motoring one day, with, I might say, as jolly crowd of lads and lassies as I care to meet in my life. Then it would be a trip in the launch up to Ardhuli, the head of Loch Lomond where we would explore and eat a shore dinner—I could simply write a book on all we saw and did—coming home in the evening to tea and afterwards a sit by the grate on cushions, (Squatty Vous, fashion) on the floor with all the gay company and chatted and yarned, then we would have a little music and a wee Deoch-an'-Doris before we gang awa'.

One evening we proposed going in bathing after tea, but nurse would not allow it and so postponed it until the next morning and all the lads and lassies were on deck with two spare bathing suits for us and a right jolly time we had, even though they did belong to a couple of lassies and were too big. After lunch that day we went for a joy-ride in the car together with nurse, to keep order and were out to Tarbot, the Torpedo Testing Station on the Clyde and surrounding country which was as beautiful as I have ever seen or expect to see. The next day at noon I had to get back to my hotel at Balloch, which by the way, had never entered my mind until then, we had never even let them know where we were and they had been very uneasy about us, sending telegrams, 'phoning and even sent the King's Runner up in a launch for us one evening, but we were away, fancy that. We had no razors, tooth brushes or change of clothing except what we borrowed and were badly in need of a grooming.

Just at the last moment my friend decided to go on another launch or picnic party up the Loch and then I had to go back alone, knowing well what was in store for me. The generous old Captain motored me down and I made him acquainted with the two proprietors of Tullichewan Hotel, who, by the way, were Ole Maids and he a Bachelor—well met. I suggested this as a prelude to divert the topic I most feard to discuss, but they would not be content and both pitched into me and cut me up until I felt very small, indeed, and even went for the old Captain for having, as they said, "took us away aff-rm them." He took it all very well, putting a word in edgeways every now and then until finally the tempest spent, they readily forgave us for the offence and horrors of horrors! They both kissed me. I had a notion to say that theirs was the sweetest faces I had ever tasted or the most sour, but refrained.

I had decided to go home that night, but changed my mind until morning. They all accopanied me to the train in the morning and gave me a hearty send off and made me promise to write and come back when ever I got the opportunity. I finally arrived in London, after travelling since 8.30 a.m. until mid-night, too late to catch my train for Westenhanger, so I just had to make the best of it, and after wandering aimlessly about the streets I finally decided to go up to a Y.M.C.A. where I could at least get something to eat, as all the other places were closed. When I got there there were a bunch of fHows just arrived from France who were telling funny stories and teasing the girls, so I just sat up for the remainder of the night and listened to them. I took the 5.30 train for Westenhanger, arriving about 9.30, so sleepy I could scarcely walk and reported at headquarters. I was greeted with: "Well, where have you been. You have been absent without leave since 7 p.m. last night?" Missed my train in London, Sir." "How did you come to do that?" "Train late from Edinburgh, Sir." "Very good, dismissed for a day or so when I will hear your case." There has been nothing said about it since.

Well people when you get tired reading this library, why just chuck it, for I was just bursting to tell someone, so I picked on you. I am going to write home to-morrow if I get time and tell them all about my travels also. I sent them each a postal card so they will know that I am still alive.

Well this is quite long enough now and I think I had better kick in and I think you can excuse me from writing for a month or so now. Don't forget to write as often as you can as I have a lot of people to write to now—fourteen letters a week sometimes! Well I will have to say good-bye for this time, with much love.

BROTHER AND UNCLE

day than they ever did before. Different features of the trench were pointed out to the visitors and explained by men who had been through the real thing somewhere in France. The visitors displayed the greatest interest in the signalling equipment, the dugouts, the Lewis machine gun, the periscopes and all the other features. The men who were on duty in the trenches or in the souvenir exhibit on Thursday and yesterday, included the following: Sergt. T. R. Cooper, 4th Battery; Sergt. P. Victor, 2nd Battalion; Sergt. W. Dalliday, 3rd Battalion; Sergt. J. Coppick, 39th Battalion; Corp. Harvey Staunton, 15th Battalion; Lance-Corp. Fred Long, 16th Battalion; Lance-Corp. A. Moscrop, Lance-Corp. R. Irwin, 21st Battalion, Pte. W. Sarby, 21st Battalion; Pte. G. Fallen, 14th Battalion; Pte. Harry Yates, 2nd Battalion; Signaller Corp. E. Watson, 93rd Battalion; Pte. Tom. Hatley, 5th C.M.R.; Gunner J. Smith, 4th Battery; Gunner Tom Baxter, 26th Battery; Pte. R. H. Muir, 21st Battalion; Pte. Horace Blake, C.M.R., and Pte. S. Bullied, Forestry Battalion.

The exhibit has meant many hours of hard work for Peterborough's war veterans and the citizens owe them a debt of gratitude for their efforts which resulted in a most interesting display. The work of the returned soldiers is not over with the end of the exhibition for the trenches have yet to be filled in, sand bags emptied and the outfits repacked and shipped to Kingston.

Mrs. M. Kenneally, 499 Sherbrooke street, has received official notice from Ottawa, that her nephew, Pte. Thomas King, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to No. 5 Australian General Hospital at Rouen, on Sept. 6th, suffering from gas poisoning. Pte. King, who was employed at the C.G.E. before joining the colours, enlisted in the 93rd Battalion on November 1st, 1915, and went overseas as a member of B Company. He had been in France a year, going over with one of the first drafts from the 93rd to the 5th C.M.R.

LETTER FROM PRIVATE TOBIN

Peterborough Boy Was Wounded on August 15th

Mrs. E. Kendry received the following letter from her brother, Pte. M. Tobin, who has been wounded recently:

Somewhere in France, Aug. 20th,

Dear Sister.—Just a few short lines hoping to find all well as this leaves me progressing as good as can be expected under the circumstances, as I suppose by the time you receive my letter you will be informed that I have been wounded. Well, Mary, I was wounded on Aug. 15th during the big push, but my wounds are only slight, being hit twice in the right hand and twice in the right foot, but my hand is very slight. My foot is still sore and will keep me out of the scrap for a month or so, but must be thankful to God to come off so fortunate as it sure was a very warm spot. After I was bandaged and on my way out I was joined by two more of my batt., and all three were coming out over-us two, injuring the other boy so three of us, killing one and burying us, too, injuring the other boy so he had to be carried out, but the old man got a good shaking up, but landed at the dressing station after about one mile's walk barefooted, as the bandage had fallen off and the sock was worn through. I was soon looked after, as the Red Cross staff is something worth mentioning and their work is a marvel, and their medical staff is everything to be asked for and give the wounded the greatest attention. I am in a very nice place and am having a real good rest, and my wounds dressed three times a day, so you need not worry, and tell mother to rest easy as I have often been hurt just as bad and no great attention was taken to me, and by the time I receive your reply I will be back in the push again. Well, Mary, you need not expect a very large book this time as I wrote you a large letter about a week ago, but writing helps to pass the time, and I have put in about two hours trying to put a puzzle together to-day, so my time is not very precious. I have no word from mother lately, but expect some any day now, as I wrote the battalion to forward my mail to me. I am expecting my pass to Paris for ten days, as soon as I return to the battalion, so will try and send you a present, so be looking out for one. Also will have some photos taken and will send you one. Well, Mary, news is scarce so will close for now. Will write you again the middle of the week, so bye-bye. Give best respects to all.

From your loving brother,
M. J. TOBIN.

Summary of The Iron, Steel And Metal Markets

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for the week ending Sept. 11, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following observations:

Business in the engineering and steeel trade is fairly quiet just now, due to the unsettled conditions in the raw material markets and also on account of the curtailing of munition orders. Iron and steel merchants report business as being dull, and attribute it to the uncertainty prevailing with regard to prices. The trend of prices to lower levels is more pronounced, although the downward movement has not started yet, except in semi-finished steel which has declined. The opinion is generally held that the crest of steel prices has been reached and that recessions may be expected almost any time. It is not likely, however, that there will be any marked change in the situation until some definite announcement has been made at Washington regarding the Government's price-fixing policy. The situation in the pig-iron market is practically unchanged. The output of pig-iron has declined, but the demand is as insistent as ever. There is, however, very little new business, as consumers are expecting lower prices and on account of unsettled conditions are keeping out of the market. Coke prices are holding firm, but the shortage of cars is holding up shipments. The price on soft coal recently fixed by the United States Government may be advanced owing to the opposition on the part of the mine owners. The scrap markets are dull and featureless, while prices have a weaker tendency. The scrap business is dull at the present time, as consumers are not buying. The non-ferrous metal markets are dull and prices for the most part are largely nominal. The price-fixing policy hangs like a cloud over the market and consumers are showing practically no interest in current quotations.

Face Pealing Easy--
Blonde or Brunette

"The blonde's complexion fades early, because her skin is extraordinarily thin and fine," says Mme. Lina Cavalieri. "The brunette's, as a rule, is the reverse. The skin is thicker and has a tendency to an oily appearance."

For either the faded blonde's skin or the brunette's oily or sallow complexion, the best remedy is ordinary mercolized wax. Used every night, this will give one an entirely new complexion within about a week's time. The wax gradually peels off the worn-out, surface skin, with all its defects, a little each day, without affecting the delicate underskin in the least. The latter will have the exquisitely beautiful glow of youth—indeed, one may readily lose ten or fifteen years from her age, so far as appearance goes, by a course of this simple treatment. The wax, procurable at any drug store, is applied like cold cream.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—In your publication of last evening the Crown Princess of Sweden is referred to as being "English." She her mother's side she is a granddaughter of Frederick, the Red (or blood-thirsty) of Prussia and on her father's a Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (otherwise Goth.) We who are English born and of English ancestry for hundreds of years, resent the term applied to Germans, Prussians, pro-Germans and others. A nigger town in England is just as black, and is only merely "British" as are these Geman encroachers.

AN APPEAL TO THE SINGERS OF AMERICA

David Bispham, the American baritone, whose son is now serving in the British Army, and whose daughter is the wife of an Italian officer, makes the following appeal on behalf of the "American Ambulance in Italy."

The poets of America have pledged themselves to raise a large amount of money for ambulances urgently needed for the Italian Army.

In the name of the singers of America an earnest appeal is hereby made to all vocalists, native or foreign, as well as to instrumentalists and music-lovers in general, to contribute at the earliest possible moment at least one million dollars to a similar fund to aid the wounded of the Land of Song, to whose art and artists our country owes an everlasting debt of gratitude.

Contributions of any amount will be thankfully received and acknowledged. Two thousand dollars cabled to Milan will place a motor ambulance at the front at once. Cheques to the order of the "American Singers' Ambulance in Italy" may be sent either to David Bispham or to John M. Fulton, treasurer, at The Musicians' Club, 62 West 45th Street, New York.

Lindsay Child Badly Burned

The Lindsay Post says: A distressing accident occurred yesterday morning, shortly after eight o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Lockwood, Henry Street, when their little son and only child, Edgar, aged two years old, was horribly burned. He is at present in the Ross Hospital, and slight hopes are held out for his recovery.

It appears that Mrs. Lockwood was busily engaged preserving, and had two preserving kettles on a Detroit gasoline stove. Little Edgar was in his cot, and while Mrs Lockwood was out feeding the chickens, the little tot got up and came out into the kitchen. On hearing the child scream, Mrs. Lockwood hastened into the house and was horrified to find him on a chair, enveloped in flames. The mother quickly did all that was possible for the child and hastily summoned Dr. White, who had the little one removed to the hospital. He is terribly burned about the body and limbs, and everything possible is being done to save his life.

Little Edgar is a winsome child, and the parents are prostrate over the fate which has befallen it.

Whether the little fellow's night-gown was ignited by contact with the stove, or whether the contents of the gasoline can was spilled over him, is not known.

Exemption Tribunals Must Be Ready By End Of The Month

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—Judges must hurry up their appointments to local tribunals under the Military Service Act. An order-in-Council has been passed setting September 30 as the date by which all appointments must be made both by judges and by the selective committee of Parliament, which meets September 24. The majority of judges are yet to report.

The latest developments with regard to the conscription regulations are three:

(1) The work of medical examination will be handed over entirely to the military authorities.

(2) Reporting for service as well as applying for exemption will be done largely by mail.

(3) The first draft of men will be much under the 50,000 as first proposed, and the others, up to 100,000, will be taken as military exigencies require.

Only One Examination.

It was contemplated when the bill passed the House that there should be two medical examinations for every man who applied for exemption, namely: One before the local tribunal, and one by the military doctors, when a man reported for service. This has been changed. The military doctors and no others will pass officially upon all applicants for exemption. Any applicant passed by them, of course, can submit to the tribunal the opinion of his own doctor, but the tribunal is not forced to accept his opinion.. There will not be one doctor to every tribunal. In Toronto, for instance, there will only be three or four medical boards, and these will likely be chosen by the O.C. of the district.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that military doctors will not try to pass unfit men. Their aim will be to exclude, rather than to accept, as it is anticipated that 100,000 men will easily be secured from the first class called out, without taking any who might prove a liability rather than an asset.

May Use the Mails.

The original bill contemplates personal application for exemption and personal reporting for service. Some time ago the military service council evolved the idea of permitting the use of the mails for this purpose.

Now they are arranging that practically all applying and reporting will be done in this way. Concurrent with the proclamation calling out the first class, forms either for reporting for service or for seeking exemption will be obtainable at Post Offices. When the applications for exemption come in, these will be numbered as they arrive, and the cases heard in that order. By this system the tribunals will be enabled to notify each applicant of the day on which his particular case will be heard and will thus avoid keeping men from their work longer than is necessary. An employer may consider that all his men are engaged in war work and may apply for exemption for all of them. The tribunals will consider each of these cases on its merits and also consider whether any of the men can be replaced by female labour or by men engaged in less useful occupations.

Total Quickly Known.

Another feature of the arrangements which are being made is that an employer, who has, say, 25 men, whom he considers particularly essential, may send these before the medical boards, which may, perhaps, reject thirteen of them. He then knows where he stands as regard to the other twelve for whom some other form of exemption will have to be urged.

A number of details of administration are still undecided. There is talk of having a clerk and a constable for every tribunal, but this is still a moot point. It is known, however, that those who apply for exemption will not be allowed to have lawyers represent them before the tribunals. A point still under discussion is the method to be pursued in selecting the 100,000 men required under the Act if more than that number are furnished by the first class. The idea is not to take them by age, as the drafts should have the steadiness of the older men as well as the impetuosity of the younger. There are degrees of physical fitness to be considered and also the comparative usefulness of a man's occupation. These two factors will have much to do with the final selection, but a hard and fast rule seems difficult to frame.

A Marvellous Medicine For Little Ones

Mrs. Delvina Pelletier, Ste. Perpetue, Que, writes: "I have much pleasure in stating that Baby's Own Tablets have been a marvellous medicine in the case of my baby. I have been using the Tablets for four years and don't think there is anything to equal them." In using the Tablets the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that they do not contain one particle of opiates or other harmful drugs—they cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. The Ttablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Young Clergy To Waive Exemption

Presbyterians in the U. S. Take a Patriotic Attitude on Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15. — The Board of Education of the Presbyterian church has taken action asking ministerial candidates to waive exemption for military service, believing "it is neither wise nor patriotic to take advantage of the exemption provisions."

Although the Army bill exempts theological or divinity students who have actually entered upon their course from the draft, the board "recommends that unless they are compelled to seek exemptions under some provisions of the Act," they "waive exemption relating to their calling as future ministers of the Gospel." This stand, the board adds, represents the spirit of loyalty on the part of the Presbyterian church.

ALBERT BROWN — Canada's Fovourite Comedian in "The Love of a King" at The Grand Opera House on Wednesday Night, Sept. 19.

Speaking of Albert Brown's appearance in Montreal last week the dramatic critic of "The Herald" says:

I do not hesitate to say that Albert Brown gives us in this act a picture of pathetic old age to equal which we shall have to cite Cyril Maude's Grumpy,—very different sort of old age, it is true,—and even Cyril Maude does nothing more appealing than Mr. Brown achieves in this picture of an old man in his dotage recalling, in fitful gusts of lucid thought, the love-scenes of his youth. It will go down as a notable achievement of histrionics. Every moment convinces; there is nothing left unthought of. The pathos of the closing scene is one that will, I believe, move many more deeply than they have been moved by anything seen here in recent years in modern drama.

A RUSH ON CANNED SALMON

Many of the Wholesalers Were Cleared Out of Their Stocks During the Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

The Markets at a Glance.

Interest in the wholesale grocery trade during the week centred around the activity in canned salmon. With the recent announcement of prices by the packers there was a scramble on the part of retailers to get all available stocks of last season's salmon pack. As a result many of the wholesalers were entirely cleaned out of their salmon stocks during the week. Intimations have been made by the Food Controller that the recent embargo did not apply to canned pork and beans, the term beans being used to signify canned string beans or golden wax beans. Wholesalers are accordingly proceeding with the sale of this commodity.

The embargo on the export of Canadian bacon is beginning to cause more concern than at first evident when the announcement was made. It was felt by packers that bacon was needed in Great Britain and that some means would undoubtedly be devised through a purchasing commission to secure supplies from Canada. Packers have been left in doubt about the probable outcome and accordingly have been casting around for a development of the local market. Shutting off the export trade would undoubtedly mean lower prices in Canada. Good production of butter and eggs is being made at the present time, but prices are holding steady.

Advances have been recorded in Mincemeat, olive oil, package peas, bicarbonate of soda, canned Haddie, while declines have been recorded in lima beans and Dangoon beans. Two sugar refiners reduced their price during the week to the level of the other refiners. There is very indication that lower prices will come in the Canadian market in the not distant future. Flour prices held steady. Announcement of the decision of the Board of Grain Supervisors with respect to the price of wheat has been awaited with keen interest. Trade in grocery lines shows signs of more briskness during the week, but business is becoming more of a hand-to-mouth nature.

Col. W. H. Merritt Makes a Flight

President of Aero Club Views Toronto From An Altitude of 3000 Feet

Col. William Hamilton Merritt, President of the Aero Club of Canada and Chairman of the Royal Flying Corps Cadet Committee, with headquarters at 99 Sun Life Buliding, Toronto, states that the opening now existing for nearly 500 young flying officers in the Imperial Roy l Flying Corps in Canada, presents an opportunity for young Canadians of quality who wish to help their country and secure a most valuable technical education, without expense to themselves, in a chance they may never have again.

Chairman Merritt states further that it would be unfortunate indeed, if these appointments had to go to young men of other nationalities when the experiences and advantages offered would be so valuable to any Canadian ambitious for his future.

Col. Merritt further states that there seems to be a feeling in some quarters that flying is a particularly hazardous undertaking. He recently had an opportunity of deciding it, and viewed Toronto from an altitude of 3,000 feet. It is doubtless, he believes, whether there are not more accidents proportionately, among chauffeur beginners, and a high authority recently pointed out to him that in Canada, accidents to flying students were much less frequent than in the English aerodromes. Col. Merritt's flight was made from Armour Heights, North Toronto. It was his first flight and he was impressed with the utility of the aeroplane in war and the evidence of its commercial usefulness in the future.

The Peterborough Royal Flying Corps Cadet Committee consists of H. Logie, Chairman; Rolland Denne; C. G. Graham and James Lynch.

"Flora Bella" At The Grand

Next Saturday For Two Performances

With witty lines, clever tunes and graceful dancing, "Flora Bella," with 50 people, this season's musical triumph, from its long run at the Casino Theatre, New York will play two performances next Saturday September 22 at "The Grand." In this delightfully fascinating offering will be found a plot that holds things together splendidly, stage settings that satisfy the eye, and a cast that makes merry in a most admirable manner. The book is by Felix Doermann, revised and adapted and revised by Cosmo Hamilton and Dorothy Donnelly. The lyrics are by Percy Waxman, and the score by Charles Cuvillier and Milton Schwarzwald. The staging is the result of the artistic direction of a master workman, while the scenery and settings come from the Urban School.

The scenes of the play take place in Russia. A princess, without her husband's knowledge, has been a cabaret singer, but believing that a princess should be cold and dignified, she forgets her old ways and almost loses her husband. She returns to her cabaret life for just one night and is discovered there by her husband, who has been driven away from home by her coldness, and as usual everything ends happily.

As for the music, there is the dreamy waltz that rivals in its melody and swing the famous Merry Widow. Then there is a march that charms fully as greatly, and numerous other songs, duets and concerted numbers that are unusually pleasing.

Mr. Rowell Speaks of the Great Practical Benefit From the Ontario Temperance Act

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—Mr. Newton Rowell, upon request for a statement on the first anniversary of Prohibition, said:

I am in receipt of the strongest testimony from all parts of the province, of the great practical benefits which have resulted from the operation of the Ontario Temperance Act, during the past year.

The results have been so satisfactory that large numbers of those who were opposed to the adoption of the measure, are now its warm supporters. Thousands of wives and children are better clothed, better fed, and know more of the real meaning of "home" than they ever knew before. Crime has been substantially reduced; the efficiency and earning power of the workers have been materially increased; business has been stimulated, rather than depressed; and the whole country is enjoying freedom from the constant menace of the open bar. It is evident that the bar now closed will never be reopened in this province.

Vigorous and impartial enforcement of the law must be maintained, and the Act must be strengthen where necessary, to make it more effective, and to carry out its intent.

Our grateful appreciation is due to the men and women all over this province, whose untiring and unselfish labours through the years, made possible this great measure of social reform."

vous. Finally, however, a rope was thrown to the daring woman, and she reached the platform in safety. The act is a thriller from start to finish, and the directors are to be congratulated in securing such a feature.

The other features in front of the grandstand, the Kitaro troupe of Japanese jugglers, the La France troupe of acrobats, and the clown acrobat, who did some amazing feats on the high bar, all pleased the crowd.

Enjoyable music was provided during the afternoon by the band of the 57th Regiment, under the direction of Lieut. R. Gliddon.

The Racing Good.

As usual the horse races were a big feature and although there were only three starters in each event, every heat was a race and it was nearly 6 o'clock before a winner was declared for the 2.30 class, which went five heats.

The 2.15 Class was won in straight heats by "Dr. Hal," owned by Mr. Overland of Orangeville, but the winner had lots of opposition in "Montalvo" and "Guilford Boy," the latter spoiling his chances by bad behaviour. "Montalvo" and "Dr. Hal" had a great duel in each heat and the race was a good one all the way. The summary:

"Dr. Hal," Overland, Orangeville,	1	1	1
"Montalvo," Hodgins, Orillia	2	2	3
"Guilford Boy," G. Barrie, Haliburton	3	3	3

Time, 2.19 1-4; 2.19 1-2, 2.20.

The 2.30 class:

The crowd got its money's worth in the 2.30 class, which brought out a field of three. "Chimes Todd," owned by Mr. Hodgins, the eventful winner, was first home in the first heat, with "Minnie Brino" a close second, and "Jim Elliott" third. In the second heat the Elmhirst entry breezed home a winner after a battle down the stretch. The third heat saw another royal fight. "Chimes Todd" was first under the wire by a head, but was set back in second for running, "Jim Elliott" getting the heat. In the fourth there was another wildly exciting finish. "Chimes Todd" winning by a nose. That left the two even Stephen, with two heats each. The final heat saw "Chimes Todd" win handily, "Jim Elliott" losing his chances by going off his feet in the first half. The summary:

"Chimes Todd," Hodgins, Orillia	1	2	2	1	1
Jim Elliott, Elmhirst, Keene	3	1	1	2	2
"Minnie Brino" Ingram Orillia	2	3	3	3	3

Time, 2.29 1-4, 2.29 1-4, 2.29 1-2, 2.29 1-4, 2.30.

SPECIAL FAIR EXHIBITS

LOADER BROS.' PICTURE AND ART DISPLAY.

At this season of the year, when home decorations usually claim special attention, it was a pleasant exhibit of pictures and art goods made by the Messrs. Loader Bros., of 301 George street. There was shown a varied number of picture frames in gilt, oak and white enamel, specially adapted for the varied art subjects.

Steel engravings, pictures in oil, etchings, water colours and chromatic subjects were shown, and a number of enlargements, including soldiers' pictures, were admired by large crowds who visited this section. The Loader Bros. do an extensive business in pictures and picture framing, and are the only firm of the kind in the city devoting exclusive attention to this business. Their show rooms at 301 George street, reflect their handiwork, and the special lines carried. Housekeepers should bear in mind where artistic picture framing can be done, and where a varied stock of picture mouldings, etc., can be found in stock.

ELECTRIC FIXTURES, ETC., BY GRANT & THORPE.

This is an exhibit all should make a point to see. Grant & Thorpe have distinguished themselves not only for being an enterprising business firm, but for the high reputation they have earned as practical electricians, with sound business methods. Some of the finest electric fixtures, lamps, shades, batteries, and other electric devices ever seen in Peterborough are exhibited. The designs are attractive and practical. Those who contemplate any new and effective electric lighting this fall, will find a range of suggestions well worth seeing in this display, or at their store, No. 418 George street, where a very full stock of the most modern electrical supplies is carried. Some of the most effective electric lighting displays in our large stores and industries are to be credited to Grant & Thorpe, who make a specialty of undertaking elaborate electric contracts.

SPLENDID DISPLAY OF GUERNEY STOVES, ETC., BY PETERBOROUGH HARDWARE.

Visitors to the Fair will not easily forget the splendid impressions which must have been left by the practical display made by the Peterborough Hardware Co., George street. Especially should this be true in the case of those interested in good, modern stoves. For there could be no questioning the facts that the splendid demonstrations made of selected types of Guerney Oxford Steel Ranges, etc., received many testimonies of approval from the thousands who visited this section.

The Peterborough Hardware Co. are appointed sole local agents for the Guerney Stove Co., about a year ago, and since that time, it is well known, the firm have found their new stove department a valuable addition to their large business. It was learned from the representatives of the firm in attendance at this exhibit that the Guerney Ranges have met with an encouraging local demand since being introduced by this firm. The department of Stoves has given this big, busy store new leaders, which have grown, not only because of the excellence of the stove models, themselves in their various modern designs, but because of the energetic and practical business manner and methods adopted in handling and selling them.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WESTERN FRONT

Stirling Castle and Elsewhere

"Our medical officer was great," said a wounded man just back from Ypres. "He was up with us just before we attacked, and a good many men will owe their lives to him, for we suffered pretty heavily from shell fire before we went over. He was at hand just when hewas wanted most. It was wonderful to see how cool he was just as if he was on sick parade.

"He got hit though; badly hit, I'm afraid. A line of supports were coming up over the open behind our trenches. You see they could not come up the communication trench, as the Huns had it marked off with their guns. Communication trenches in an attack, generally get badly 'strafed'. A bit of shell laid out one fellow, and when the 'doc' saw what had happened he ran out from the trench to dress his wound. Coming back, a shell burst right under him and we thought that was the end of our M. O.

"We found him half buried, but still alive, so we quickly got him dug out and back to the trench. I thought he was done for. He was wounded in the leg, chest, and head, and quite unconscious .A stretcher-bearer fixed him up with field dressings, and it turned out that the wounds were not so dangerous after all. It seemed rather strange that ordinary soldiers should be attending a doctor.

"We could not get him carried down just at the moment, for a pretty stiff barrage was on behind us. By the time the shelling had ceased the 'doc' had come round. He would not let himself be carried down on a stretcher. He said he would walk down alone. And he did, too, though it beats me to understand how he managed it. I heard he had reached the dressing station all right, when I got there, myself."

* * * * *

"I was wounded in the attack on Stirling Castle," said a Scotchman, grimly humorous in spite of his shattered shoulder. "And it may sound funny to you, but there's no other place of the line where I would rather have got my 'blighty'. You know, I come from the Stirling district, and it will be a fine story to tell the folks there, how the English, and Scots attacked their castle.

"Stirling Castle wasn't a bad name to give the place. It was a big white chateau, not far behind the German lines, and in the morning mist it sometimes looked very like the old castle at home. But that was nigh on two years ago when I saw it for the first time. I was out then with another battalion of my regiment, and I think it was our chaps who christened the place. I heard tell then that it was the headquarters of a division in the first battle of Ypres, so it's fine to think we're on the move again, in the right direction this time.

"There wasn't much left of it though, when we attacked, compared with what there used to be, but the name had stuck to it all these months. We used to wonder why our guns let the place stand. I expect the real reason was that two years ago we could not spare the ammunition to shell it. That's a long time ago now, and our guns have made up since for what they could not do then. I could scarcely recognise the place when I saw it the second time.

"The Germans had made a regular underground fortress of the ruins, and their machine guns gave plenty of trouble. I got hit in the shoulder by a ricochet bullet from one of their guns, but I crept into a shell hole and watched our fellows bomb the beggars out. Two years ago, on the 25th of September, when we tried to advance along the Menin road, I lay in just such a shell hole, and saw the castle away on the right behind the German lines, its big white walls seeming to mock the efforts we were making. And when I realized that we'd got our hands on the place at last, I wanted to get up and yell.

"A stretcher bearer got into the shell hole and started dressing my shoulder. Before he had finished he suddenly collapsed on the top of me. I thought he was killed, but he got up all right and went on with the dressing. When he had finished I noticed that the back of his tunic was soaked with blood and I told him he was wounded. He had been hit on the back by a piece of shrapnel, but though the blow had knocked him over, he thought that the splinter had glanced off, for the wound gave him no pain whatsoever. I helped him to patch himself up, and then we made off to the dressing station together."

"You can't dig deep dug-outs in Flanders," said another wounded man, "for the ground is so wet that the water soaks in and floods them in no time. Instead, the Germans had built over so many heavy concrete emplacements on the surface, trusting to the hardness of the material to deflect our shells. They made a big mistake however, in most cases. Our bombardment was terrific, and nothing could stand against it.

"When we reached our objective, two or three of us got into a shell hole in front of one of these emplacements. A shell had burst right under it and its whole front had been knocked in. Several Germans had been in it before the shell burst. What was left of them was not pretty to look at. We had to lie in that hole for a long time, and every time we glanced up we looked straight into the emplacement and saw all the mangled remains of the machine gun crew. It fairly made us sick.

"The wet weather made it a bit uncomfortable for us, especially for the wounded, but at first the rain was a bit of a relief. It had been so hot before.

"The heat brought out no end of mosquitoes and two or three nights before the attack I spent nearly an hour in hunting one which was having a regular 'beano' with me. I swatted it at last, but in the morning I had more than one lump to show where it had been busy. We knew a big storm was coming, but the attack wasn't put off and we got all the ground we wanted."

Growing Interest Special Meetings

A Good Sized Audience Was Present Last Evening

In spite of other attractions in town a good-sized audience listened attentively to Evangelist Harold Harper as he spoke on the much discussed subject of Baptism. He first spoke of the baptism of our Lord upon the cross, where he underwent the waves and the billows of the wrath of God. Following this he dealt with the baptism of the believing sinner, into the body of Christ. This, said the speaker, takes place when the sinner trusts Christ as Saviour, and every believing sinner is baptized into the body of Christ and is thus invited to Christ and to every other believer. Continuing he next spoke of believer's baptism in water, showing forth his identification with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. Mr. Harper said that an ordinance to be valid must be commanded in the Gospels, practised in the Acts and expounded in the Epistles. This is characteristic of baptism. Finally the baptism of the unbeliever in the lake of fire, where everyone who neglects the Gospel must spend eternity. There will be a public baptism Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Bethany Tabernacle, where a number of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ will be baptized. At 7 o'clock Mr. Harper will speak in Gospel Hall, subject being "An Unavoidable Question."

The meetings will continue all next week as the interest is growing. All welcome.

If You Want Evidence

That Hemorrhoids, or Piles, Can Be Completely Cured—Read These Letters—Both Are Sworn Statements.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 15.—Next to personal experience the sworn statements of reliable people is the strongest evidence obtainable. If you have any doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment will positively and completely cure piles, these letters should convince you.

Mr. Samuel Parker, fruit grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public of the same place: "I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding piles and was advised to go to the hospital to have an operation performed. My wife said 'No, get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.' I did so and have used it according to directions while living in Manitoba and obtained a complete cure, for I have never been troubled with piles since. I am now seventy years of age and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all sufferers from piles. My wife has used it for itching skin and obtained complete cure."

Mr. Donald M. Campbell, Campbell's' Mountain, N.S., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment with great success for hemorrhoids or piles of fifteen years' standing. After trying all kinds of so-called pile cures, three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment gave me a complete cure. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and there are no others so good. You may use this letter, if you wish, for the benefit of others who may suffer as I did."

Sworn before me, Murdoch Gordon Campbell, J.P., in the County and for Inverness County.

If you would like to try Dr. Chase's Ointment at our expense, send a two-cent stamp to pay postage and we shall mail you a sample box free. Full size box 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

MARRIAGE PROBLEM MORE PUZZLING THAN EVER

London. — "It will not bear talking about. It is too awful!" said an unmarried woman of 35, when spoken to concerning the ever-increasing number of spinsters and the effect of the losses of manhood in the war on the marriage problem of the present time, reports a well known English writer, who says:

"But is it not necessary to talk of this question? We cannot shelve or neglect an intricate topic of national life, simply because a solution for the difficulty is not easily found. Next to the problem of food comes the problem of marriage.

"There is a common belief that the number of women born largely exceeds the number of men. As a matter of fact, easily proved by statistics, more boys than girls are born, but for reasons that at present are hard to discover, there are more deaths in childhood among males than females.

"We know that women are less exposed to mortal disease than men; that they recover more quickly from severe illnesses, and tend to live longer than the so-called stronger sex.

"One day we may discover some method of maintaining an even balance of the sexes. But besides child mortality, there are various influences that threaten the life of men, such as dangerous occupations and the ravages of warfare. The hour has arrived when we must earnestly consider the question of the protection of the male population. We need earlier marriage and a better parentage. We need husbands for the unmated women.

"In 1911, in England and Wales, there were 29 unmarried women in excess of every 1,000 bachelors. In London there are about 1,127 women to every 1,000 men. About one-quarter of the marriageable women of Britain never marry. In Bournemouth there are 486 single women per 1,000. The only districts where the men outnumber the women are the great colliery centres of the country.

"A large number of spinsters have no chance of marriage. Many are never sought by men as conjugal companions, and they live and die unloved. This is one of the tragedies of western civilization. In most eastern countries the problem of celibacy for women is solved by the plural marriage and the harem system. In some parts of the world, where men are fewer than women polyandry or plurality of husbands is the permitted custom.

"We have not made any serious effort to grapple with the question of involuntary celibacy for women. Will the war force us into social action in this very important matter? There is no doubt that attention to this question is being acutely aroused. The procession of the Great Unloved is a lamentable spectacle. It is an outrage upon Nature and an injustice to mankind.

"It is true that a small proportion of women prefer the single life. But our community swarms with women who rapidly crave love, marriage and maternity. The involuntary spinsters are abundant in every state of society. Their number is least among the wage earning classes, which is a testimony to the courage of the workers.

"The wage-earners as a class do not postpone marriage or shirk conjugality altogether on the score of insufficient means. They marry young, and they boldy dare fate.

"The middle class are more cautious—shall we say timid? They attach importance to display in living; their standards of life are extravagant and they defer marriage till 35 or later. The number of men who marry under 25 is steadily decreasing throughout the population.

"We cannot throw all the responsibility upon men. It is increasingly arduous for the middle-class man to live in fair comfort and to maintain a family.

"One great bar to early marriage among men is the cost of supporting a young wife in accordance with the present feminine estimate of efficient dress allowance. Girls of to-day are more expensive in this respect than their grandmothers.

"I am convinced that there would be more men willing to marry in early manhood if they could insure the winning of intelligently domesticated wives, who could assist in the eking out of a small salary. Neither men nor women in the mass can ever hope to gratify all their desires.

"Women must choose between the joy of being dressed in the latest fashion and the advantages and compensations of matrimony on a limited income. It is only the few who can hope to wed rich men. And on these can it be said that all are happy."

WHAT TO DO AT THE THEATRE

Arrive early and occupy as large a space as possible in the rotunda. It is always advisable to stand as near the ticket windows as possible, thus compelling people who desire tax tickets to squeeze by.

Never, under any circumstances, be seated when the curtain rises. Always postpone your entrance until at least five minutes after the commencement of the play. Get in the wrong seat if possible, but if not, make a point of entering the row at the end most distant from your seats.

While settling down, a discussion as to the merits of your seat is highly entertaining. The actors don't mind being disturbed, because they are paid to act anyhow.

Always buy chocolate wrapped up in paper. Unwrapping it takes one's mind off the play. It has such a soothing sound, too.

Study some subject of conversation of interest to the people around. Many a man has regretted paying two dollars to hear uninteresting conversation. Make it spicy.

Never applaud. It startles the actors and they are apt to forget their lines.

Never go out between the acts unless you are seated in the middle of the row. Then be most careful not to return until the curtain has risen again. It is best to wait until something important is being said on the stage.

At the close of the performance, be well on your way home. Invariably leave in the middle of the closing lines. It is advisable, of course, to start dressing about half-way through.

It is the height of bad form to wait for the National Anthem, but if you are caught unawares, the situation can be saved by a quick run. Nobody knows the words of the National Anthem anyhow, so what's the use.

Record Attendance For Second Day

The exhibit of these well known Guerney stoves and ranges was most complete, showing a good selection of their famous makes, both in steel and cast iron. The "Chancellor" combination range for coal, wood or gas, especially came in for marked attention, its "economize" feature demonstrating how the fuel bill can be cut down. With 70 years' experience in the manufacture of stoves, it is safe to say that there is nothing about stoves the Guerney people do not know.

Among the special inducements offered buyers of Guerney stoves is the unusually close prices the various stoves and ranges are sold at. In addition to this, the freight and all delivery charges are paid on all stoves sent out, and repairs and extra parts can be had here at any time. Mr. Stewart, a representative from the Guerney Foundry, clearly explained the various important features of these stoves.

A new and unique combined washing machine and clothes ringer was also displayed in this exhibit. It received a great deal of special attention, because of its many new and labour-saving devices.

Mr. Robert Langford was in charge of this display and was successful in securing many prospects.

THE CHEVROLET SHINES AT THE FAIR.

Mr. E. L. Manning, the local dealer of the popular Chevrolet motor car, made a striking and attractive display opposite the Main building. He showed two "Four-Ninety" Touring Models and one handsome "Baby-Grand" Model. The phenomenal success of the Chevrolet Motor Car Co. in Canada has been a record to be proud of. The car mechanism has been greatly admired by experts. It is a clean car, free from rattle, very economical in regard to oil and gasoline, with very efficient self-starter. For economy, surplus power, smooth easy riding, attractiveness of body, design and other distinctive features, the Chevrolet has been called the "Little Wonder," a peer in its class. The perfection and simplicity of its powerful motor, clutch, brakes, axles, transmission, and, in fact, the entire car, astonishes good judges. The upkeep is small, and its achievements exceedingly good.

A new Chevrolet "Eight" is now being brought out and promises to be as remarkable in its various parts as its other models.

Mr. Appleby was in attendance at the exhibit and assisted Mr. Manning in demonstrating the leading features of the Chevrolet.

In 1852 he purchased a farm about four miles east of the city, where he resided previous to building the home in which he died, on the corner of Mark and Hunter Streets. In religion he was a Methodist, and was an ardent Orangeman nearly all his life, having joined the Grder on June 6, 1840.

Land Of Prince Of Peace Faces Rapine Terrors

CAIRO, Egypt—The situation in Palestine this summer is the most serious since this ware bgan. A scheme for the looting of Jerusalem is already being executed, and throughout the countryside the Turk has embarked on a calculated policy of plundering and killing the native inhabitants, so that if they are forced to vacate the country they will leave behind them a desert. The only thing that can save them, the only hope that buoys them up, is that the British armies now hammering at the gates of the Holy Land may soon drive out the Turks.

Information about conditions in Palestine reaches here from many sources. The following statement of present conditions is given to The Associated Press by an official in touch with the situation:

Open Campaign of Robbery.

"The attitude of the young Turks toward the unfortunate non-Turkish races within their empire, has always been harsh and oppressive. During the war it has been an open campaign of robbery, exploitation and massacre, for the young Turks, realizing that the partition of the lands under their rule is unavoidable, have determined to get as much as they can out of the inhabitants while they are in possession.

"The stupendous wickedness of the extermination of the Armenian nation can not be dismissed as a mere device of oriental state craft, or as a particular measure aimed at one particular race, for it is the Turkish policy towards not only Armenians, but Arabs, Greeks and Jews, in fact, all people who are subjects of the Turk, but are not themselves of Turkish blood.

Would Depopulate Land.

"While there was some prospect of being able to retain or even enlarge their empire, the Turks, although treating their subject races badly, did not actually seek to destroy them. To-day, knowing themselves doomed, it is their calculated policy to kill off the bulk of the inhabitants of Palestine and extort the last ounce of money and goods from them, so that if they are forced to vacate the country they will leave behind them a desert, a poverty stricken and depopulated land.

"The town of Gaza was recently ordered evacuated. In pursuance of the order the inhabitants were forced to set out upon their journey with nothing but the clothes they wore. All their belongings were left in their homes and these were immediately delivered over to the Turkish troops for loot.

No Women Spared.

"There were the usual scenes of wanton destruction and wilful defilement; no women were spared the customary accompaniment of a Turkish visitation.

"Gaza having been pillaged and the soldiers not yet being satisfied, it was proposed to carry out the same programme at Jerusalem. The head notables, however, protested that having seen the exhibition at Gaza, they preferred to chance the risk of war to enduring the certain agony of a forced evacuation. This answer and protest displeased the pasha so much that he promptly had the deputation deported to Anatolia and is taking special measures to see that his schemes for looting Jerusalem is not hindered by organized passive resistance among the inhabitants."

Practically No Increase In Price Of French Bread

(By W. S. Forrest.)

PARIS, Sept. 15.—The housewife of war-ridden France to-day is paying practically the same price for bread that she paid before the war. The only difference is that to-day's bread is of whole wheat flour. It is darker than the white loaf of the pre-war days. The French Food Minister to-day explained to the United Press for the benefit of Americans now facing increased prices for flour and bread, how France dealt with the problem. "During the first two years of the war, there was no bread problem," he said. "We imported all necessary wheat. But even then in view of transport difficulties the Government was obliged to regulate baking. As the French are essentially bread-eating nation, it was necessary to keep prices as low as possible. Therefore the only increase permitted was the raise to five cents of the usual four-cent loaf. All French bread is now of standard type. It is made of whole wheat flour, which is less tasty, perhaps, but which is equally nutritious.

"The Government held it inadvisable to tax wheat because the farmers might grow other cereals. Therefore, it was decided to pay the farmers the prices they demanded for their wheat—although the flour from the grain was resold at former prices to the bakers. To cover the deficit a tax will soon be imposed on the agricultural population. This appears to be the only solution.

"In October bread cards will be introduced in France. They will allow a minimum daily allowance per capita of a pound of bread, with a maximum of a pound and four-fifths. The latter weight is for the working and agricultural classes, who are greater bread eaters than our townspeople.

"Experiments with potato bread have given excellent results, if the percentage of potato flour does not exceed twenty per cent. The difficulty in France is that the bakers are shorthanded and are unwilling properly to cook potatoes before mixing them with the wheat flour. In America, where machinery is being more used in baking, potato flour could easily be adopted."

NOTE TO PHYSICIAN BARES SUICIDE OF WOMEN IN HOTEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—After having mailed to her family physician a letter detailing arrangements for her funeral and directing a note to the Coroner requesting that no autopsy be performed, Mrs. Katherine Kretschmar, wife of Arthur W. Kretschmar, a manufacturer of dyestuffs, who lives at No. 510 West 123rd Street, killed herself in a room at the St. George Hotel, in Brooklyn. She had been separated from her husband for a year and had been under treatment for nervous disorders.

The woman was thirty-three years old and an attractive blond. She was dressed in an expensive silk dress when she arrived at the hotel, after having arranged for a room by telephone. She registered as "Mrs. A. Kennedy," and went directly to her room.

Nothing more was seen of her until Dr. John Kepke, of No. 224 Hancock Street, reached the hotel at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning, following the receipt of the letter she had written to him. Her room was entered and she was found dead, her body clad in a wrapper, lying across the bed. Nearby was a vial which had contained poison.

The woman left a letter addressed to the Coroner stating that she carried no life insurance and that her personal effects had been disposed of. She asked that her death be given no publicity and requested that no autopsy be performed. There was another letter addressed to the owners of the hotel and apologizing for her act.

"Will you please do what you can to have the autopsy dispensed with if possible," she said in her letter to Dr. Kepke. "I have made that request to the Coroner. Please be sure that I am dead before you consign my body to the undertaker. Ask him to use that black dress that is on the bed. Have the undertaker take charge of it until cremation."

Beside the body lay the black dress referred to.

For several hours after the finding of the body the identity of the woman remained a mystery, but Dr. Kepke gave the woman's name to Coroner Wagner and her husband was notified. Dr. Kepke told the Coroner that Mrs. Kretschmar had been suffering from nervous trouble and had feared insanity. She had been living in an apartment at No. 10 Cambridge Place, Brooklyn, since her separation from her husband. In the last year the woman had been employed as a stenographer.

The body was removed to the morgue, where it was identified by her husband. He is in business at No. 396 Broadway, Manhattan.

Gales Delay The Raising Of Span In Quebec Bridge

QUEBEC, Sept. 15.—Engineers of the Quebec Bridge prevented by gales from raising the central span this morning, waited impatiently for better conditions as gales continue at present.

The engineers will hold a conference this afternoon to decide whether it will be safe to elevate the span tomorrow morning. Every day that slips by renders the chances of getting the span in place this year more remote owing to tides.

Ty Cobb And Eddie Rousch Still in Front

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Ty Cobb's drive at the batting leadership of the American League is going over the tough bumps. Averages published today show the Detroiter is hitting at 373, only twenty-three points ahead of Tris Speaker. His Cleveland rival, George Sisler, is only slightly behind Speaker with 347. The battle in the National League is almost as close, but with the chances slim for a change that will give the title to any other than Eddie Rousch of Cincinnati. Rousch is hitting 343 to 323 for Hornsby, of St. Louis. Grob of Cincinnati, is in third place with .306

Savory Pie.

Peel and slice one pound or more of potatoes and chop two or three onions. Put a layer of potatoes in the bottom of a pie dish, springle over them some of the chopped onion, a little parsley finely chopped and pepper and salt; on this put about half an ounce of butter in pieces, then put another layer of potatoes, etc., as before, until the dish is full; pour in about half a teacupful of milk and water. Make a crust with half a pound of flour and four ounces of butter or lard and butter, add a sprinkling of salt and half a teaspoonful of baking powder, mix with cold water, roll out and cover the pie with it, bake in a moderate oven for about one and one-half to two hours; when once the crust is brown cover it with paper to prevent its becoming too dry or burnt.

Every kitchen drawer should have its supply of parafin paper.

A CONCRETE SHIP LAUNCHED

Norwegian Boat Goes into Water Upside Down.

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 17. — The first Norwegian iron and concrete boat has been lauched at the Porsgrun Cement Works in the presence of Prime Minister Knudsen. The boat is built entirely on a new system, with the bottom up, from which extraordinary position the launching took place. The underlying sledges glided out with the ship. When the water was reached the hull was detached from the sledges. It gradually sank to a certain point and slowly righted itself.

The Prime Minister, who himself, was formerly a civil engineer, emphasised the importance of the new invention, by which it is possible to build ships in a remarkably short time, thereby meeting the urgent demands for increased tonnage. This ship of 200 tons was built in three weeks, but the next will require only about half that time.

The frame can be used with each subsequent ship of the same size. It is intended to start wholesale building of iron and concrete boat of from 200 to 500 and 1,600 tons. The last can be completed in six weeks.

"It's confidence that does it."

BRAVE DEEDS WHICH WON VICTORIA CROSS

Captain in the Army Medical Corps, a Brigader General and a Sergeant in the Rifle Brigade Are Included in the Latest List Just Gazetted.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency). — Further stirring stories of heroism are related in the Official Gazette in announcing the award of eleven new Victoria Crosses.

One of these is the splendid record of an officer of the Medical Corps. It reads: "Captain Noel Chavasse, late of the Medical Corps—though severely wounded early in the action whilst carrying a wounded soldier to the dressing station, Captain Chavasse refused to leave his post, and for two days not only continued to perform his duties, but went out repeatedly under heavy fire to search for and attend the wounded. Although practically without food, worn and fatigue and faint with his wound, he assisted a number of badly wounded men over difficult ground. His extraordinary energy and inspiring example were instrumental in rescuing many wounded men who would otherwise undoubtedly have succumbed. This devoted and gallant officer subsequently died of his wounds."

Held Up Attack.

"Brig.-Gen. Clifford Coffin.—When his command was held up in an attack owing to heavy machine gun and rifle fire from front and right flank, he went forward and inspected his front posts. Though under the heaviest machine gun and rifle fire and in full view of the enemy, he showed an utter disregard of personal danger, walking quietly from shell hole to shell hole and cheering the men by his presence. His very gallant conduct had the greatest effect on all ranks, and it was largely owing to his personal courage and example that the shell hole line was held throughout the day. His calm couage and cheerfulness exercised the greatest influence over all with whom he came in contact, and it is generally agreed that his splendid example saved the situation, and that but for his action the line would certainly have been driven back."

Took 45 Prisoners.

"Sergt. Edward Cooper, Rifle Corps, enemy machine guns from a concrete blockhouse 250 yards away were holding up the advance of a battalion on his left, and were also causing heavy casualties to his own battalion. Sergt. Cooper, with four men, immediately rushed towards the blockhouse although heavily fired on. At a distance of about one hundred yards he ordered his men to lie down and fire at the blockhouse. Finding that this did not silence the machine guns, he immediately rushed forward straight at it, and fired his revolver into the opening of the blockhouse. The machine guns ceased fire and the garrison surrendered. Seven machine guns and 45 prisoners were captured in the blockhouse. By this magnificent act of courage he undoubtedly saved what might have been a serious check to the whole advance, besides saving a great number of lives."

Eight Grounds Upon Which Exemption From Service Is Warranted

Exemption Form is Drafted Much in the Style of a Ballot Paper—Employer May Make Application For Exemption of Any of His Men If He Desires.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—Exemption from service under the Military Service Act may be claimed on eight separate grounds. The form of application, which will be available at postoffices throughout the Dominion in the course of a few days, makes this clear. The grounds are:

1. The importance of continuing employment in habitual occupation.
2. Importance of continuing employment as————, for which he is specially qualified.
3. Importance of continuing education or training.
4. Serious hardship owing to exceptional financial obligations.
5. Serious hardships owing to exceptional business obligations.
6. Serious hardships owing to exceptional domestic position.
7. Ill-health or infirmity.
8. Adherence to religious denomination of which the articles of faith forbid combatant service.

IN FORM OF BALLOT.

The form is drafted much after the style of a ballot paper. The applicant for exemption, is required to place a cross opposite the ground on which the claim is made. His case will then go to the local tribunal, to which proof in support will be submitted.

Application for exemption may be made not only by the man himself but by his employer or a near relative. In Great Britain claims for exemption on the ground of a man being indispensable in his civil occupation are generally made by the employer, who appeals to the tribunal on behalf of his men. It is felt that such a claim can best be made by the employer. In any event, a man claiming essential occupation would need to have the support of his employer to his claim.

The forms of military report are equally simple. These will be used by men who do not wish to claim exemption. They would avoid the necessity of reporting in person until such time as a recruit is called up for service. The declaration reads:

"I hereby report myself for military service I will report myself for duty when called upon by a notice mailed to me at

Blanks follow for the name and address of the recruits, his status, whether a bachelor or a widower, his present occupation, and the name and address of his employer.

Both classes of forms are now in the hands of the printer, and will be distributed immediately they are available.

THE JUNKMAN OF WALL STREET

One of Wall Street's junkmen recently retired worth approximately $900,000. He knew more about the Wall Street public's mistakes, and in fact, the errors of finance among the people of the United States over the last 40 years, than many a great banker or broker.

He usually attended the obsequies of big and small estates and always found some work to do and usually some profit in it. Some estates he bought outright and for a small figure.

He merely wanted Wall Street junk, i.e., stocks and bonds which brokers and bankers believed had little or no value. Sometimes he was lucky in finding lawyers who believed an estate had no value and he would make a blanket bid for thousands of oil and mining shares, two-thirds of which would have no value, but he usually found something that would yield a profit on some transaction.

He delved into the litigation of hundreds of industrial companies, and in some cases knew of small payments being made on defunct company's bonds by some obscure court in country districts and on these he would go 50-50 with the people who held the securities but who did not know the value thereof. He was always honest and his profits were not extraordinary, but there was always sufficient business to return a fair profit.—Wall Street Journal.

Friends Wonder At Great Change

Fred Baker Says He Was on Verge of a Nervous Rundown

"Honestly, my friends all tell me I am looking like a different person since I started taking Tanlac and I sure feel like one, for this medicine has fixed me up so I can work as well as I ever did, said Fred Baker, a machinist employed by the Steel and Radiator Co., and living at 39 Mariposa Ave., West Toronto, the other day.

Eighteen months ago, when I went from day to night shift, he continued the change in hours and habits seemed to upset me and I began to go down hill pretty fast. My nervous system was strained and it made me so irritable that I was peevish all the time. After working all night long I felt so tired and worn-out it was all I could do to drag myself home and when I got there I lost patience with everything and couldn't even stand to have the children around. I tried to sleep during the day, but my rest was not refreshing and when the time came to go on again I could hardly put one foot before the other. I was fast losing all my strength and energy and I was actually on the verge of a nervous breakdown when I started on Tanlac.

Well sir, my appetite began to pick up and I felt better before I had used up half my first bottle, and now my wife has to fill my lunch basket to the brim and then I don't get enough to eat. My nerves have become quiet and I am never cross or irritable any more, I have got over that tired, worn-out feeling and my night work seems to be just as agreeable as my day work used to be, and I feel just fine and dandy all the time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

G. A. LUBIN IS AN AUSTRIAN

LINDSAY, Sept. 17.—It now appears that the elusive G. A. Lubin, who worked his cheque game in Lindsay, Kingston and other places, is not a French-Canadian, but an Austrian. This much has been learned by the authorities who have so far failed to arrest him.

It is reported that a party answering his description was seen at Windsor. He was probably attempting to get across the line.

"Children," said the Sunday-school superintendent, "this picture illustrates to-day's lesson: Lot was warned to take his wife and daughters and flee out of Sodom. Here are Lot and his daughters, with his wife just behind them; and there is Sodom in the background. Now, has any girl or boy a question before we take up the study of the lesson? Well, Susie"

Edgar Lockwood Passed Away

LINDSAY, Sept. 17.—Death ended the sufferings of little Edgar V. Lockwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Lockwood, in Ross Hospital Saturday.

The little sufferer made a brave battle for life, but the terrible burns received prevented any chance of his recovery. The death under such sad circumstances has evoked expressions of the keenest regret and the sympathy of the community is poured out to the bereaved parents, who have been bereft of their only child.

THE KITCHENER STORY.

(New York World)

Any one who supposes German military authorities would keep silence about it if they really had Kitchener as a prisoner gives them undue credit for reticence and modesty!

PUBLIC OPINION

INTERNATIONAL SLACKERS

(Chicago Tribune).

Talk all you like about the "melting pot." International slackerdom won't melt. No gentle treatment affects it. You can reason or wheedle or sentimentalize until the cows come home, but only harsh measures avail. Give an international slacker the very dose he flees from country to country to dodge. Draft him. Drill him. Make him serve. In that way you will pound into him the first rudiments of manhood.

THE AIRPLANE CAMERA.

The greatest work of the airplane is to locate the enemy's stronghold and batteries and then map them. The multiple airplane camera which the Allies are using—an American invention, by the way—can map the German lines with truly marvelous proficiency. Where, in the first part of the war, artist-observers were used to make pencil sketches as accurately and as quickly as they could, now cameras such as this one are employed to take thousands of photographs at the rate of one a second, if necessary.

One multiple airplane-camera, described in the Popular Science Monthly, is capable of seven hundred and fifty exposures with a single loading. The secret of this great capacity lies in its use of ordinary motion picture film. It is constructed much like the ordinary film camera, with the exception that the turning of the film for a new exposure is accomplished automatically by the action of a set of gears.

The camera is placed on the airplane so that it will have an unobstructed view downward and slightly forward. One pull on the flexible cable, connected with the operating lever of the gears, winds up the previously exposed film, sets the shutter, makes the new exposure, and registers its number. A spring instantly brings the lever back into normal position ready for the next picture. This happens so swiftly that it is possible to take a continuous record of a flight. In bomb-dropping the camera is capable of taking pictures of the bomb in the air and at the very instant of explosion.

TANTALIZING.

(Southern Lumberman.)

Although it is a source of never-failing pleasure, the fifty-years-ago-to-day column in certain newspapers is a bit tantalizing at times. We should like to know what became of the man who got married in a certain Massachusetts town, August 8, 1867, and whose surprising conduct is recorded in this brief press pispatch: "John — — shoved a counterfeit bill into the marrying parson's hand after the ceremony and then stole the reverend gentleman's umbrella."

NEW ONTARIO ALL RIGHT.

(Ottawa Citizen.

The settlers of New Ontario stoutly maintain that their country is all right. Each year more land is coming under cultivation; and with the clearing and settling of the land there seems to be a steady improvement in the behaviour of the weather. And this year the north country is preparing an exhibit at the Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa to surprise the populace of this conservatively settled part of the world.

WHAT YOU THINK OF WHEN WAR COMES.

(From the American Magazine.)

Probably every man in the United States has thought more about his family in the last three months than ever before in his life—more seriously, I mean. It has been a great time for the quiet revaluation of family ties. To me it has been rather a revelation. I have always supposed that I was unusually loyal to my parents and my brothers and sisters.

I write to my mother regularly, and have always chipped in when any one of the folks has been in a tight place. But I woke up with a start yesterday to the realization that in all these weeks when my decision has been forming I haven't thought of any of them once. All my thought has been of her and of Peter.

It brought home to me how much more she means in my life than any of the other members of my family—yes, more than all of them together. I don't suppose anything in the world could have made it quite so terribly clear to me—anything except her death. The war will not be all loss to me, no matter how much it costs, if only I can come back and have some years in which to make her as happy as I know at this minute she deserves to be.

PAINTING THE NAVY.

Our battleships literally eat paint. The initial colour requirements for a new battleship cost about twenty-five thousand dollars, which is the price of about one hundred tons of the kind of paint the navy uses. In addition to this, according to the Popular Science Monthly, it is customary to repaint the different parts of a ship two or three times a year, so the annual upkeep probably exceeds this sum. This brings the annual outlay in paint for the entire fleet to a million dollars. The most important coating a vessel receives is the paint applied to the submerged parts of the hull to protect it from corrosion or barnacles.

BY BABYLONIAN WATERS

(By C. MANAFORD)

(By C. Manaford.)

The great plain of Mesopotamia is usually considered to be naturally divided into two portions, the northern part, consisting of a mighty stretch of land enclosed by the waters of the Euphrates and Tigris and the southern, the ancient Babylonian. The upper portion of this vast territory consists of pasture land and stony plains, which gradually rise towards the north in rolling hills until the terraced earth pushes up to meet the wild, mystic mountain of Armenia. The boundary between the upper and lower portions of the fascinating plain is a line taken from about the city of Tekrit, upon the Tigris, to the great southern bend of the Euphrates, just below Anah. There is, however, a more interesting line of demarkation, for just south of Nil, where in the fourth century began the famous irrigating trench of King Sepor II., there runs a very ancient coastline which is now hundreds of miles inland. Between this early coastline and the Persian Gulf, the open avenue to the inland East, lies a vast area of alluvial deposit, whose eastern boundary lies inside Persia itself, while its western limit is the great Syrian desert, constantly thrusting forward towards the banks of the Euphrates its shifting sands, with which the storm winds of the wilderness seek to match and to master the ceaseless struggle of man to beat down their impetuous onset. This great stretch of alluvial deposit is six times the size of the Nile delta and is the richest gift of nature to the whole Asiatic continent. Each year this enormous delta stretches further into the Persian Gulf, for it adds annually some seventy feet to its whole coast line. Ancient Babylonia is like the lower portion of a gigantic leaf, the southern courses of the Euphrates, Tigris and Kerun are the main veins; there is an interlacing network of lesser streams, some independent, some forced to discharge their waters into the main veins by the silt which blocks their courses to the Persian Gulf. The Shatt-el-arab, which gathers all these waters into its broad stream, is the stalk. The area of a river delta is influenced by the course and strength of its formative rivers; where courses are swift, channels are usually deep and little is given to the banks the rivers pass; hence there is a great piling up of alluvia at the mouths of the rivers and their deltas grow amain. The Euphrates gives little to its banks; the Tigris and its raging northern feeders give less, but its southern feeders, leaning from mountain passes at a much lower level, are kinder to the wayside earth.

The Karun itself, is a gift of the ancient Persians to the Shatt-el-arab, and is the only navigable river of Persia. Its most ancient outlet is now dry, but a portion of its waters flow onward to the Persian Gulf, parallel with the Shatt-el-arab, keeping within Persian territory. In the remote past, however, most of the waters of the Karun were diverted through the Haffar Canal into the Shatt-el-arab, thus ancient Babylonia the great southern highway of all Persia. Th only way to-day to avoid using the waterway of the Shatt-el-arab, would be for Persia to blast the rocks of the Ahwan rapids, and to dredge and embank the Bahmenshir branch of the river. Having control of this necessary and valuable Persian traffic, Stamboul has thoroughly built fortifications upon the Shatt-el-arab, a back-handed compliment which is not lost upon the people they threaten.

The physical conditions of ancient Babylonia, the province of Irak, were different in the middle ages to what they are now. The wonderful irrigation system, by means of which the earlier Kaliphs made this entire province a real Garden of Eden, was destroyed by the changing of the courses of the Euphrates and Tigris. At Kurnah (sometimes considered the site of ancient Paradise), two hundred and fifty miles below Bagdad, the Tigris and Euphrates now unite. Four hundred years ago (when the Tigris flowed about a hundred miles south of Bagdad, it turned off towards Wasit, by a channel known as the Shatt-el-Wayy Sixty miles below Wasit its waters spread over the land, forcing the Great Swamp two hundred miles long and reaching to Basrah. The Euphrates ran into the Great Swamp south of Kufa, for that was the region of its main channel, while the stream which flows past Hillah, near the site of ancient Babylon, was then an irrigated canal, the Nair Sura. Haunt of wild bird, and wilder, predatory man, only the stifling hands of the desert lurk on the bat-wings of storm and whirlwind, make the echoes of the scene of utter desolation which buried Babylon in its rush-strewn bosom, every trace of the former land of verdure, with its wealth of fruits and flowers, and nodding fields of grain.

Along the northern edge of this fever-haunted swamp ran a line of connected lagoons, whose waters were navigated, passing from the Tigris through them to Kurnah, where the Great Swamp drained out (by a canal) into the head-waters of the Shatt-el-arab, from Bagdad to Basrah, the sea-port, boats easily passed. The present course of the Tigris lies east of the Shatt-el-Hayy Canal, turning off at Kut-el-Amara, where Townsend and his gallant men wrote a glorious page of modern British history in an ancient land. This was indeed the original course before the Great Swamp even existed; the deposit of silt and its slow movements in the centuries have thus brought back the river to its ancient channel. The Great Swamp itself was the direct result of neglect of the river dykes. A first warning went practically unheeded; then an enormous volume of water through the melting of far Armenian snows, rushed headlong down and burst the dykes of Euphrates and Tigris in hundreds of places, making a permanent swamp.

This historic lesson has been quite lost upon the Turk; through sheer neglect of precautions the entire Irak province is now rendered liable to inundation; in 1903 the barrage at Mas-eyeh burst, causing the lower bed of the Euphrates to run dry for one hundred and fifty miles, the whole volume of water flowing down the Hindiye Canal to Samawa. The dam on the Euphrates which regulates the flow of the waters, is habitually kept out of repair, so that the volume of water passing down grows continually stronger and deeper. During dry weather part of the Euphrates at times runs dry in its bed, and so the date palms below Hillah are dying for want of irrigation; along the river bank whole stretches of land have gone out of cultivation.

The story of man, in his enormous stretch of prolific, alluvial land, is far stranger than mere romance. One historic day there came into this swampy wilderness, about the lower reaches of the Euphrates and Tigris, a few brave adventurous souls. They reaped the mud flats; they dug rough channels with which to drain and to irrigate. They had the golden touch of Midas; the mother earth they tilled so assiduously responded better even than the great lands of Canada do to the call of rich harvests; she gave them her kindly fruits in marvellous abundance. In the mud flats they toiled, turning primitive poverty into amazing wealth. This people, a blending of industry and nomadic daring, in course of time advanced a stream of humanity up the two rivers, the natural way of progress. Up to the very highlands of Armenia they went, strewing their victorious way with a long line of wonderful cities, built now of sun-baked mud and now of stately stone and scented cedar. Asshur knew them and Nineveh. Southwards on the Euphrates they upraised mighty Babylon.

Centuries might come and go, but in all the fair lands of Babylonia prosperity abode securely; Ctesipon, chief city of the province, and winter capital of the Sassanian kings arose. The Arabs founded cities there too; Kufa, rich in fields of sugar and cotton, with mighty walls fifty thousand feet in circuit; Wasit, where stood the sun-lit palce of Hajjaj. Nasrah, with palm groves, with shrines, with pasture lands of exceeding wealth, with its Western Gate by the kneeling place for camels, through which came and went the live-long day the wares of Mesopotamia, of Persia and of India. When the Abbasid dynasty changed to the Omayyad, it was fitting that a city of Oriental delight should mark the event; so arose Bagdad, which knew Harun-de-Rashid as it stretched its opulent palaces and gardens by Tigris banks.

Such is the story of ancient Babylonia and its engineering works, but no system of canals for irrigation it would always have been a desolate mud flat; with them it was the greatest world garden that a large and prosperous population could know! How has it fared under the rule of the Turk? A meagre population is there, half nomadic. The new Bagdad is not worthy of the old; Hillah is no representative of Babylon. Kerbela and Nedjef, Shiah cities, are there, so are a few villages and small towns at uncertain interrals. In the south are some new centres which cultivate the date palm. The Euphrates has no service of steamers at all; a Turkish service ran to Bagdad before the war and did its best to imure a British one; a service runs to Ahwaz. The Shatt-al-arab, a magnificent natural waterway, has two decrepit riverine ports, Basrah and Mohammerah. In short the greatest apologist for Stamboul cannot claim that in Mesopotamia at least, the Camanli Turk Empire has been for the people's good. Under its wanton misrule one of the finest lands in all Asia has slipped back almost to the ptriod of its earliest history, when primitive man first found it and scratched seeds into its fertile soil. Empires are alone justifiable when they are held to secure good government and the prosperity of the people but under the civilizing flag of national progress.

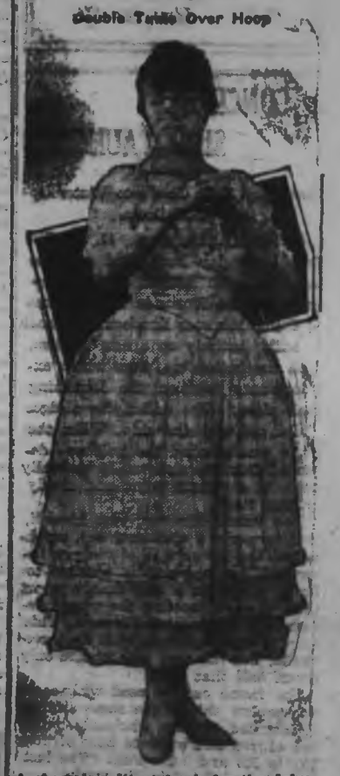
Double Twills Over Hoop



A charming dance frock for the debutante is shown in white georgette crepe, the simplicity of which is its most notable feature. In the skirt two tunics drop over a hoop foundation and finish at the bottom with pumngs of self material. The dainty bodice has elbow-length sleeves and round neck and finishes at the waistline with a crushed satin girdle.

GOOD WALNUT LOAF

Take two and a half breakfast cups of flour, three-quarters of a breakfast cup of granulated sugar, one of dried walnut meats, one heaped saltspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder, and sufficient milk to bind. Put the walnuts through a mincer or chop very fine, but the former method is preferable as it helps to bring to the surface the rich fat contained in the nuts. Sieve the flour, baking powder and salt into a basin, add the sugar and minced walnuts with sufficient milk to form a fairly stiff cake mixture; turn into a well-greased tin, and bake for about an hour and a quarter in a slow oven. This cake should be light and feathery in texture with a very delicious flavor from the nuts. The loaf is suitable for either luncheon or tea, and it is nourishing because of the nuts. It is likewise economical, as it needs no fruit, butter, nor eggs, the walnuts being rich in fat and flavor enough to take the place of other ingredients.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Overland Trail

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

In the old days of the Overland trail, the pony express and the lumbering stagecoach stage stations had been erected at a distance of fifteen miles apart throughout the length of the whole trail. After the first thirty miles from the Missouri river no coach was safe from attack until it reached San Francisco. The Indians could not use fire as a weapon, nor could they carry a station by assault, but they captured many of them by trickery or siege. In no case was the life of a company employee ever spared.

Never were greater hardihood and bravery exhibited than by the men selected to drive the coaches.

As the stage toiled through the heavy sand of some strips of desert or met several miles of stony and uphill trail a band of a hundred yelling warriors would suddenly appear. The driver must fight as well as guide his excited team. It was when the Overland company finally appealed to the government to clear its route through Kansas that General Custer was sent out with a brigade of troopers. Custer couldn't hope to strike a telling blow against the hordes in the field, but he laid his plans to open the route and drive the Indians back from it.

Custer's whole command witnessed the arrival of the last stage from the west—the last for several weeks. From a hilltop three miles from the trail, with impassable gullies between, we saw the coach come up the trail with 100 Indians pursuing it. It was a running fight, which aroused every man to the highest pitch of excitement, but we were helpless to extend aid. Through the clear air of a summer afternoon we saw the stage horses shot down and the coach overtaken. The passengers made a brave fight to the last, but none of them escaped. It was night before we had made our detour and reached the station, and the Indians had departed long before. They had captured the station two hours before they attacked the stage.

If this station had failed to hold out how would it be with Pawnee Flat, the next station to the west, and with White Horse, the next after that? The first was a four man station and the next a relay of eight. As we rode away through the night not a man had the slightest hope of Pawnee, though we knew it would have been defended as long as one of the four could lift a gun. We reached it at about 11 o'clock. It was as we had feared. Over 200 Indians had swarmed down out of the hills at daybreak the morning before, and, though they had lost a score of men, the dugout had been carried by assault and its defenders butchered. We waited here half an hour to give the poor corpses burial and then pushed on toward White Horse. It was not until we got within two miles of the station that our fears were relieved. Then we heard the reports of rifles and knew that the place was still holding out.

The station was situated about midway of a long, bare hill. To the west of it was a coulee, or dry ravine, with banks twenty feet high. We had with us a couple of scouts, who knew every rod of the Overland trail, and when within a mile of the station these men were sent forward to spy out the station. They returned after awhile to report that Spotted Horse and about 150 of his "dog soldiers," as the Cheyennes were called, were laying siege to the station and had evidently occupied the ground for two or three days. The ground around the dugout was so open that the Indians dared not "rush" the place, nor was there any show to use a keg of powder without reckless exposure. With their allies holding the trail to the east, the Cheyennes had entered upon a siege in hopes to starve the defenders out. Their war ponies and most of the band were lying up in the dry ravine for the night. This ravine had no opening to the south and was therefore a cul de sac.

The first signs of dawn were in the sky when we saddled up, mounted, and the whole of us pushed forward, led by the scouts, for the mouth of the ravine. We had the Spencer carbines, each with a full magazine, and as we got the order to charge each man began shooting. When a carbine was empty it was thrown away and a revolver used in its place. When the revolver was empty it was cast aside for the saber. Extended from bank to bank, we swept up the ravine, and we had nothing to do but kill. Taken by surprise, the Cheyennes thought only of getting away. The fight did not last above thirty minutes, and our loss was only three men wounded.

Down in the ravine we harvested seventy-eight dead Indians, and on the banks above the stage men counted up twenty-two more. We got upward of 100 rifles, about 50 pistols, 130 ponies and a wagon load of miscellaneous stuff. Every Indian lying there was a dead one. Custer had said, "Shoot to kill!" and there was no wounded or prisoners. Among the killed were Spotted Horse, Big Moon and White Bird, and that fight broke the backbone of the Cheyennes. Their part in the war was to capture all the stations west of Burning Hill, but they had taken only Pawnee Flat. They [illegible] week they were suing for peace and they were the first to be gathered on a reservation.

IS "ALRIGHT" ALWRONG

(London Daily News.)

A father writes that his son has been severely scolded by his schoolmaster for using the phrase "all right" in its amalgamated form, "alright," and asks if the latter is not an abbreviated modern form as legitimate as say, "already." Far from being a modern upstart, "alright" is, as a matter of fact, of very hoary antiquity, being used by English writers of a very early day. It may be anathema to the pedant, bu tit has its niche in the "Oxford Dictionary."

TROOPS RESTORING FRENCH WATERWAYS

Old Soldiers of the Reserve Clear the Debris Left by German Invaders

On the French Front. — While the soldiers of the active army are engaged all along the front attacking the Germans or defending the French positions against the frequent assaults of specially selected German shock troops, their "poor relations," composing the troops of the second line, are kept busy removing traces of the destruction which marked the retreat of the Germans before the advancing French and British.

Dozens of bridges over rivers and canals, as well as many locks which held back the waters of the canals, were blown up by the Germans as they hurriedly retired. In many instances reaches of the canals have run dry, while the courses of the rivers have been blocked by large masses of steel, reinforced concrete, and stone, which, if not removed, would cause the whole surrounding country to be flooded in rainy weather, or in case of frost, thus rendering impossible the digging of trenches or the occupation of important positions.

In order to avert any such disaster special companies of engineers were formed immediately after the battle of the Marne from among the old soldiers of the Second or Territorial Reserve, whose duty it was to follow in the rear of the advancing Allies and to clear all obstructions from river and canal beds. They were called companies of waterway sappers and the men composing them were selected because of their training in various trades—miners, riverters, electricians, boatmen, divers, miners and others, accustomed to the handling of explosives.

After the battle of the Marne these companies of "poor relations" did most excellent service in clearing the Marne and the lower Oise of obstructions. Then for a long period they were engaged on other services, but after the German retreat of this spring they were set to work on the old task of opening up rivers, and canals and freeing them from obstruction. They have in the course of the last two months done marvels in this direction. On the Aisne they have cleared away from the bed of the river the debris of no less than nineteen bridges, and on the upper Oise five, some of them quite solid constructions which, when they were blown up, fell in a mass right across the stream and formed an almost perfect barrage.

The Associated Press correspondent was present to-day at the removal of one of these broken bridges. It had fallen in one piece of steel and concrete, twenty yards in length and six in breadth, weighing eighty tons, and it lay athwart the stream almost from one bank to the other. The company of engineers which was ordered to do the work had to content themselves with very primitive tools, as no modern apparatus was available, all being employed in the munition factories. The most powerful crane at their disposal could lift only twenty tons, and blocks, pulleys and winches were of even smaller strength. It was therefore necessary to cut the great block lying under the water into smaller fragments. This was done by laying a charge of dynamite and melinite along its entire length in the centre. A diver plunged and weighted the charge, which was attached to a rope, with heavy stones at intervals. Then a copper wire, connected with a tiny portable electric battery, was attached to the end of the charge. The few men engaged then withdrew to a safe distance, the current was then switched on, and in a second a geyser fifty yards in height told that the work of splitting the destroyed bridge had been accomplished. The visit of a diver showed that the block had been split accurately in two pieces, and that the concussion had separated all of the concrete, so that each part weighed only twenty tons, just within the capacity of the apparatus at hand. In a few hours the whole mass was lying on the side of the river, and the current had free course.

On some occasions these men have to do their work under fire of the enemy's guns, but they carry out their arduous labour as though there was no danger. They have to be content with the knowledge that their work is helping towards victory while the more brilliant deeds of their comrades in the actual fighting line not far away are rewarded by the granting of decorations. However, there is no jealousy among them. They are "doing their bit," for France and civilization and they do it well.

They had a small reward to-day in the shape of a change from the ordinary soldier's rations, for they were able to add to their bill of fare dozens of pike, perch and bream stunned by the explosion of their latest operation.

The Woman's Medicine, Good for All Ages. Mrs. Harold Smith's Experience.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. Then this spring I felt very badly again, but I took the Compound and have been well all summer. I cannot be grateful enough for your medicine." — Mrs. HAROLD M. SMITH, 470 Water Street, Clarksburg, W. Va.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, and curing backache, nervousness, uterine and ovarian inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains.

HOW TO CAN MEATS

Hints For Home Canning of Vegetables and Meats

The "cold pack" method of canning consists of putting the vegetables or meat cold into a clean cold can or glass sealer and these are placed in a boiler and water added half way up or some cover the cans or jars. They are almost sealed tight and sterilizing is proceeded with. In the case of meat there is a shrinkage of about 17 per cent. and in order to have the jars full it is well to boil the meat for about 30 minutes in the open with enough water added to make up for the shrinkage which takes place and when the cans are filled they remain full. For home canning glass jars are the best unless they are put up for sale. A quart sealer costs five times as much as a quart can but it may be used five times and more before being broken. In the case of meat, corn, peas and even beans it is safer to use pint jars, although quarts will succeed if sterilizing is well done.

Apple Fritters

One and one-third cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds cupful of milk and one egg. Mix gradually and egg (well beaten). Into this batter stir two or three apples which have been pared, cored, quartered and sliced. Drop by spoonfuls and fry in deep fat. Serve with lemon sauce. Apples may be chopped and added to batter, if preferred.

STANFIELD'S
Unshrinkable
UNDERWEAR

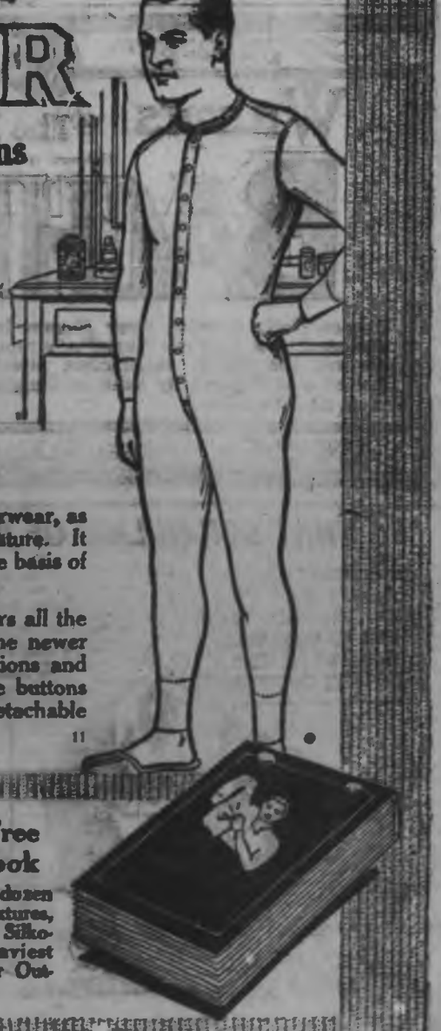
Made and Worn by Two Generations

Over a quarter of a century ago the late C. E. Stanfield, Pioneer underwear manufacturer of Truro, N.S., discovered a way to prevent woollen underwear from shrinking—by the radical but sensible plan of taking the shrink out of the wool before it went to the knitting machines.

His secret process at once overcame the one fault of woollen underwear, and started a keen and steadily growing demand for the Stanfield's product. On it, by steady development, his two sons, at the head of Stanfield's Limited, have built a thriving business, providing underwear for hundreds of thousands of Canadians.

From the very first, the sterling quality of Stanfield's Underwear, as proved by wear and washing, has been its most prominent feature. It actually DOES NOT SHRINK, "full up" nor mat—and on the basis of length of service it is the best value offered in underwear.

Not content with superior quality, Stanfield's give wearers all the little niceties that make undergarments luxurious. Among the newer improvements are the wonderfully handy Adjustable Combinations and Adjustable Sleepers for growing children. Simply moving the buttons on the waist allows for two to three year's growth, and the detachable lower part is a great convenience.



SOME STANFIELD'S FAVORITES

Stanfield's Original Pure Wool; honest as old-fashioned homespun. The best underwear made for men who work hard outdoors. Wonderfully warm and absorbent. Red, Blue and Black Labels—regular, medium and heavy weights.

No. 77—One of our old reliables—two-ply, medium weight, in natural color, for men and women. Very soft, warm and comfortable. No. 73 is the same weight, in white, for women. No. 88 is the same quality, in heavy weight, natural color, for men.

All made in Combinations and Two-piece Suits—in full length, knee and elbow length and sleeveless.

MANCHURIA

(East and West News.)

Manchuria is terribly poor, despite the mineral and agricultural riches extracted from its soil and rocks, all of which products are shipped aboard. There are probably thousands of industries unable, by remitting toil, to earn more than a meagre living. When to their natural difficulties are added the ravags of bandits and the evils of misgovernment, such as now prevails in many parts of China, abject poverty and starvation must be the lot of the people who, in the best of time, are only half fed.

DYSENTERY —IS— DANGEROUS

Dysentry is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. It comes on so suddenly, the pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the action on the system so weakening that its termination often proves fatal.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way, and you wish to check the unfiatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during the past 72 years.

Mrs. Albert Fearon, Bryant's Corner, N. B., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for the past ten years, and I would not be without it in the house.

Last fall my little boy, three years old, took very bad with dysentery. After taking 3 or 4 doses of "Dr. Fowler's" he began to improve, and before he had used all the bottle he was entirely cured. I sincerely recommend it to all."

There are many cheap imitations of this sterling remedy on the market. Ask for Dr. Fowler's and see that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Motor Trip To Peterborough Offers Many Possibilities

By G. E. M. in the Toronto Star Weekly

To the motorist with a few days or a week to spare, and with a desire to see Ontario first, there is no section of the Province which offers quite so many fields of interest as the north-east, that is, the district taking in Lake Simcoe and as far north and east as the Kawartha Lakes. This area is one which takes in a wide range of Ontario scenery, from the rich, level farming lands near Lake Ontario, to the rugged, rolling country farther north, and, finally to the rocky, picturesque section near and to the north of the lakes. Ontario becomes a rather wonderful Province when its scenery is unrolled before the eyes of the visitor in the back seat of a motor, and there are some remarkable landscapes in the lake regions such as cannot be viewed near the city; the views, exclusive of the mountains, are among the best to be had in Canada, for there are points along the roadway to which you will now be introduced, from where long stretches of valley and hills reach out before the eyes for so many miles in extent that even on a clear day the distant hills are wrapped in a blue haze. The point is, get out and see your own Province. Don't dash through it on a railway train which hugs the valleys and refuses to give you a panorama from the hilltops, but go about it leisurely in a vehicle which will let you stop occasionally and let you appreciate just what Ontario is.

The real objective is Peterborough, since that forms a nice centre from which to branch out in many directions into different types of country, but there are ways and ways of reaching Peterborough by motor. There is the prosaic way of following the Kingston road as far as Port Hope or Cobourg and swinging north but the greater portion of the Kingston road has been so badly battered by traffic that motorists are now trying to find a way around. Besides, there is always a thrill to be had in searching out a new road, it gives one a sense of novelty and variety, and a feeling of exploration. If the motorist has plenty of time to spare the best way is to run straight north from the city as far as Lake Simcoe and branch to the east from that point. Yonge street is fair now as far as a point south of Aurora, and north of that it is atrocious, so in order to miss the nerve-shattering part of Yonge street swing to the east immediately north of Bond Lake, at the first turning, follow that road as far as the eastern shore of Wilcox Lake, then turn sharp to the east and follow the good road until it strikes the fourth concession, which leads you straight up into the north of the county.

Skirt Lake Simcoe.

You can't miss it, owing to road conditions, and once in the north of the country any of the roads running north leads to the lake, and there is little choice among them.

Having skirted along the shores of Lake Simcoe, turn south from Jackson's Point for a mile to Sutton West, and make that the starting point to the east. Follow what is known as the Virginia line directly east through Virginia and Wilfrid to Cannington, turn south to Manilla, then turn directly east into Lindsay. From Lindsay there is an angling road, which is easy to find, leading into Omemee, then from Omemee the run is almost directly east into Peterborough. This run is a decidedly interesting one and can be made readily in a day. The route is all favorable for motoring, though in the Omemee district there are some pretty stiff hills, but with a good gravel foundation which lets any average car climb them on intermediate. It is wise, however, to allow two days for this run, as there are some side trips which lengthen out the run and which should not be missed. For instance instead of going directly east to Cannington, there are some fine views of Lake Simcoe to be had by turning to the north, and following the shore as far as Beaverton, or even Gamebridge. From Gamebridge it is only a short run directly east through Balsover and Kirkfield to Balsam Lake, which is a very picturesque spot, though by taking that run it means doubling back on the trail as far as Balsover, for there is no good motor road connecting with the south from Balsam Lake. Just a little east of Balsover the road turns to the south as far as Woodville, then east again through Grass hill, south to Oakwood and east to Lindsay.

From Lindsay, if the weather is favourable, there is a nice run over a clay road north to Fenelon Falls and Sturgeon Point, while the route from Lindsay to Peterborough may be lengthened to advantage by taking the crooked road north to Bobcaygeon, instead of going south caygeon instead of going south through Omemee. This is possibly twenty miles farther but it leads one on the southern trip from Bobcaygeon to Peterborough through the Chemong district, a very picturesque spot. There is one warning sign which must be hung out here, and that is, don't attempt to take the floating bridge over Chemong Lake by motor. If you are looking for thrills you may get them here, and you may also get across safely, but discretion is the better policy. The bridge is a half mile in length, across the centre of the lake, and on windy days the waves sweep over the planking in a manner most disconcerting to any person troubled with nerves. It may be missed, however, by swinging around the south end of the lake and striking the direct road from Omemee across to Peterborough. This may be a little longer, but it is wiser.

Trips from Peterborough.

Once in Peterborough the motorist has the whole Stony Lake region at his command, and he has as well some very good gravel roadways leading up into the north. Chemong Lake Buckhorn Lake, Deer Lake, and Stony Lake are all easily accessible through rain or shine. One very nice trip is to leave Peterborough by going north on George street to McDonnel street, turn west to Reid street, then turn north and go straight to Chemong Park. It is only six or seven miles over gravel road; and from Chemong there are many possibilities. One is to go directly, through the village for a mile, then take the shore road north to Selwyn, turn directly north at Selwyn and follow the O. M. L. signs into Buckhorn or Hall's Bridge, as it is commonly called. It is about twenty miles from Peterborough, and at Buckhorn the motorist touches the edge of the great rocky stretch of country leading into the north. Buckhorn is picturesque in itself, it has a good summer hotel, plenty of fishing and a rocky road leading still farther north. This road runs into the hinterland, it is known as the Buckhorn road, and though it does not go anywhere in particular or through any village of any importance it does offer plenty of variety to the motorist seeking novelty. The return trip from Buckhorn may be made over the same route, or by watching the road signs and swinging east to Lakefield, instead of west to Chemong.

Another pleasant run north from Peterborough is along the west bank of the Otonabee River as far as the roadway which turns sharply to the right into Lakefield, then, instead of taking the turn, continue north until you find a road sign marked Young's Point. It is nine miles from Peterborough to Lakefield, and another six into Young's Point, which touches the lower branch of the Stony Lakes, and if the motorist is looking for more fields there is Burleigh, four miles farther on at the west of Stony Lake. The return trip to Peterborough will need to be made over the same route as far as the Lakefield road, then turn into Lakefield and down the east shore of the river. The east shore road is far from being in as good condition as the west, but it runs within a few yards of the river all the way down and is one of the picture spots of the north. The district to the north of Peterborough is a great summering centre, as you doubtless know, but just now, in the fall of the year is the time for the motorist to take it in. There is another fine motoring district to the south of Peterborough which you will hear about later.

The waist of white voille is always attractive and smart, to say nothing of its durability. A dainty model is shown in white, the jabot collar and cuffs trimmed with inch-wide val lace. Crochet buttons fasten the front and very tiny ones outline the shape of the cuff.

BRIGHTEN THE KITCHEN

Should be Most Cheerful Room in the House

One wonders at the housekeepers who choose for their kitchen walls and woodwork a dingy grey or brown or some other dark, dull color that will not show the dirt. Are they better housekeepers because the dirt, which is surely there, does not show? Would these same women wear black dresses and aprons when doing the cooking and feel that they were clean because they did not look soiled? The kitchen should be the cleanest, sunniest, and most cheerful room in the house. It is here the housekeeper spends most of her time, and it is here the food is prepared and often served.

A dark room may be much improved by using the proper colors. If there is much sunshine in the kitchen, white or blue may be used; but on the north side of the house use buff or warm, yellowish tan. The increased cheerfulness and better spirits of the housekeeper will mean much to the entire family, and her work will be increased by the new color scheme because a sunny, pleasant workshop lightens every task.

My Limbs Would Twitch

And Awaken me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 17.—This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the nerves that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigour and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Ar[illegible] Street, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when fire broke out in the adjoining house. My nerves were in such a state that, after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to get up and walk around the room, or go downstairs. Even when I would be dropping off to sleep my limbs would twitch and waken me. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little while. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time, but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that the treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night, and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much good the Nerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

OVERCOMING THE SHIP SCARCITY.

Shortage of bottoms has been felt on the Pacific coast, as elsewhere, but lack of ships, in one instance at least, has been overcome by Yankee ingenuity in a novel manner.

The government's orders for lumber for new ships, army cantonments, etc., overtaxed carrying capacity of Pacific coastwise lines, and to get the logs from Oregon and Washington forests to the mills, the logs are chained together in huge rafts, 800 feet in length and 40 to 60 in. width. The completed raft is ovel in shape and has apeparance of an immense turtle. It is picked up by a sea-going tug and towed to its destination, safe against U-boat attacks and at a very reasonable rate for freight.

Lean fishes are usually boiled or used for made dishes.

If spinach is wilted let it stand in cold water to freshen.

Fish should be eaten in season and when freshly caught.

Successful Attacks By The British Troops

Sea Planes Bomb The Enemy War Craft

British Raids Upon The Enemy Trenches Completely Successful

Many Casualties Are Inflicted and Prisoners Brought Back---German Attacks on French Positions in the Ardenne Fail After a Lively Battle---U. S. Navy Department Satisfied That There is No Enemy Submarine Off the Atlantic Coast.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (British Official), September 17. — Troops of English and Scottish regiments made successful raids last night on the German trenches in the Arras and Somme regions of the battlefront in France. Many Germans were killed in their dugouts and prisoners were taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 17.—Germany has sent a note to Sweden, says Central News Agency, highly regretting disagreeable issues raised on account of Sweden transmitting telegrams to Germany. Germany says she is obliged to the Swedish Government for transmitting messages, but regrets her representatives in Argentina should have sent telegrams in the phraseology they did.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, September 17.—The Navy Department after as complete an investigation as is possible, is satisfied that there is no foundation for the reports that a hostile submarine is off the New England coast.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 17.—German forces last night attacked the French positions in Apremont Forest in the Ardeneas. The attack failed after a lively battle.

There was a violent artillery duel west of Craonne and Massiges.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, September 17.—Premier Kerensky is compromising with the conflicting factions in Petrograd, until the first elections of the new Russian republic are settled next November. It is a new role for the impetuous Radical, but in accepting it Kerensky is showing higher qualities of statesmanship that he has previously displayed.

To save Russia Kerensky must become the Russian Lloyd George. The British Premier's great quality has not been the way in which he has directed the war, but his success in uniting Conservatives, Moderates and Radicals at home. Kerensky, a Radical like Lloyd George, must bury his personal politics for the rest of the war, as Lloyd George has done, or Russia's dangers will become unbearable.

Kerensky is now trying to do this very thing. His first effort to effect a working agreement with the constitutional Democrats, who represent the professional classes in Russia, has temporarily failed because the extreme Socialists would not work with the constitutional Democrats. But, while Kerensky has been unable for the present, to bring Moderates into his Cabinet, he has been strong enough to keep the Extremists out.

A middle-of-the-road policy is now in action in Petrograd for the purpose of giving all factions time to accustom themselves to new conditions. It requires a violent readjustment for Moderates and Extremists to work together. England delayed in solving the problem, and France has not wholly solved it yet.

(By John H. Hearley, United Press Staff Correspondent.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, September 17.—Austria-Hungary is reported finding it increasingly difficult to keep in agreement with the Germans. Diplomatic advices received here to-day told of an epidemic of riots throughout the Dual Empire and political differences as to Prussianism that indicate a growing breach between the two Teutonic Powers. Austria is suffering from lack of food, according to reports here. Most of the disorders, detailed news of which has been suppressed, have been due to this cause. Thousands of the people are making pilgrimages to various shrines imploring divine intercession for peace. Prussian officers, it was asserted, are frequently insulted on the streets of various Austrian cities. Italy's successful drive east of Gorizia is likewise reported causing widespread apprehension throughout Emperor Carl's Dominions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

STOCKHOLM, September 17.—The Liberals at a great meeting here censured the Swedish Government because of revelations that Swedish consular agents had been used to forward German spy communications.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BOMBAY, India, September 17.—According to a private telegram Mrs. Annie Besant, head of the Theosophical society, and George Arundale and B. Wades, two male associates, have been released from internment by the Madras Government. The restrictions placed by the Indian Government on Mrs. Besant and her associates were sequel to a violent Home Rule agitation, which evoked a storm of adverse comment in the press of India.

SUCCESSFUL ATTACKS BY BRITISH PLANES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 17.—British naval seaplanes on Saturday dropped bombs on German destroyers and trawlers along the Belgian coast near Zeebrugge, hitting one destroyer and sinking at least one trawler. An official statement issued by the Admiralty to-day says: Naval aircraft made a bombing raid Saturday on enemy shipping between Blankenberghe and Ostend. Bombs were dropped on destroyers and trawlers or drifters. One large destroyer was hit amidships and one, probably two of the group of four trawlers was sunk. In the evening during a late patrol one of our seaplanes was attacked by two seaplanes which were engaged by our escorting airplanes and one was shot down in flames, the other being chased towards some enemy destroyers. About 10 a.m. yesterday our patrol engaged a formation of enemy aircraft destroying one and probably two.

ROME, Sept. 17.—Austro-Hungarian troops, by four successive counter attacks, attempted on Saturday night to recapture the ground they had lost on Friday to the Italians on the Bainsizza Plateau; General Cadorna reports that all assaults were repulsed.

DRIVER M. MACONOMY, who is officially reported accidentally injured. He enlisted here with the 8th C. M.R., and was transferred to the Engineers.

SERGT. N. SAXBY OF PETERBORO' WINS THE MILITARY MEDAL

FOUGHT ON PARAPET

The name of Sergt. Norman Saxby, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and more recently of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, is to be added to the long list of Peterborough soldiers who have won decorations in the war. Sergt. Saxby, who is a son of Mr. Wm. Saxby, Smith street, and a brother of Sergt. Ernest and Pte. Wm. Saxby, recently returned from overseas, has been awarded the Military Medal for conspicuous bravery in the recent fighting around Lens.

The incident which won Sergt. Saxby the much coveted decoration, was told in The Examiner on Saturday in a letter from Sergt. Albert Stanley of Peterborough, who described how his fellow-citizen and fellow non-com. had attacked the Germans with his bare fists.

Stewart Lyons, the special representative of the Canadian Press in France, in reporting by special cable the award of the Military Medal to Sergt. Saxby and other members of the 21st, says:

"Many remarkable deeds are recorded as having been done by these men. Sergt. Saxby fought on the parapet, repelling an enemy attack until his rifle jammed. Then he rushed forward and bayoneted several Germans. On another occasion, being unarmed, he knocked out two of the attacking enemy with his fists."

Pte. Wm. Saxby, brother of the latest Peterborough man to win a decoration, was several times mentioned in despatches for gallant work. He was one of the original members of the 21st Battalion, and his brother seems determined to add to the laurels surrounding the name of Saxby in the Eastern Ontario unit. Pte. Wm. Saxby has been invalided home and was one of the members of the Great War Veterans' Association who manned the model trench at the Exhibition.

NAILED A BABY INSIDE CALF-SKIN

Horrible Deed of German Soldiers Reported by Clergyman

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—"Finding a calf skin nailed to a barn door to be dried, the Germans nailed a baby inside and wrote underneath the word "Zwei" (two)," declared Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis to a horrified congregation in Plymouth Church here. Dr. Hillis has just returned from a two months' visit to the front. He exhibited photographs of the results of "a thousand German atrocities."

PTE. WM. GODFREY.

Just as she had finished reading two letters received this morning from her husband, Pte. Wm. F. Godfrey, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Mrs. Godfrey, 206 Dublin street, was notified by Adjutant Mcelhiney that her husband is officially reported killed in action on Sept. 3rd. Pte. Godfrey enlisted in the 93rd Battalion in December, 1915, and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, afterwards being transferred in a draft to the 52nd Battalion. Two brothers of Pte. Godfrey are overseas. He is survived by a wife and two children, who will have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Two letters from Pte. Godfrey arrived in this morning's mail, enclosing photographs of himself and of Pte. A. Green, formerly of the 93rd. News of the death of the latter was published in Saturday's Examiner and is mentioned in Pte. Godfrey's letter.

PTE. GEORGE WILLIAM ROWBERRY.

The third of three Peterborough brothers to meet death on the battlefield is Pte. George William Rowberry, news of whose death in action on Sept. 8th, came in an official message from Ottawa on Saturday night. Pte. Rowberry, who was employed by J. W. Edwards, the George Street butcher, before enlisting, joined the 93rd Battalion in the winter of 1915-16, and after going overseas with that unit, was transferred to the 8th C.M.R. at the front. He is survived by his wife and one child, and his sister, Mrs. Richard Edwards, residing in Otonabee, three miles from the city. Two brothers, have been killed in action. Pte. Joseph Rowberry left Peterborough at the beginning of the war and went to England to enlist with the Royal Worcesters, meeting death in France. Pte. Robert L. Rowberry enlisted with the Princess Pats at the opening of hostilities and he, too, fell on the field of honour. Now the third brother has made the supreme sacrifice.

PTE. JAMES CONNORS.

Mrs. Elsie Connors, High street, received a wire from Ottawa on Saturday stating that her son, No. 580081, Pte. James Connors, Medical Service, is officially reported admitted to No. 18 Field Ambulance on Sept. 8th, suffering from gas poisoning. Pte. Connors, who is eighteen years of age and just out of school, enlisted last year with the Queen's Field Ambulance, and is the first Peterborough member of that unit to figure in the casualty lists.

PTE. ROBERT SHERIDAN.

Mrs. Sheridan, 475 Rogers street, has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Robert Sheridan, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported admitted to the 8th General Hospital, Rouen, on September 6th, suffering from gas poisoning. Pte. Sheridan went to France with one of the first drafts from the 93rd Battalion, and this is the second time his name has appeared in the casualty lists.

DRIVER M. MACONOMY.

Mrs. D. H. Maconomy, 549 Patterson street, on Saturday last received the following, by telegram, from the Director of Records, Ottawa:

Sincerely regret to inform you that Driver Malcolm Maconomy, No. 113422, Engineers, is officially reported as having been admitted to Second Australian General Hospital at Wimereux, Sept. 4th, 1917, suffering from a dompound fracture of the arm, through an accident. Will send further particulars when received.

The many friends of Driver Maconomy will be very sorry to hear of the painful accident he has met with and will sympathize with his relatives and hope for a speedy recovery.

He has been overseas at the front doing his bit since the latter part of 1915, and this is the very first trouble of any kind that has come to him. He enlisted here with the 8th C.M.R.

If the thousands of people who passed through the War Veterans' model trench at the Exhibition could have seen it an hour after the programme was through on Saturday afternoon they would have obtained a good idea of what a front line trench looks like after a heavy bombardment. The Veterans jumped into the work of demolishing the exhibit with a will, and by dark the majority of the sand bags were emptied, the dug outs demolished and the equipment packed, ready for the return to Kingston.

Mrs. E. Toms, 506 Chamberlen street, has received the following letter in regard to the death at the front of her son, Gunner Toms:

France, Aug. 19.

It is with the deepest sympathy that I write to you about the death of your son, and am only sorry, too sorry, I neglected doing so sooner, but owing to operations I have not had the opportunity.

It was on the afternoon of the 10th of August, about 3 o'clock, that your son met his death, and he was buried about seven o'clock the same day in the line close to where he was killed. We have had a cross with his name and number, and "killed in action" and the date, erected on his grave.

Your son had been with me for over a year and had at all times served as a soldier should. He was exceptionally cool and brave under fire and was one of the most willing and determined men in the battery when we had any tough job in front of us. Throughout the fighting at Vimy Ridge your son spent thirty-

NEW ATTENDANCE RECORD FOR PETERBOROUGH'S FAIR

PTE. WM. GODFREY, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported killed in action.

17,151 Paid Admissions for the Three Days As Compared With 11,973 in 1916—Prize Winning Horses Decided on Saturday.

THE BOY BABY SHOW

With 17,151 paid admissions, an increase of 5,178 over last year's total of 11,973, the 1917 Industrial Exhibition has set up a splendid new record that speaks volumes in support of the contention that "Peterborough possesses possibilities unparalleled" of establishing the banner fair in Eastern Ontario with the single exception of Ottawa. This year's success is not only a well deserved reward to the untiring efforts of President G. A. Gillespie and his fellow directors, not only does it confirm their faith in the opportunity that bids Peterborough reach for it, but the impressive figures of the total paid admissions must surely remove whatever doubts may have obtained respecting the appeal, the advantage, the need of the general success of an agricultural and industrial exhibition supported by the full force of the enthusiasm and confidence of the city and county.

The Official Figures.

The statement submitted by Mr. Felix Brownscombe, who supervised the sale of tickets, gives the following resume of the attendance:

Naturally the directors are elated over this year's sweeping success, and there is an evident satisfaction among the citizens, whose co-operation was one of the most encouraging features of the Exhibition. The favorable weather was duly acknowledged and in the closing hours of get-away day it was remarked that not a complaint had been registered. There was considerable disappointment that the grand stand accommodation was insufficient, but this is a condition that must necessarily prevail until permanent grounds have been secured.

The Saturday events included the judging of the light harness horses. The "single four wheeled turn-out" was keenly contested, and proved far more interesting than the roadster teams. On the half mile track the free-for-all provided one of the most exciting races seen here in years. Incidentally the track record was lowered.

The Baby Show.

The baby show for boys attracted a numerous group of sturdy infants. One father arrived at 2.30 o'clock and found the show concluded. He stated it had been advertised for two o'clock. The judges, Adjutant McElhiney, Mr. H. C. Winch and Mr. G. H. Logie, found a real problem before them, but they finally made the following awards.

INFLICTED TRIPLE LOSSES ON GERMANS SAYS GEN. CURRIE

Fight For Hill 70 Was Hardest and Most Successful in Which Canadians Have Ever Been Engaged Writes Officer in Command of Maple Leafs

LETTER TO CAPT. BURNHAM

The following is a copy of a letter from Lieut-General, Sir Arthur Currie, Commanding the Canadians in France, to Captain J. H. Burnham, M. P.

Canadian Corps Headquarters,
France.
August 31st, 1917

Dear Captain Burnham:

Please forgive me for taking so long before acknowledging your kind letter of congratulations written in June. It was very good of you to remember me so kindly, and I deeply appreciate your thoughtfulness.

I know you will rejoice with me over the recent success of our corps. The fighting for Hill 70 was the hardest and most successful in which we have ever been engaged. Besides gaining ground of great tactical value, we inflicted losses on the enemy which I am confident were at least three times those suffered by ourselves. I have never known the Boche to fight so hard or so determinedly before. He counter-attacked us no less than thirty-five times, throwing against us the very best troops in the German Army, but all to no avail.

I am glad to note that you are exerting all your influence to keep the Corps at full strength. From here I cannot make head or tail out of the political situation in Canada. It seems to me that our Country is about to be divided as never before. Such a thing is very deplorable, and those who are encouraging the breach are assuming very grave responsibility. Surely wiser counsels will prevail, and such action taken as will ensure that our Country plays it's part unto the end. With many thanks, and with best wishes always, I am,

Ever yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) A. W. CURRIE.

APPLES AND SUBMARINES.

In spite of its improbability and incongruity, there is a very intimate relation between apples and German submarines. The British market is closed to Canadian apples, and with good reason; not that the apples are not wanted, but because they can't be got over. The British Secretary of State has informed the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce that it is impossible to raise the embargo against apples from Canada. He says the subject has been gone into very thoroughly and with sympathetic consideration, but owing to financial and tonnage conditions it is impossible to remove the embargo against the importation of Canadian apples into the United Kingdom.

The cause of shortage of tonnage is in large measure due to its destruction by German submarines. So that there is a rather direct relation between apples and submarines. This is only one proof in respect of its effects upon our material interests; if for no higher or more unselfish reason, that in helping wage this war we are in a very important, if indirect way, fighting for ourselves; that we are defending Canada as really as if the battle front were on our own soil.

But it is not the matter of a trifle of trade alone that determines our partnership in this war. Our national life as a free people, our individual liberty and all that make citizenship of a free country worth while, are at stake. If Germany wins, all is lost, for her world domination ambition in case of success, will include Canada as one of the first objects of the ruthless application of German ideals and methods, for next to Britain, the "strading" of Canada is desired; because she is the greatest of Britain's overseas dominions; and because on the battle front she has been one of the sharpest thorns in the Teuton flesh.

In almost every sense this is our war; first, because we are part of the Empire, the strong bulwark against the invasion of might and wrong, oppression and human retrogression, and because our future is so indissolubly bound up with the Empire that its good is our good and its loss is our loss.

We must bear our fair share of the burden and pinch of the war, not one or a few, or three hundred thousand in the ranks but all of us are in the fighting class. Three hundred thousand have done it willingly, and a hundred thousand more must do it—if need be—unwillingly; but it must be done. And we must, besides, all join the ranks; if not with the weapons of whatever service we can perform.

We can't ship apples to Great Britain, but we can send "smokes" to the boys at the front.

THE EXHIBITION.

The great success of the Industrial Exhibition of 1917 is gratifying in many ways, but in none more so than in the demonstration of the fact that Peterborough is the natural centre for an exhibition of greater length and greater extent and greater success and importance than what we have at present. With adequate grounds of its own, and adequate and presentable permanent buildings, there is no reason, except not doing it, why we should not have a five days' exhibition, and of proportionate magnitude, instead of a really two days' exhibition. There is the same overhead cost, the same worry and work of the directors, if not more, attending a two days' exhibition, as there would be with one of four or five days.

With suitable grounds and buildings, with adequate equipment, there would be, and could be, held in Peterborough, the most important exhibition between Ottawa and Toronto. We have the district to draw from, and given the conditions demanded, the exhibition would attract exhibits and attendance from all parts of the Midland District. As is the case now, our exhibition heroically held and maintained under discouraging and handicapping conditions, is extending its area of influence, there being this year a noticeably larger patronage and attendance from outside points. And this area could be greatly extended with the provision of the requirements so obviously indicated.

It is gratifying to note that the citizens are taking a deeper interest in the exhibition, recognizing, no doubt the great value and importance to the city of a large and creditable annual exhibition. The attendance from the city has been greater than in other years, and public-spirited citizens, business men and others have taken a more active and more general interest. We have no body of citizens of greater local patriotism and more loyalty to the city and country and more desirous of their credit and the promotion of their interests, than the public-spirited, hard-working, undiscouragable directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. For years they have worked, undaunted by difficulties of financing and handicapped by inadequate equipment—making bricks without straw; and they have had their reward. They have kept the exhibition alive and moving; and it becomes the duty of the city and the citizens to strengthen their hands, and to actively sympathize and cooperate with the exhibition directorate, with a view of providing the necessary conditions, of providing an exhibition of a size and importance for which Peterborough is a natural centre. The importance of such an exhibition is greater to us than to the rural community in a material sense, in a sense of reaping profit. The presence here of thousands for four or five days of the week, means much to our merchants and business citizens, apart altogether from the moral gain to the city of being recognized as the natural centre of a rich and important surrounding area.

On all counts it is incumbent upon us to get together, to take counsel together, to work together, to make the Peterborough Exhibition the success it is capable of being made.

The submarine outrages reach to the quiet of our Canadian orchards. The British embargo on Canadian apples is due to shortage of shipping and tonnage. This is our war.

RIGHT AND WRONG.

The Borden government has a sure gauge and standard of the righteousness or otherwise of its legislation and administration, and of the nature of the discharge of national duty in the crisis the war has caused—when it does right it is supported; and condemned when it does wrong. At the beginning of the war the government was backed by parliament, without regard to party, and by the people of the country, with patriotic sincerity. The Liberal party in the House joined with its party opponents in giving the government the machinery to do its duty in guarding the country, and the conduct of the war, in the national interests. Immense sums of money were unanimously voted as war supply, and there was no criticism, because the government in proposing the appropriation of the people's money for a patriotic purpose, was doing right. But the moment when the government by waste of war funds in war material purchase scandals, and the unrighteous profiting of its supporters; when it wasted the money of the country in millions; when in its war administration it put partisan interests before patriotism, it was criticised by those whose patriotism justified their support of the government in appropriating millions of money, but whose patriotism could not wink at waste, and worse, of this money.

When, through the influence of the government policy and its lax interest in recruiting, recruiting came to a standstill, and the adoption of compulsory service became necessary, if we were to do our full duty, Liberals who had been the keenest critics of the government when it was doing wrong, were impelled by a nobly forgetful patriotism to support at the peril of their political lives, the government proposal of conscription. They supported and helped the government when it was right.

Now these very men—these heroes who put their political lives at stake to support the government when it was right, are now its strongest and most consistent critics when the government to steal an election, enacts by the force of a brute majority the odious outrage of an iniquitously partisan franchise act, in supercession of the perfectly good and sufficient franchise act that was in existence till the new franchise inquity became law, and under which an honest election was possible.

The Borden government has outraged the spirit of patriotic cooperation in which Liberals cooperated with them in the beginning of the war. They have done the same to the Liberals that advocated, voted for, and helped carry conscription. And not only that, but it has outraged the spirit of fair play, and sahken the loyalty of its own party supporters, by conspiring and legislating to win by the most contemptible and palpable trickery an expression of national confidence, it has forfeited, if not by their three and a half—no, six years, of misgovernment, then by the disgraceful act of political brigandage with which it closes its career—forever.

If Sir Robert Borden were as wicked as he is weak, the Kaiser would have to look to his laurels.

HOW PARTIZANSHIP IMPERILS PATRIOTISM AND NATIONAL SPIRIT

Those who are sincerely in favour of a union of men of both parties for the purpose of carrying on the war, have reason to regret the introduction of a partisan Franchise Act which has fanned the flames of party passion. Nearly all of the large body of Liberals who voted for conscription recorded their votes against a measure which outrages the fundamental principles of democracy. One of these, Mr. Buchanan, of Lethbridge, said that he had repeatedly appealed to his western constituents of alien origin on patriotic grounds, and had met with generous response:

"I cannot do that now. This government has repudiated the pledged word of Canada. It has brushed it aside as a scrap of paper. It has repudiated the independence of conscription Liberalism. Those of us who left our party because we believed it our duty to support the government in a war measure for the national advantage find now that this government is not so concerned in war measures for national advantage as it is in election measures for party advantage."

One of the strongest speeches in favor of conscription was made by Mr. Frank Carvell, a New Brunswick Liberal, whose name was suggested as member of a Union Government. "I am amazed at the Prime Minister of Canada," he said. "I simply cannot get around it. If it were some other member on the opposite side of the House I should not have been surprised, but that a man who knows what justice is, that a man of his education and training, should try to force a measure of this kind through in one day—it simply amazes me."

Mr. A. D. Bruce, of Unionville, is a citizen of the best type. He was candidate for East York at the last Provincial election, and his platform utterances were those of a thoughtful and sincere man. He was a supporter of a Coalition or National Government. In a letter to the Star, he says that the Franchise bill has destroyed Sir Robert Borden's last chance of being supported as leader of such a government by anyone who accepts even the rudimentary principles of Liberalism. He says that the supreme issue before the nation is the establishment of justice. As a nation we are in this war to prevent Germany from treating her solemn agreements as a "scrap of paper"; are we, in prosecuting our fight for the maintenance of treaty obligations, to treat as scraps of paper our national agreements?"

Mr. Bruce refers to the Dutch Mennonites, many of whom live in his neighborhood. Their farefathers left Germany to escape oppression. So firmly did they become attached to Britsh freedom that they left the United States with the U.E. Loyalists and came to Canada. They were splendid farmers, and did much to create the agricultural prosperity of the County of York and the Province of Ontario. Now they are to be branded as disloyal and deprived of citizenship. They feel the injustice keenly. Fortunately they are more patriotic than the politicians at Ottawa and they will continue to serve their country by their industry and public spirit. But that does not excuse the tricksters who deprive them of a voice in this election.

In the Britsh House of Commons a resolution for the disfranchisement of conscientious objectors was defeated by 141 to 71. Lord Hugh Cecil, who is an eminent Churchman as well as a statesman, said that he was entirely out of sympathy with conscientious objectors; but he could not descend to the wickedness of forcing people to do what they thought was wrong, or of punishing them because they refused to do what they thought was wrong. This is the view of a high-minded man.—Toronto Star.

The Sunday School yesterday had an increase of twenty per cent. over the previous Sunday, we are looking for a similar increase next Sunday, so that by "Rally Day," on Sept. 30th, we will have a record attendance. We want everyone in the church to be a booster for the Sunday School. On monday afternoon at 4.15 the Willing Workers will hold their regular meeting.

Monday evening at 8 p.m. there will be a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday School. It is hoped that all will endeavor to be present.

Tuesday afternoon at 3 p.m. the Women's Missionary Society will hold their regular monthly meeting. It is urged that this be made a rally meeting for the work of the coming year and that all the women of the congregation have a share in this important branch of the church's activity. Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. the Young Ladies' Mission Band will hold a special sewing meeting in the School room. It is important that all members be present at this meeting. Don't forget to be present Wednesday evening 8 p.m. at the mid-week prayer meeting. Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 the ladies of the Red Cross Society will meet in the School room to receive all completed work, and give out a further supply. All the ladies of the congregation should make it a practice to assist in this special work.

Next Sunday morning our Pastor will speak on "Food Conservation." No doubt every seat will be occupied to hear this most important question presented.

The Ladies Bible Class which meet in the church every Sunday at 3 p.m., extend a cordial invitation to the ladies of the congregation to join their class. Next Sunday all members are earnestly requested to be present, and it is hoped that each member will try and secure one new member.

Everybody is invited to take a practical interest in the departmental work of the church and assist in building up the membership of the various organizations.

SPECIAL FAIR EXHIBITS

DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY COMPANY.

The Manager of the Separator Department of the De Laval Company, has the following kind words to say about advertising and publicity, in the September number of the De Laval Monthly:

"While the success of the De Laval Company is based on the efficiency of the De Laval Cream Separator, the policy of publicity is the medium that turns this efficiency into actual value by enlightening the prospective buyer as to the merits of the machine and creating a demand for a separator of such efficiency as the De Laval. There are few concerns of any consequence but that advertise—generally through various publications most likely to reach the prospective buyer."

This statement from one who has been actively engaged in a position that enables him to give a practical opinion, ought to carry the weight of experience with it. Consistent with its truths, the De Laval Company put up a special exhibit at the Peterborough Fair which must have resulted in maintaining the phenomenal sales record of the company. Their booth was opposite the main building, and was one of the leading exhibits which attracted the attention of farmers.

Several types of Alpha Gasoline Engines were shown, and two ensilage cutters were demonstrated in practical operation. These formed the principal features of the exhibit, and the interesting demonstrations drew large crowds of people interested in large and small machines of the types represented. Mr. Chas. Cook, of the Silo Department, was in charge.

Many business houses are trying to work out plans for helping dealers do more business at a smaller selling cost and we believe that we are justified in making the statement that no concern has tried to do more or developed this service efficiency oped this service to a higher efficiency than the De Laval Company.

SEWING MACHINE EXHIBIT.

The sewing machine exhibit was up. Gunter gave practical demonstrations. agents for the "White" machine, secured the services of Miss Gunther, a demonstrator, from the factory. Miss Gunther gave pratetical demonstrations in sewing that proved to be of great interest to the many ladies who frequent the upstairs section of the building.

THE CREESSMAN CO.'S EXHIBITS.

Just inside the west entrance was the Cressman Co.'s exhibit of Victor Victrolas. They were displayed in all sizes, great and small, from little machines to massive, costly instruments with gold plated trimmings. Many a passer-by was arrested by the rows of glistening mahogany and oak, and his interest was doubled when he listened to the great sound producing qualities of the Victor.

RICHARD HALL & SON.

The main building, of which very little can be said of itself, looked better than at any previous Fair. All the booths were occupied by fine displays. In the position they have occupied for years, many a time to help out the directors of the Fair and encourage them in their efforts to get a better building, the old established firm of Richard Hall & Son made an excellent display of rugs, hangings and high-class furniture, which was a credit to the firm and much admired.

Mr. S. D. Hall and Mr. Ross, who superintended the exhibit, are most enthusiastic of the possibilities of the Peterborough Central Exhibition.

SPECIAL FAIR EXHIBITS

DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY COMPANY.

The Manager of the Separator Department of the De Laval Company, has the following kind words to say about advertising and publicity, in the September number of the De Laval Monthly:

"While the success of the De Laval Company is based on the efficiency of the De Laval Cream Separator, the policy of publicity is the medium that turns this efficiency into actual value by enlightening the prospective buyer as to the merits of the machine and creating a demand for a separator of such efficiency as the De Laval. There are few concerns of any consequence but that advertise—generally through various publications most likely to reach the prospective buyer."

This statement from one who has been actively engaged in a position that enables him to give a practical opinion, ought to carry the weight of experience with it. Consistent with its truths, the De Laval Company put up a special exhibit at the Peterborough Fair which must have resulted in maintaining the phenomenal sales record of the company. Their booth was opposite the main building, and was one of the leading exhibits which attracted the attention of farmers.

Several types of Alpha Gasoline Engines were shown, and two ensilage cutters were demonstrated in practical operation. These formed the principal features of the exhibit, and the interesting demonstrations drew large crowds of people interested in large and small machines of the types represented. Mr. Chas. Cook, of the Silo Department, was in charge.

Many business houses are trying to work out plans for helping dealers do more business at a smaller selling cost and we believe that we are justified in making the statement that no concern has tried to do more or developed this service efficiency oped this service to a higher efficiency than the De Laval Company.

SEWING MACHINE EXHIBIT.

The sewing machine exhibit was up. Gunter gave practical demonstrations for the "White" machine, secured the services of Miss Gunther, a demonstrator, from the factory. Miss Gunther gave practical demonstrations in sewing that proved to be of great interest to the many ladies who frequent the upstairs section of the building.

THE CREESSMAN CO.'S EXHIBITS.

Just inside the west entrance was the Cressman Co.'s exhibit of Victor Victrolas. They were displayed in all sizes, great and small, from little machines to massive, costly instruments with gold plated trimmings. Many a passer-by was arrested by the rows of glistening mahogany and oak, and his interest was doubled when he listened to the great sound producing qualities of the Victor.

RICHARD HALL & SON.

The main building, of which very little can be said of itself, looked better than at any previous Fair. All the booths were occupied by fine displays. In the position they have occupied for years, many a time to help out the directors of the Fair and encourage them in their efforts to get a better building, the old established firm of Richard Hall & Son made an excellent display of rugs, hangings and high-class furniture, which was a credit to the firm and much admired.

Mr. S. D. Hall and Mr. Ross, who superintended the exhibit, are most enthusiastic of the possibilities of the Peterborough Central Exhibition.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TRACK RECORD IS BROKEN AT EXHIBITION

Herman Wenger Steps a Mile in 2.12¼ in the Last Heat of the Free-For-All on Saturday.

A GREAT PERFORMANCE

There was only one race on the cards in the Saturday afternoon programme at the Exhibition grounds, but it was worth the price of admission, inasmuch as it marked a new track record. Exhibition visitors had the opportunity of seeing the fastest mile ever negotiated in a harness horse race on the local track, when Herman Wenger, the clean gaited speed artist owned by Elmhirst, of Keene, stepped the last heat of the free-for-all in 2.12 1-4, lowering the record which has stood for a number of years, by one second and a quarter.

There were three starters in the free-for-all, Herman Wenger, the winner, Dr. Hal, the Orangeville horse which won the 2.18 race on Friday, and the famous old campaigner, Furioso. Herman Wenger went out in front in the first heat and was never headed, Furioso taking second place and Dr. Hal third. In the second heat Dr. Hal made the running and was only beaten out by an eyelash at the wire. Herman Wenger delayed his drive almost too long and just caught the Orangeville horse in the last yard. The crowd did not know which had won until Dr. Sinclair announced the winner.

There was considerable difficulty in getting the horses away for the third heat. The drivers were "out for blood" and Dr. Sinclair had to threaten fines for all hands in order to get them down to business. When they did get away Herman Wenger proceeded to show what he could do. He opened out a lead at once and in the second half drew away from his rivals at every step, his speed going down the back stretch amazing the crowd. He won as he pleased in record time. The summary:

Free-For-All.

Dr. Hal, Overland, Orangeville	3	2	2

TORONTOS WIN THE INTERNATIONAL PENNANT WON TWICE SATURDAY

ROCHESTER, Sept. 16.—"We've bagged the flag. Permit us to thank you for your kind expression of good wishes contained in telegram received at the ball park here to-day. Our efforts on behalf of the best baseball town in the International or any other league outside the majors have been rewarded." The foregoing telegram was despatched to Mayor Church of Toronto immediately after the Leafs had beaten Rochester twice on Saturday afternoon. The scores were 1 to 0 and 5 to 1, and placed the Leafs beyond the reach of their last remaining rival, Providence. Thus was the pennant won on the last day of the Leafs' passing season.

The victory of 1917 adds another to the championships which have been won in cycles of five years, commencing in 1902. Arthur Irwin's great team of 1907 finished second to Syracuse, and beat the latter for the Steinert Cup. The latter was contested beween the pennant winners and runners-up every season in the old Eastern League. The trophy has been in Toronto for twenty years without being played for, and is now in possession of President McCaffery of the Leafs.

Greatest Race "Ever".

The race in the International is without a parallel in the annals of baseball. Four teams were in the running up to within less than one week of the finish of the season. One was eliminated Thursday, another on Friday and the third yesterday. Newark, Baltimore, and Providence battled the victorious Lajoies to the last ditch. The campaign in the American Association this season has also been close but it embraced three teams only, and the contention was neither as keen nor as protracted as in the International.

Before Saturday's games here the situation was most acute. Toronto had two games to play, while the Grays had three at Newark. The Leafs could have broken even and still won the pennant, provided Providence lost one of its three games to the Bruins. In order to make the championship an absolute certainty the Lajoies simply had to win both of Saturday's games. Providence beat Newark again, and still had two Sunday games in which to snatch the flag from the Leafs. Of the seven consecutive games scheduled between the Grays and Bears the former had won all five played up to Saturday night. Had Rochester won one of Saturday's games from Toronto and Grays cleaned up the series with the Bears the Leafs would have been beaten for the flag by one point.

Leafs in Fighting Mood.

Under those conditions it can readily be imagined that Lajoie's men went into the two games Saturday determined to win. Every man was prepared to go to any length permitted by the rules to capture the two games. Lajoie had imbued the men with his own indomitable spirit. They fought every inch and every minute.

Rochester succeeded in getting one run in eighteen innings. That is sufficient indication of how the Leafs battled the Hustlers. On the other hand, the local team, although winning could mean little to them, fought back doggedly, and made the new champions earn everything they got. That's baseball.

The Standing.

New York, Sept. 16.—E. G. Barrow, President of the International League, to-night made public the final official standings of the club in the league for the 1917 season, which ended to-day, and declared Toronto winner of the pennant after a close race between that team and the Providence. Baltimore and Newark teams. Toronto clinched the premier honours by taking both games of a double-header from Rochester Saturday:

The Council Will Have to Appoint Fire Chief

Mr. George Grange Has Declined to Accept the Position—Manufacturers Are Interested

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council will meet this evening to consider the question of appointing a successor to ex-Fire Chief Howard. Mr. George Grange, who was tendered the position a few days ago has declined to accept the offer. It may be that the Committee will recommend the appointment of an outsider who would not only be qualified to carry out the wishes of the Council, but also the Canadian Fire Underwriters, who are a very important factor in the administration of fire departments throughout the country. Ability to direct men in the handling of hose at a fire is not the sole qualification of a fire chief. A good man should be conversant with all the rules and regulations pertaining to fire prevention and also be in a position to discuss such matters intelligently with local manufacturers and others whenever necessary. It is generally conceded by those who are in a position to know that the Council will be obliged to seek an outsider as experience on the Peterborough Fire Department would hardly be considered sufficient to qualify a man to hold the position of chief of the department. The greater percentage of local fires are chimney and grass fires with a few minor conflagrations that any ordinary volunteer brigade could handle.

The Committee will likely decide to advertise for a suitable man and make their selection from the list of applicants. As one manufacturer pointed out to-day the City Council should bear in mind that the manufacturers as a body are concerned in this matter and will not be inclined to favour the appointment of anybody but a thoroughly competent man.

EXHIBITION NOTES

He made his first exhibit at the Peterborough Exhibition when he was nineteen and hasn't missed one of them during the long span of his 82nd year. This is Mr. A. R. Kidd's record, and he keeps on winning in the poultry, vegetable and other classes to show that he hasn't gone back.

Mr. E. F. Mason bought the fine collection of vegetables shown by Mr. T. O. Arnott and transferred them to his store window where they are on display to-day. Mr. Arnott is one of the leading market gardeners in this district and a prominent exhibitor at the fair. Mr. Mason was so attracted by the Arnott display of vegetables that he bought up the entire collection. He also took Mrs. Arnott's prize-winning asters. These she had grown from seed she had raised. The quality of her bloom was particularly commended.

C. H. Curtis took home $102 in prize money. The Warkworth chicken fancier has been coming to the Peterborough fair for years, and is a favourite among the regulars.

Directors of the Ottawa Exhibition practically begged Wm. Roberts and Sons to show their Percherons at the Central Exhibition this year. After winning at Toronto, the local men felt they had taken the biggest prize the country had to offer. Their appearance at the Peterborough "Ex" was greatly appreciated by every lover of blue ribbon heavies.

Mr. Chas. W. Clee, who judged the garden vegetable class wrote on the official returns book—"These garden exhibits were certainly very good indeed—a big improvement on previous years." Mr. Clee is a florist engaged with Jordan Brothers without whose exhibit the flower display would have been decidedly light.

Mr. Brownscombe's assistants in the ticket offices were: Messrs. Webber Turner, Chas. Elliott, D. L. Canniff, A. Catchpole, J. Pogue and T. W. Robinson.

Howard, the high-wire performer, comes from Norfolk, Virginia. He said this, his first wire-walking, was said his first wire-walking was when as a boy he essayed to walk his mother's clothes line. He was greatly impressed by the War Veterans' exhibit, with which he was confident he could make a bunch of money doing some of the fairs in the United States.

"We have a few wounded men here and there," Mr. Howard stated, "but one has to come to Canada to realize the effects of the war on the young men. I suppose we will soon have a bunch of our own using canes. I know the trench exhibition would draw crowds everywhere down home."

"We sold five pianos, several Victrolas and Sonora phonographs, and had many enquiries that should bear fruit," said Mr. B. H. Brittain, of Heintzman Hall(in referring to his booth at the fair. "I will guarantee to the directors to take a place in any new building they can provide, and I'm sure the other merchants would be just as eager to take locations."

Claims Wife Went Down With The Lusitania

Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

KITCHENER, Ont., Sept. 17.—Robert King pleaded guilty before Judge Reade this morning of having seduced Margaret Gingerich, and in his defence asked to settle the matter by marrying the girl, which looked plausible to the court until Inspector Miller, of the Children's Aid Society, whose ward the girl is in, exploded a bomb shell by telling the court that King appeared in the Galt police court in 1910 on a charge of wife desertion and there was no evidence to prove that his wife was not alive. Defence in reply stated that Mrs. King number one had taken passage for Scotland on the ill-fated Lusitania in May, 1915, and has not been heard of since that time. Adjournment was made until Saturday to allow the defence to enquire of the Cunard Line if Mrs. King booked a passage, and if possible to say whether or not she was a survivor.

PROCEEDING CAUTIOUSLY WITH BRIDGE

Canadian Press Despatch:

QUEBEC, Sept. 17.—The second attempt to complete the great cantilever bridge near Quebec was begun this morning when the centre span was towed from Sillery Cove, where it had been constructed on pontoons, to the position immediately underneath the spot in the main structure it was intended to occupy. The span was manoeuvred into mid stream from the shore position by six tugs, with the well known wrecking steamer, the Lord Strathcona, in attendance in case extra help was needed. The trip from the shore to mid-stream was apparently managed perfectly and after getting the span headed for the bridge site, it was allowed to drift slowly down the river on the tide, the tugs working hard to keep its head in the right direction. From observation on the shore it appeared that the span was put in place ready for hoisting, with unerring judgment by the tug commanders. The trip from the Cove to the bridge took one and a quarter hours. No time was lost by the bridge help who had floated down on the span in connecting up the supports with huge hoisting chains attached to eight sixteen jacks on the floor of the bridge 50 feet above.

Engineers and workmen raising the centre span are proceeding very cautiously this time. At 12.30 the span had been raised only eight of the one hundred and fifty feet. The Engineer then said: "The easiest work is over. The rest will grow increasingly difficult from now until the finish.

ORATORIO CHORUSES SUNG AT ST. JOHN'S

Harvest Thanksgiving Services Were Continued Yesterday With Eloquent Sermons by Rev. Walter Archbold.

A LARGE CHOIR

The Harvest Thanksgiving services at St. John's were continued yesterday. The Rev. Walter Archbold, D. D., preached eloquent and impressive sermons morning and evening; also giving a helpful address to the scholars and staff of the Sunday School in the church at 3.15. Mr. Archbold also made stirring appeals to the congregation to service in Red Cross work, loyal support of the movement for conservation of food, for which pledge cards are now being distributed and to do all possible for the gallant men now overseas, who were actually under conditions we could not realise. The church Woman's Association propose again to send parcels to St. John's overseas men and ask that the latest addresses of the men be sent at once to Mrs. Sangster, the Secretary, 549 Homewood Ave., telephone 916.

The music throughout the festival has been good. Like an ancient river, which overflowed its banks at harvest, St. John's choristers overflowed the seating capacity yesterday, for in addition to new members, choristers who had been away for the summer were on hand and it was a great pleasure to welcome back Mr. Morphet and Mr. Hutchinson after serious illness. Mr. Devey was swift to utilise the magnificent combination of voices and the following choral compositions were finally rendered.

Te Deum in E flat—W. H. Woodward.

Solo passages by Miss Quartermaine and Mr. Tom Ward.

Magnificat by Bishop Toser.

"The Marvellous Work"—Chorus from Haydn's "Creation."

Solo Obligato by Mrs. W. G. Perks

The final number being that greatest of all choruses, "Hallelujah," from Handel's "Messiah."

A letter from Mr. W. F. Johnston, Rector's Warden, expressing hearty appreciation of the faithful work of the choir by himself and Dr. Holloway, People's Warden, was read to the choir after the morning service.

'On Dangerous Ground" At The Empire

A Startling and Vivid Drama of the French and German Secret Service

A thrilling and unusual story, based on a phase of the European war, is "On Dangerous Grounds," which is at the Empire Theatre to-night. Carlyle Blackwell and Gail Kane are the stars in this feature. It is a World Picture Brady-Made.

In order to escape the German spies it is necessary in "On Dangerous Ground" for the heroine to pass herself off as the wife of the hero. Up to the time that she does this the heroine has never before seen the hero. It is easy to imagine some of the complications which arise from this unusual situation. It is because "On Dangerous Ground" is so utterly different from the ordinary run of pictures that it is so exceptionally entertaining and interesting.

Every lover of thrilling and entertaining photoplays should embrace the opportunity of seeing it at the Empire Theatre to-night and to-morrow.

The Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I have the honour to request that through the medium of your paper certain facts as to the way law is administered in Peterborough be brought to light. I was incarcerated four nights and three days in the common jail in Peterborough, then let out, there being no case. The reason given me was insanity. I have asked Chief Thompson to give me the name or names of the person or persons who swore that I was insane and dangerous to be at large. This he has refused to do. I ask him now, through your paper, to give the names or name. I am not insane or never was insane but the victim of a conspiracy. One of the parties to this conspiracy caused the loss of my High school and Public school certificates. As a matter of fact I enlisted with the 230th Forestry Batt., formerly the French Canadian Voltigeurs at Brockville, in March, and have seen six months of service now overseas. In the orderly room my category is A2, which is the highest for medical fitness. If I am insane or have been insane, it is strange that I am an A2 man and am now on draft for France, where I expect to be this week. I am not so insane as to serve my country, although the man whom I blame, together with his associate in wickedness, is not serving his country. Catch him; he prefers to break up a man's home. I believe, perhaps, I am mistaken, that the very man who broke up my home, together with another person, were at the bottom of my incarceration, and the police helped him out in getting me for a few days out of the way. I cannot prove this, but this is my theory. I know he tried another time to put me under arrest, but failed. This man's sister is well known, on account of the way she met her death some time ago, and his wife left him shortly after my arrest, returning to Scotland. I ask the Chief and Magistrate to furnish name or names.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

COURSE OF THE MARKET.

While there has been on further striking decline in the general average of stock prices during the week, this statement would not hold good when applied to particular issues. Pronounced weakness developed from time to time in such standard investment issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric, Louisville and Nashville, Norfolk and Western, as well as some of the leading traction and gas stocks. The explanation was to be found partly in the Russian news, but the underlying cause was the impendency of the new and drastic war taxes upon the income of corporations and the feeling that the liquid position many of the soundest of the country's leading corporations may be impaired by the necessity of paying out large sums of cash to the Government. This prospect is already influencing the dividend policies of managements in general, and until the investment community has had time to analyse the individual status of various corporations in the light of the new taxes and current profits unusual caution in the matter of fresh commitments, if not continued apprehension, is likely to prevail. In its present illogical frame of mind the larger the business and profits of a corporation the more Wall Street fears for its status under the new law. The basis of this fear, of course, lies in the increasingly large taxes as the net income of a corporation mounts. There is little doubt that this has been a sound consideration in the past few weeks ith respect to many standard issues which had discounted large equities to be realized from their current operations without considering the new war taxes, but in many instances there is plentiful evidence to indicate that the weight of this new factor is being over-estimated. In another important particular liquidation has accomplished much good; it has further reduced the floating supply of stocks and has strengthened the liquid position of the New York banks. The conservative attitude of banking interests is likely to continue until the next Government loan is out of the way. Upon them depends the success of this enormous undertaking, and it is a vital question with them as to just how far the banking institutions must stand behind the issue with their resources. On the other hand, none better than these institutions appreciate the desirability of a firm stock market to accomplish the marketing of the new Government loan, and it may be that banks may also offer greater encouragement to those who would help to raise prices.

cant fact is that representatives of some of the Entente Allies are again actively negotiating on their own behalf, indicating the suspension for the time at least of efforts to get steel from them through the War Industries Board at the prices fixed later for the Washington Government. The Attorney-General has given an opinion that manufacturer members of the Advisory Committee may continue their activities at Washington, by declaring their interests in each Government contract that may be taken by their company. The steel committee has not resumed its function, however, as the opinion is considered vague on some points and machinery is lacking for complying with the conditions imposed.

"There is a steady run of Government buying while the major war programme is being worked out: Government purchases in fact make up the bulk of current business. Individual consumers, in the general belief that the market will continue to decline, are doing no buying that can be put off.

"By the latest survey of Army and Navy needs, the mills will be called on to supply the Government far more shell steel than has been talked of in the great prominence given to ship plates. It developed also that some large shipments on shell steel contracts are yet to be made to Great Britain, and that that country will buy a considerable additional amount of such steel from the United States."

"Large requirements of fabricated steel for American operation in France are indicated by the placing of 100 steel buildings this week, with the Blaw Construction Co., Pittsburg, calling for 11,000 tons. Thirty-two other buildings also for Blaw are pending. There is in addition $5,000,000 worth of steel buildings for the new gun-making plant of private manufacturers in this country."

While the export embargo and Government price-fixing have created a factor of uncertainty, the import of the latest summary of business conditions made by the Federal Reserve Board characterises these conditions in the various districts, as being fair to highly satisfactory.

SPECIAL FAIR EXHIBITS

DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY COMPANY.

The Manager of the Separator Department of the De Laval Company, has the following kind words to say about advertising and publicity, in the September number of the De Laval Monthly:

"While the success of the De Laval Company is based on the efficiency of the De Laval Cream Separator, the policy of publicity is the medium that turns this efficiency into actual value by enlightening the prospective buyer as to the merits of the machine and creating a demand for a separator of such efficiency as the De Laval. There are few concerns of any consequence but that advertise—generally through various publications most likely to reach the prospective buyer."

This statement from one who has been actively engaged in a position that enables him to give a practical opinion, ought to carry the weight of experience with it. Consistent with its truths, the De Laval Company put up a special exhibit at the Peterborough Fair which must have resulted in maintaining the phenomenal sales record of the company. Their booth was opposite the main building, and was one of the leading exhibits which attracted the attention of farmers.

Several types of Alpha Gasoline Engines were shown, and two ensilage cutters were demonstrated in practical operation. These formed the principal features of the exhibit, and the interesting demonstrations drew large crowds of people interested in large and small machines of the types represented. Mr. Chas. Cook, of the Silo Department, was in charge.

Many business houses are trying to work out plans for helping dealers do more business at a smaller selling cost and we believe that we are justified in making the statement that no concern has tried to do more or developed this service efficiency ded this service to a higher efficiency than the De Laval Company.

SEWING MACHINE EXHIBIT.

The sewing machine exhibit was up-Gunter gave practical demonstrations for the "White" machine, secured the services of Miss Gunther, a demonstrator, from the factory. Miss Gunther gave pratcical demonstrations in sewing that proved to be of great interest to the many ladies who frequent the upstairs section of the building.

THE CRESSMAN CO.'S EXHIBITS.

Just inside the west entrance was the Cressman Co.'s exhibit of Victor Victrolas. They were displayed in all sizes, great and small, from little machines to massive, costly instruments with gold plated trimmings. Many a passer-by was arrested by the rows of glistening mahogany and oak, and his interest was doubled when he listened to the great sound producing qualities of the Victor.

RICHARD HALL & SON.

The main building, of which very little can be said of itself, looked better than at any previous Fair. All the booths were occupied by fine displays. In the position they have occupied for years, many a time to help out the directors of the Fair and encourage them in their efforts to get a better building, the old established firm of Richard Hall & Son made an excellent display of rugs, hangings and high-class furniture, which was a credit to the firm and much admired.

Mr. S. D. Hall and Mr. Ross, who superintended the exhibit, are most enthusiastic of the possibilities of the Peterborough Central Exhibition.

Labour Delegates Urged To Obey The Military Service Act

Many Important Questions to Be Discussed at Thirty-third Annual Trades' and Labour Congress—Executive Strongly Condemns the War Time Election Act.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—The Executive Council of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada recommends to the delegates that labour obey the Military Service law. "While the Congress," states the report, "cannot stultify itself to the degree of either withdrawing or contradicting this year its firm and carefully thought out views on the question of conscription as embodied in the resolutions of 1915 and 1916, still, under our representative form of Government, it is not deemed either right, patriotic or in the interests of the Dominion or of the labour classes, to say aught that might prevent the powers that be from obtaining all the results that they anticipate from the enforcement of such law."

When the thirty-third annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was convened by President J. C. Watters in St. Patrick's Hall this morning, there were well over 250 delegates present. Sir Robert Borden was among those who welcomed the delegates at the opening ceremonies. The Executive Council's report placed before the delegates to-day, is likely to be the most important document before the convention. According to the nature of resolutions sent in most of them are covered in the report. The big battles will likely be over the officers' reports and the recommendations therein.

Covers Much Ground.

The report contains a declaration on the war, on conscription, the purchase of the C. N. R., severely criticizes the new Franchise Act for many of its provisions, recommends the forming of a Labour Party in Canada on British Independent Labour party lines, urges the government to pass legislation to prevent injunctions being used against peaceful picketing, reviews the activities of the Executive Council durint the year, and urges the Government to pass legislation providing pensions for widows, and deserted wives, as well as old age pensions.

The report has been referred to a special "Committee on Officers' Reports," and this committee will give an opinion on every item. The most immortant sections of the report, which is being discussed by the delegates to-day, are as follows:

Prepared to Give Aid.

While we are prepared to do all in our power to aid the allies, and there by our own Canadian Dominion, in the triumph that is anticipated by all, we do not wish to lose sight of the fact that in the very near future new conditions will arise and that we must prepare to face them. We need to redouble our vigilance and to strengthen, by every means possible, our organization, to cement more closely together the scattered elements of the Labour world, especially in Canada, and to be watchful lest the enthusiasm of the battle now raging should drag us into situations that would be adverse to our interests when the aftermath of the war shall come.

Time for a "Show-Down"

"We are of the opinion that the time has come for a clear-cut pronouncement of the exact purposes for which the war is being waged and the exact terms on which peace can be established. Let it be made clear to the German people that they themselves are the masters of the situation, that they themselves have the power to stop the war and establish permanent peace by overthrowing their own and the world's enemy. Let it be made clear that they have nothing to fear from any concerted action to occupy their territory, to destroy their economic life, or to arrest their development after they have destroyed their own military machine with their autocracy. Let no obstacle be placed in the way of reaching the German people through the medium of a Stockholm conference, or otherwise, for the purpose of conveying to them our intentions and on what basis permanent peace is likely to be established. Let there be no obstacle placed in the way of representatives of the working classes of each of the belligerent nations meeting in conference to discuss how the interests of a suffering humanity can best be conserved by terminating the war and laying the foundation for a league of nations to insure the world's peace.

Indepedent Labour Party.

"We are of the opinion that the time has arrived when the workers of Canada should follow British precedent and organize a Labour Party upon such a basis that trade unionists, socialists, fabiens, co-operctors and farmers can unite to promote legislation in the best interests of the wealth producers of the nation.

We, therefore, strongly recommend the organization of an Independent Labour Party for Canada upon the same lines as the British Labour Party has been organized and giving recognition to organizations having similar objects as those affiliated with the British Labour Party. With a view to giving effect to this recommendation we would strongly urge that the dominating working class political organization in each Province call a conference of the respective organizations entitled to partnership in such a Labour Party and proceed to co-operate for political action."

Against Elections Act.

"We strenuously protest against this legislation as being subversive of those ideals of democracy to which the workers of this country are committed. We see in the passing of such legislation the danger of establishing in Canada a military caste, enjoying privileges not accorded the civilian citizen. Nothing could tend more to the dividing of the nation than placing the control of the nation's affairs in the hands of those whose aspirations are to enforce their decrees by the power of military authority, which has always been the bulwark of autocracy. Already the evidences of military interference with the rights granted to citizens under the civil laws have been made manifest in the cities of Toronto, Winnipeg, Halifax and Sydney. We regard the contract made with naturalized citizens of alien enemy birth, who are disfranchised under this Act, as being as sacred as the treaty obligations which guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium, and the action of the Government is as repugnant to a liberty-loving people as Germany's disregard of its obligations under the treaty with other nations. We also regard it as a serious reflection upon the honour of the nation that the Government should violate its agreement with those citizens of certain religious convictions who were invited to Canada from other countries and given their full rights as citizens under the definite understanding that they could not serve the nation in any military capacity."

"Recognizing the fact that these religious convictions were valid in a demand for exemption from military service the Government committed itself to the conviction that military service was not a fundamental responsibility of the citizen in the enjoyment of the rights of citizenship. We, therefore, condemn those provisions of the Act which deprive those citizens of those rights which were accorded to them when they left their native lands and came to Canada to apply themselves industriously to the development of its natural resources and the building up of the nation's material wealth.

"This Congress has consistently demanded the enfranchisement of women, with equal rights with men in the enjoyment of citizenship, and for years the voice of labour in favour of such legislation was the voice of one crying in the wilderness, for a recognition of the rights of the women of the nation. We, therefore, condemn, as inadequate to meet the demands of labour, the enfranchisement of a section of the female population and the disregard of the rights demand for exemption from military in the new War Time Elections Act. We are in full accord with legislation designed to enfranchise the wives, mothers, sisters, and daughters of the Canadian and Imperial Expeditionary Forces and those attached to the Navy, but such enfranchisement should be extended to the other women of the nation."

Principle is Favoured.

"A bill providing for the expropriation of the assets of the Canadian Northern Railway Company has been passed by the Government and at the time of preparing this report was before the Senate for consideration. We regard the provisions of this bill as a clear recognition of the principle of the government ownership and operation of railways, but regret that the government has stipulated conditions of expropriation that cannot command our endoration.

"We, therefore prefer to recommend to this Congress that while we strongly urge the nationalization of the railways of Canada at the earliest possible moment such nationalization should be brought about upon such conditions as to inspire confidence in the government whose responsibility it is to safeguard in every particular the economic interests of the nation' citizens. It is our opinion that all the railways of Canada should be nationalized, but having regard for war conditions and the state of the financial markets of the world, we would accept for the present the adoption of the recommendations of Sir Henry Drayton that not only the C.N.R. but the G.T.R. and G.T.P. be taken over by the government.

Soldiers' Pensions and Allowances.

We regard the present pensions and allowances granted by the government as entirely inadequate to guarantee that economic security which the returned soldier and his dependents, and the dependents of those who have been killed overseas, are justly entitled to and therefore believe that the recommendations of organized labour should have regard for the real needs of those whom such legislation is designed to benefit.

Mothers' and Old Age Pensions.

"Your Executive Council reiterate their recommendation that the government be urged to establish a fund for the pensioning of widows and deserted wives, and also for the pensioning of the aged in the Dominion. We regard it as our responsibility to remember those who suffer by reason of the accidents of industry as well as the accidents of war and feel that the government should enact such legislation at the earliest possible moment.

ARGENTINE EXPECTS A FORMAL EXPLANATION FROM GERMANY

German Port Will Be Regarded as Vacant Until Germany Has Made a Disavowal of the Luxburg Affair—Believed Will Break With Germany.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 18.—Argentine expects Germany to forward an explanation of the Luxburg incident. Until such a disavowal is received through the ordinary channels of diplomaitc intercourse the German ministerial post here will be considered vacant. Offifficials, in thus indicating Argentine's view-point to-day, intimated that such formal apology from Germany might satisfactorily close the incident. Not all of the public to-day is accepting such a view, however. Numerous meetings are being held urging that Argentine formally break relations with Germany. The strongest pressure is being brought to bear on President Irigoyan to this end.

Jersey Arsenal Seized; Owner Held As Hostile Alien

SMALL CANNON AMONG ARMS FOUND ON A FARM NEAR CAMDEN.

Camden, N. J. — As the result of a raid on a farm adjoining the local municipal waterworks at Delair Station, the office of Prosecutor Kraft resembles a small sized arsenal. The haul includes a cannon, with a three-inch bore; thirteen daggers, fourteen German Uhlan lances, three bayonets, thirteen swords, nine automatic pistols, three flasks of powder, one of the most powerful telescopes made, and numerous other warfare accessories.

These were all obtained on the farm of Albert Von Lilidenhal, who said he was an expert mechanic. Prosecutor Kraft says that the prisoner, who is locked up in the jail here, will have to explain his frequent trips to prominent German places in Philadelphia.

Von Lilidenhal is being held by order of the federal authorities as a hostile alien. The arrest was made following a complaint by Robert Dwyer, who with his mother, farms the Lilidenhal place.

When Lilidenhal was taken into custody he feigned insanity, and Dr. Frank O. Stem, County Physician, after examining him said that the man was sane. The prisoner is little known hereabouts. He posed as a man of means, did not work, but claimed to be an expert machinist.

ITALIANS NATIONAL FIGHTERS.

(Boston News Bureau.)

The Italian has established himself as a national fighter, in a mechanical and bloody war. The world had too much thought of him as picturesque peasant, troubadour, gondolier, barber or even bandit. It had overlooked the recent industrial renaissance of his country, and its new sense of national solidity and aspiration. The tireless ditchdigger here has en masse proved the superlative trench digger and mountain burrower there.

And not least of his attainments has been an outstanding skill in two preeminent items of modern war—the devising of superior artillery and aircraft. He has had to achieve these largely because of the mountains; but it was in him to do it.

The bootleg of Europe may yet have much to do with the kicking out of Hohenzollern as well as Hapsburg.

WHEN THE KIDNEYS FAIL

Brockville, Ont., September 18. — If you have headaches, backaches and rheumatic pains you have reason to suspect the kidneys. Pain is caused by poisons in the blood, and poisons only remain in the blood when the kidneys are defective and fail to do their work.

This Brockville lady has reported her case because she believes that a great many people are suffering as she did without knowing the cause or cure.

Mrs. Frank Noyes, 9 Stuart Street, Brockville, Ont., writes: "For years I was afflicted with kidney complaint. I became very nervous, was easily worried and had frequent headaches, and neuralgic pains, especially through the back. I had indigestion, poor circulation of the blood and often was bothered with weak spells. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and had only taken two boxes when I felt greatly relieved. I continued the treatment however until I was completely cured. In all I took about ten boxes, and have not been troubled in this way since. I highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I think also that the Plasters and the Ointment can't be equalled."

Mr. John May, Walkerton, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with rheumatism in my legs and I became so lame that I could scarcely get around. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended to me, and so I commenced using them. After I had been taking them for a while I as delighted to find that my rheumatism had left me, and to-day I am as sound as a bell. I have made use of Dr. Chase's medicines in many ways for the last forty years, and cannot speak too well of their good qualities."

ITALIAN TRENCHES WRIGGLING FORWARD

Persistent Advance in Picturesque Carso Country Seen by an Englishman—In Extraordinary Country

An English correspondent cables from Udine Pais in the Alps as follows: It would be impossible for anybody who has not seen it for himself to imagine the difficulties under which the Italian campaign is raging, and the meaning of the success which has already been gained by the brave army of our ally. For some reason or another, probably because it is more romantic, the idea of warfare on the higher Alps has appealed more to the British mind, and has been more often described and pictured, but it is along the Carso from Gorizia almost to the banks of Trieste that a most gruelling fight is being waged.

In a visit which I made to the trenches there I was accompanied by the general in command and given an opportunity of seeing at close quarters the extraordinary nature of the ground over which the battle rages. Imagine a great block of corrugated mountain without a scrap of vegetation or heather, with innumerable batteries concealed in its folds. Up the bare side of this mountain the Italian soldiers advance, not digging trenches but building screens of stones and sandbags as they go.

Down the mountain bursts the storm of the enemy guns. Yet these trenches are practically constantly moving on. It is an extraordinary sight. The barricade of stones and sandbags winds and wriggles in serpentine folds, pushing itself forward here at one move and there at another.

When your guide points through the opening of the barrier and demolished the line of the moving fence he tells you how they take advantage of one salient to-day and another to-morrow, constantly forcing the enemy backwards. Then the summit of one slope is gained and the enemy is driven down into the valley, but he is generally well protected by the fire of his guns concealed in the backward folds of the mountain.

Why is it that the great battles are being waged especially here? Because the Carso is the fortress which had been prepared for the invasion of Italy. On the other hand it was the last line of defence for the Roman Empire, and when it fell into the hands of the invaders the Empire was lost. In order to reconstitute the Italian barriers it must be gained.

WOMEN IN ALL LINES

But Cartridge Making Proves Very Profitable in England

"Bus" and "tram conductresses" are so common in England nowadays they attract no attention. Post women deliver the mails, gas and electric companies employ women to read the meters, women drive delivery vans, sell papers, run elevators, shine shoes, cut one's hair, take one's ticket, and act as butlers. In the country they have taken up farming, poultry raising and truck gardening. In fact, there seems no field hitherto given exclusively to men except soldiering, in which women are not found working cheerfully and efficiently.

With the opening of the munition factories thousands of girls left domestic service and took their places as munition workers. In one small factory alone 2,500 girls are working in day and night shifts, earning approximately a dollar a day, more than twice the amount paid the average domestic servant. This factory is being enlarged and will have 6,000 girls on its pay roll. The work is easy. Every cartridge before it is sent to the front must be weighed, gauged, inspected for flaws, placed five in a clip ready for the gun, done up in belts, fifty rounds to a belt, sealed in air tight tin boxes which are in turn enclosed in wooden boxes, labelled, directed and shipped to France. The girls very rapidly become very expert in this work. They say they prefer it to the drudgery of house work. The work rooms are large, well lighted and ventilated and every convenience is provided for the girls' comfort.

Hundreds of small boys are also earning good wages in munition work. One of them, a lad of fourteen years, is an expert in clipping up the cartridges he earns $11.50 a week. His father also does munition work and resents his fourteen-year-old son making more money than he does. The boy is merely a machine. He goes through the necessary motions at terrific speed methodically, unconsciously, from eight o'clock in the morning till eight at night with an hour off for lunch and 10 minutes for tea. In this particular factory there has been but one accident. This was caused by a girl who wondered what would happen if she struck a cartridge cap with a steel mould. The result was a bullet through her hand.

Comrades in Service!

In years to come you will recall with Pride the day you signed the Food Service Pledge.

For it is your Dedication to War Service.

Your observance of it will cause you some of the Finer Emotions of Your Life.

You will gradually realize that though your own and your family's self-denial may be small—the mighty Legion of Canadian women pledged to equal service, will mean the difference between Victory and Disaster to our soldiers.

You cannot—you must not desert them.

It is not that they want more white bread, beef, or bacon than you—it is just that these foods are less perishable and so more easily exported than others.

So, until Victory is ours, do these simple things.

When making bread, use one-third oatmeal, corn, barley or rye flour, with the white flour. Or tell your baker to bring some brown bread each day.

Substitute for beef and bacon, such foods as fish, peas, lentils, potatoes, nuts, bananas, etc.

Third, and this is very important—prevent the waste of any food in your home.

Be a Comrade. Dedicate yourself and your family to War Service. Display the window card.

Practical Housekeeping Hints

THE USE OF FATS AS BUTTER SUBSTITUTES

The average Canadian housewife has no conception of the value of fats as food, and as a result much fat is wasted that should be used.

Fats are one of the principal sources of energy. We buy fat in the form of butter and spread it on our bread. We use lard as shortening in bread and pastry, and as a medium in which to fry other foods. The grease which melts out of ham and bacon is sometimes made into gravies; but more often it is thrown away, because the housewife does not realize its value as a food. Beef fat is less appreciated as a food even than lard, and yet, pound for pound, its energy value is as high as butter or lard or any other fat.

When we buy a beefsteak the butcher carefully trims off the fat and throws it into a box under the counter with bones and other waste which goes to the soapmaker. This fat has both food value and a money value. It belongs to you and you should have it. You can render it and use it in cooking.

The fine lumps of sweet beef fat or suet which adhere to the roast are used in roasting to give flavor, but most of the fat melts away and is not served at the table. Beef suet is occasionally used in cooking, but rendered beef fat is rarely used as a table fat in this country, although in Europe it is often eaten on bread in the place of butter. Beef suet has a rather pronounced flavor and a comparatively high melting point. These are probably the reasons why it is not more commonly used as a table fat. Much of the objectionable taste may be readily removed. One household method which may be successfully followed is to mix milk with the suet when it is rendered, using one-half cupful of milk to a pound of suet. When strained and cooled, the flavor of the milk is absorbed by the beef fat and changes the characteristic flavor.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A DESERTED BRIDE

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Edward Warbeck went to Rome to see the Coliseum, the palace of the Caesars, the column of Trajan, the Arch of Titus. He saw all these antiquities and many more, but they were of small importance compared with something else he saw, not an antiquity by any means; on the contrary, very young and tender. It was an Italian girl with a pair of black eyes, a long, thick rope of hair hanging down her back and a figure that rivaled the famous Venus di' Medici's in Florence.

Lita Caracola spoke and understood just enough of English to enable Warbeck to make love to her, which is not saying much, for there may be more love expressed in one look than in a thousand words. Signorina Lita Caracola's father was poor in funds, but rich in blood, for he claimed descent from Marcus Tullius Cicero, who shook Rome with his eloquence. Caracola's principal business was sitting on the Piazza Colonna at a sidewalk cafe drinking liters of Italian wine.

Warbeck was obliged to settle 50,000 lire ($10,000) upon Signorina Caracola before being permitted to marry her, which she divided with her father that he might continue to drink wine on the Piazza Colonna. The rest she kept for an emergency. Warbeck was a stranger to her, and she was taking a matrimonial leap in the dark. Besides this, she was to sail with her husband for a distant country, which was as remote and uncertain to her as it had been four centuries before to Christopher Columbus on setting out on his voyage of discovery.

There was a gay wedding in a side street on the Esquiline hill, where Signor Caracola lived, after which a party of the bride's friends accompanied her to the railway station, where she and her husband took a train for Naples, and the next evening a ship sailed over the beautiful bay of the same name, like a white bird, bearing the happy couple, happy in their love, though little Lita wept at leaving her beloved Italy.

In three days the ship stopped at Gibraltar. The bride was laid up with a headache and kept her stateroom, while the groom went ashore to visit the famous rock. Falling in with a British army officer whom he had met before, he was introduced at the club, lunched, drank several bottles of champagne and fell asleep on a lounge.

The steamer passed out to sea through the strait, and Signora Warbeck was surprised that her husband did not come to their stateroom to see her. Finally she called the room steward and asked him to find Mr. Warbeck and tell him his wife would like to see him. The steward hunted the ship through, but did not find the gentleman. After a diligent search it became evident that he was not aboard.

Signora Warbeck's worst fears that she had entertained before her marriage were realized. An American had married her and deserted her at the first stop made by the ship. She kept her room for the rest of the voyage, holding tight her share of the money that had been settled on her that she might return to Rome the moment she reached New York. After inquiry she learned that a steamer sailed for Italy the day she would arrive in America, and by wireless telegraph she engaged passage for Naples.

When Mr. Warbeck awoke in the Officers' club at Gibraltar and through a window saw the moon peacefully shining down on him he was seized with horror, for he knew that the steamer bearing his bride was well out at sea. No steamer for New York was due for three days, but when it came he boarded it. After passing ten worrying days he reached port, but not his bride. Why should he? Thinking that he had deserted her, she took no pains to discover his American connections. She simply sailed for Italy the same day she arrived in New York.

Warbeck was in agony. To have his beloved bride landed without a protector on a shore foreign to her and no means of tracing her was excruciating. The only comfort he had was the $5,000 she had with her. He cabled to her father to report the misfortune and ask if Lita had communicated with him. Lita had done nothing of the kind.

In a month after her departure the bride turned up in Rome. The matter of her husband's apparent desertion having been explained to Signor Caracola, he sent his daughter back on a steamer sailing the next day, cabling Warbeck of her departure. When the cablegram reached the groom's office he was sailing along the Long Island coast bound for Italy. Thinking his wife might have returned to her home, he had searched the passenger lists of outgoing steamers and found her name.

Signor Caracola's cablegram was repeated by wireless to Warbeck, who sent a wireless message to Gibraltar to stop his wife there. On his arrival he found her, and great was the happiness of this reunited bridal couple. They took the next steamer for America, both having crossed and recrossed the Atlantic since they had been at Gibraltar before.

At Madeira Warbeck proposed to go ashore.

"No, no," said his wife; "I do not wish for you to desert me another time."

The young husband gave a sickly smile. Since then she has never permitted him to leave a train when they travel together.

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy, However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

The Canadian Housewife

holds the key to the situation. Real economy may be practised by the housewife in food purchasing for the home. At very small cost she may obtain the finest cocoa that money can buy — a cocoa unexcelled as a food drink and unrivalled as a flavoring, that adds extra delight to hundreds of dainty desserts.

CANDIED CRANBERRIES

To Be Used For Cake Decorations or "Tutti-Frutti"

For one and a half cups of berries make a thin syrup by boiling together until clear two cups of sugar and two and a half cups of water. When the syrup is cool add the berries and bring very slowly to the boiling point. If the berries are heated too quickly the skins will burst before the syrup soaks into the pulp. As soon as the syrup boils take the dish off the stove and let it stand over night.

Next day drain the syrup from the berries and boil it until it is reduced to about half its original volume. Put the berries into this medium-thick syrup and heat slowly; boil gently for three or four minutes, and then allow to stand for two hours or more. Then boil gently a third time for five minutes. A smaller dish probably will be needed for the third and last boiling.

When thoroughly cold, or, better still, on the following day, drain off the syrup and spread the berries out on a lightly buttered plate or a sheet of clean, waxed or lightly buttered paper until the surface of the berries dries. The berries, if directions have been followed, will candy separately and not into a sticky mass.

To make a delicious ice cream add one-half to three-quarters of a cup of chopped berries to each quart of the cream mixture. They also can be combined with bits of candied orange or lemon peel or other glace fruits to make "tutti-frutti" ice cream. The syrup left over after the berries are candied has a pleasant sweet-acid flavor and fine color, and is excellent in pudding sauce or even when diluted with water for use on pancakes and waffles.

DYSENTERY
DANGEROUS

Dysentry is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. It comes on so suddenly, the pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the action on the system so weakening that its termination often proves fatal.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way, and you wish to check the unnatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during the past 72 years.

Mrs. Albert Fearon, Bryant's Corner, N. B., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for the past ten years, and I would not be without it in the House.

Last fall my little boy, three years old, took very bad with dysentery. After taking 3 or 4 doses of "Dr. Fowler's" he began to improve, and before he had used all the bottle he was entirely cured. I sincerely recommend it to all."

There are many cheap imitations of this sterling remedy on the market. Ask for Dr. Fowler's and see that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE HORSE THAT CORTES RODE

We read last month how America was without horses of any kind until the companions of Columbus arrived, taking their steeds with them, and how the natives feared the animals and their riders, believing man and horse to be one, terrible and divine. Now, in one of the fine new volumes of the Hakluyt Society, comes a life of Cortes, the hero of the astonishing conquest of Mexico, and it tells of the first horse that ever came into the possession of a native Mexican.

It was a fine black horse, ridden by Cortes while on one of his expeditions into the interior. One day, while riding his charger, Cortes pursued a deer for food until the horse became exhausted. The great man, therefore, left it with the natives and hastened on.

To the natives the animal was sacred, and they tried to feed it on food, which they believed their gods to love—roast chickens and flowers! Of course the unfortunate animal died on such a diet. Then a great fear fell on the natives, for what would the terrible Cortes say when he came back and found his horse was dead? To make their peace they carved a rude statute of the horse.

What Cortes did actually say we do not know, but a hundred years Christian priests found the statue of the horse in one of the temples, where the natives were still worshipping it.

The National Anthem

Dr. F. G. Boas, one of London Council's inspectors, reports that a form of the anthem, in Latin and in English, probably existed in the time of James II. and perhaps of Charles II. Its authorship is unknown. The earliest extant form of the anthem with music was published about 1712, the opening line being "God Save our Lord the King." Dr. Boas concludes that there is no original version. The anthem has grown like a folk ballad. Dr. J. E. Borland, L.C.C., musical adviser, says we probably owe the germ idea of the tune to Dr John Bull (1562-1628), the first Gresham Professor of Music.

CANADIAN MUSIC AS VIEWED BY DR. VOGT

Former Head of Mendelssohn Choir Desired to See Big Permanent Orchestra in Toronto

The music-loving citizen of Toronto and of the country generally learned with very great regret that Dr. A. S. Vogt had discontinued his work as conductor of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. During its twenty years of active existence under his baton the choir appeared in seventy-eight concerts, sixty-two of which were given in Massey Music Hall, four in Carnegie Hall, New York, one in Symphony Hall, Boston, six in Elmwood Music Hall, Buffalo, two in Gray's Armory, Cleveland, and three in Orchestra Hall, Chicago. Dr. Vogt was accorded one year's leave of absence in 1912-13 in order to visit the great music centres of Europe preparatory to the proposed but deferred visit of the Mendelssohn Choir to Great Britain and the continent.

Leaders Should Specialize

In withdrawing from choral work, Dr. Vogt was influenced by a firm conviction that the musical life of Canada's larger cities had developed to a point which demanded concentration on the part of some of the city's prominent musicians along special lines of activity, rather than by a weakening of their influence through attention to a number of sometimes conflicting spheres of work. The remarkable growth of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, with the marked expansion of its examinations throughout the Dominion, and the plans adopted by the musical director governing the public recitals of the institution, required, for their proper development Dr. Vogt's undivided attention.

It was his intention to take an active part in a serious movement to interest the citizens of Toronto in the local orchestral situation. In the opinion of many patrons of music an effort worthy of the importance of the cause should result in the establishment of a permanent Symphony Orchestra in Toronto on a scale inviting comparison with the great orchestras of New York, Boston, Chicago, Minneapolis, rendering it unnecessary to seek American orchestral assistance for any of Canada's most important concerts.

Great National Body

In giving up his connection with the Mendelssohn Choir, Dr. Vogt withdrew from a creation of his own which had brought great honor to himself and his native Province and Canada. As a practical indication of the high artistic standing of the choir in Boston and New York it may be mentioned that when the organization was perfecting its plans for the proposed European tour of 1915, which was abandoned because of the war, amongst the propositions then laid before the choir was one from the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the co-operation en route of the choir in two concerts, for a performing fee of $4,000.

BAKED CHICKEN PIE

Purchase a nice, plump four-pound chicken; singe, draw and clean the same as usual. Disjoint and cut the breast into 4 pieces, cut the thigh and legs apart. Put on with boiling water enough to cover and boil 2 hours. Add 1 quart raw white potatoes, washed, pared and diced. Boil 20 minutes, or until the potatoes are tender. Add 2 tablespoons onion, 1½ tablespoons salt ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoon chopped parsley; boil 5 minutes; then add, 2 tablespoons flour, mixed with a little cold water; boil 5 minutes. Pour into bakedish, which has been lined with dough, cover with dough; brush the top with cold milk and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Crust—Sift the 2 cups of flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt into bowl; add 1 tablespoon lard and rub in lightly; add just enough cold water to hold together. Roll out on floured board and line bottom of dish with half, then cover the pie with the other half.

A SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

What the Radiator Makers did not Know—When to Paint and When Not to Paint.

Here is a little romance of science hidden away in a maze of technicalities. At our National Physical Laboratory at Teddington, England, where they test and analyse all manner of scientific problems, from the making of roads to the balancing of aeroplanes, they have been making fresh experiments in heat.

Heat in enormous volume is required for some of our great industries, and a difficulty hitherto unsolved has been the escape of heat through the pipes through which it is conducted. The experiments carried out at the laboratory show that the amount of radiation of heat from the pipes depends largely on the surface of the pipes. Half of the heat lost from iron pipes is due to this cause, but that loss may be halved by treating the pipes with a coating of aluminum paint, which keeps in the heat.

So far so good. But now comes a surprise. The radiators by which the rooms of houses and buildings are commonly covered with aluminum paint, and this our scientists find is all wrong. With radiators it is intended of course that the heat should escape from the pipes into the rooms; it is wanted for warmth and not for power. But the aluminum paint with which they are generally coated keeps back from the room just half the heat the radiator should give out. This means that if the radiators are aluminium painted they will need twice as much fuel.

No paint for radiators which are meant to throw out heat, says the National Physical Laboratory; but aluminium paint for pipes in which heat is to be retained, and aluminium paint also for the fronts of furnaces in our battleship stoke holds, and other places where we wish to keep down the temperature. Aluminium paint on hot metal surfaces is the stoker's friend, but it is the enemy of the householder with radiators. It is an astonishing thing that the makers of radiators should not have found this out.

A retrospection of our childhood home is good for us. It teaches us how fleeting time is; how the sweetest and best of life's joys must pass away, and how all important to us is diligent in our efforts to make our election sure for that changeless kingdom where there is no parting. The very best monuments that can be erected to our memories here are the living ones we have reared by good deeds in the hearts that are left behind.

* * *

God bless all true mothers in their sacrifices for their little ones. Even should they reap no reward here, such as naturally to be looked for, love, care and prayers have not been lost. No one can tell how many they have wrought until that great day when the whys and the wherefores of life shall have been answered by perfect love and mercy and mother and child stand face to face with Him who has noted each struggle, gauged each motive, and made allowance for human nature, imperfect, even at its best.

* * *

To whatever occupation a young man or a young woman expects to devote life, whatever business or trade or profession be chosen, let him first be a man—let her first be a woman, broadminded and great hearted. But this requires education, and education requires effort—great and prolonged effort—for there is "no royal road to intellectual eminence," and effort requires decision. To all the opportunity comes, but each must decide for himself whether he will seize the opportunity or let it slip by.

Don't be afraid to do your duty because some one ridicules or opposes you. A man who has opinions of his own and the courage to advocate them will be sure to have opposition in this world because he runs contrary to other people's opinions; but just keep right ahead if your cause is right and your conscience clear. Don't bother yourself about what people say; life is too short for that. Some will abuse you through envy, others for the want of principle, and some because they honestly differ from you; but if you keep right on openly, manfully and intelligently and with proper dignity and character, honesty of purpose and self-respect, those who differ from you will respect your opinions.

* * *

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. The man who loses his courage doses all. There is no more hope for him than there is for a dead man. It matters not, however, how much he may be pushed by circumstances if he only keeps his courage up, holds up his head, and with unconquerable will determines to be and do what becomes a man; all that makes or unmakes. Keep a stiff upper lip. Realize that success or failure depends after all, on you and you alone. A man makes his own bed and must lie in it.

* * *

Woman is man's true alpenstock, upon which he leans as he climbs the Alps of life. No hand but her's can steady and guide him o'er its treacherous heights, its slippery places. Wise is he who clearly and fully recognizes that woman is the greatest formative factor for weal or woe in human life. He has not reached maturity, is not fitted to take his place in life's theatre who has not realized this. Turn to history's page, sacred or profane. Take up some book, ancient or modern, take it from the shelf of a library or dig it from the debris of an old-world city. You will read therein on every page, in every age, in every clime, of woman's influence, of keen insight, rare tuition. She's a man's competent a God-given helpmate.

* * *

Who will tell? The boy who reads this, what will he do? When he becomes a man will he do manly things? Will he read and so be intelligent? Will he bring the powers of body and mind into exercise, and so be useful and healthful and strong Will he pray and be pious, good—of a noble and virtuous soul? Will he write, and so be graceful in speech, ready in communication and of strong influence Say, my boy, what are you going to do? What you like to do now you will be very likely to do by and by. Do not swear now? Do not lie, cheat, deceive, steal Do you do dishonorable things? Are you disrespectful to, or do you disobey your parents and teachers? Remember, the boy makes the man If the boy is bad the man will be. Fix it in your mind which you will be

There are a great many things in this world that we are not sure of but there is one thing we may be sure of —"Be sure your sins will find you out."

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

Jealousy and Anger: In the Home Health Club Book, Vol. 4, I have given some concrete information on this subject and cited some cases that have come under my personal observation. The Journal of the American Association of Progressive Medicine for July, in a leading article by Dr. Fred J. E. Sperling, comments as follows on a statement that "Jealousy, Hatred and Anger Poisons Milk":

"I first saw this statement in the American Journal of Progressive Medicine, and since observed it to be true. We often wonder why the nursing baby gets uncontrollable crying spells, becomes stubborn, has nausea, vomiting, sleeplessness, colic, fits and convulsions. A few days being apparently well and happy, then later irritable and angry again.

After careful observation of nursing babies, I find many of the above symptoms. It is always advisable to have mother's milk examined by a competent physician or chemist every three months. If you notice the baby's health rapidly failing, the milk should be examined at once.

Jealousy and hatred causes an alteration of the fluids in the pituitary bodies, the thyroids, spleens or the suprarenals. Sometimes it affects more than one gland. A substance generates in these glands from outside influences causes various emotions. These emotions are not located in the brain as many scientists claim, but are a direct result of the altered glands juices. Dr. George H. Savage, a very eminent English scientist, has positively proven that jealousy and hatred reside outside the brain. That it effects the blood and lymph. That jealousy exists where the brain was sound and healthy.

Jealousy is a personal feeling where you feel powerfully a want of something which you are deprived of by another. It is a feeling, not a thought, and it depresses the whole system by the poison it generates. Jealousy is a forerunner of insanity. When the mother becomes insanely jealous her milk will kill her nursing baby if it is not withheld.

I attribute both suicidal tendencies and homicidal violence to an excessive outpouring of the gland substance which cause an immoderate degree of jealousy. Constant dripping of water wears away a stone, therefore, constant irritation of the flesh allows the germ of cancer to begin its growth and destruction, so the repetition of mild outbreaks of jealousy gradually break down the balance and resistance to the tissues and this paves the path for a torrent of continuous glandular juices.

These oceans of jealousy making material soon begin to flood the human waterworks and stir the body to insane acting. The usual feeling of dispossession, which underlies jealousy forces by its very excesses of violent series of actions which end in a suicide, homicide, infanticide, etc.

When you find jealousy knocking at your door take a hand in this affair yourself. Drive out this demon by making yourself agreeable to all comers. Treat all rivals with courtesy. Excel your rival by being agreeable. When once you establish this, jealousy will gradually leave. You know jealousy is a disagreeable position to hold, and if your love anyone show it. With good sense you should reason this out for yourself, you should never neglect your health and happiness. Why fill your system with useless thoughts which sooner or later occupy important brain centres. Why worry about things that never happen in reality, yet happen by your vivid imagination? Try to realize that home is the grandest place on earth; the place where happiness, love and truth grows in abundance. You are sinning against God when you permit jealousy to poison your body. Many of us make ourselves unhappy and angry by constantly thinking about superior advantages possessed by more fortunate persons. He is the happiest and most contented who can draw all his earthly needs from the fruits of his labour.

Now is the ideal time, when the first symptoms of jealousy manifest themselves to prevent yourself from becoming jealously insane. Now is the easiest time to turn the past pages of jealousy down forever. Start a new clean page; full of religion, the best ideals of health and happiness.

Club Notes.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor: I read your lectures regularly, and as I am a member of your Club, I want to help others. There was a lady who had a child that suffered with rickets. One of my own sons had this disease so badly that his back was crooked. At that time we lived in Sweden. We went to several doctors but without results. At last I found one doctor who advised me to give salt baths twice a week before supper, and from personal experience I know that it is a safe and reliable treatment, as my son is to-day a strong man. Have given the same advice to many and it has been used with great success. —Mrs. F.

Answer.—Here is another safe and harmless home treatment which seems to deserve attention, though there is no likelihood of any such treatment curing every case, but it is probable that it will do a lot of good, and it is just such simple measures we want for the vast Home Health Club family to try in emergencies. In all cases of rickets, food that contains phosphates in abundance is required.

Some Things We Can See In The Heavens At Night

The hour of nine o'clock p.m. is an excellent time during which to study the star lighted firmament.. for then even in the month of June the twilight is over and we do not begin to feel sleepy—that is usually, until an hour later. At nine o'clock to-night the constellation nearest the zenith is Cygnus, distinguished by its large and symmetrical Northern Cross. Indeed, the top of this cross—a noticeable star known as Deneb or Arided—sparkles quite close to the zenith, the remainder of the cross extending in a southwestern direction. In all this starry outline consists of five fairly conspicuous suns, first, Arided, then, below Arided, three stars from southeast to northwest, Epsilon, Gamma and Delta, and at bottom Albireo. There is, of course, a Southern Cross—which we cannot see from these latitudes—so that those of us who have never seen the firmamental cross of the north should look for it at the present time when it is sparkling high above the roofs of even lofty buildings. Having found this large and symmetrical cross (which is only part of the constellation Cygnus), the star gazer should look eastward for the great Square of Pegasus—not exactly square but approximately so. This large Square of Pegasus is formed by four stars, one at each corner, and is easily found. And as the season passes and winter slowly approaches the star gazer at nine o'clock in the evening will see the Northern Cross more and more to the westward and the Square of Pegasus draw near and pass below that point in the darkened sky known as the zenith.

PAINLEVE'S DECLARATION

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Monday, Aug. 17.—Premier Painleve drafted ministerial declaration this afternoon and will submit it to his colleagues in the new Cabinet to-day. As regards the conduct of the war the declaration expresses the resolve of the government to impart to this phase of its duties greater impetus every day. It attaches the greatest importance to the intensification of manufacture of material for war purposes. The declaration adds to close collaboration between the allies, the pursuit of more methodical diplomatic policy.

Increasing Export Of Horses To Germany

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Denmark is negotiating to increase her exports of horses, presumably to Germany, if there is not some abatement in the allies restrictions on giving Denmark fodder, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today. Denmark's shortage of food for cattle and horses has forced farmers either to kill their horses or arrange for an increased export of the animals. Danish newspapers commenting on the situation, carry the veiled hint that "it is hoped America will realize Denmark's economic conditions and shape her course accordingly."

Export of horses, dead or alive, to Germany, which is Denmark's nearest neighbour, would give the Germans a new meat supply. Horse meat has long been eaten in Germany.

SOLDIER'S DRAMATIC SUICIDE

MINEOLA, N.Y., Sept. 17.—While drilling with his company on the parade grounds here to-day at Camp Mills, George Neff of the 165th Infantry, formerly of the 69th of New York, dropped back of the line, placed the muzzle of his rifle in his mouth, and fired, the bullet killing him instantly. It is not known where Neff got the service cartridge he used to kill himself with, as it is against the rules to have such cartridges in the camp. An investigation is being made. Neff, a cashier, had enlisted in June and was about forty years of age.

SQUAD OF LOCAL WAR VETERANS MAY TOUR UNITED STATES

"Aerial" Howards Planning to Have Peterboro' Returned Soldiers Show People of the South What Trench Warfare is Like

ARRANGING BOOKINGS

There is a very strong probability that before long a squad of Peterborough's War Veterans will be found touring the Southern part of the United States, building model trenches such as was shown at the Exhibition and giving the people of Uncle Sam's domains an idea of war conditions as they are to-day.

The proposed tour is a result of the exhibit made by the War Veterans at the Peterborough Industrial. "Aerial" Howard, whose high wire act was a feature of the Exhibition was greatly impressed with the trench and with the explanation given by the returned soldiers. So enthusiastic, indeed, was he that on Saturday afternoon he waited on the War Veterans and submitted a proposition to them. Mr. Howard believes that such a demonstration would cause a sensation in the Southern States and desires to take a squad of ten Peterborough Veterans of the Great War with him. He is in New York now with a view to securing bookings for the feature and there will be something definite in a few days. Enough local men have volunteered to complete the personal of the party.

NOTICE RE ACCOUNTS

The directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition desire that all accounts or matters to be adjusted be sent in to the secretary, Mr. F. J. A. Hall, not later than Saturday, September 22nd in order that the books may be straightened up and accounts paid immediately after the meeting for that purpose on Thursday, September 27th.

IMPORTANT MEETING TO-NIGHT IN REGARD TO MILITARY SERVICE ACT

Peterborough, Canada, Sept. 18, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner, Peterborough:

Dear Sir.—It is the intention of the Governmegt to call out for service as soon as possible, the first class under the Military Service Act, namely—unmarried men and widowers between the ages of twenty and thirty-four. It is, of course, obvious that only men who are physically fit will be required for service, and the Military Service Council is considering the question of physical fitness at the present time.

It will be a great benefit to the employer to know definitely which of his employees are exempted on the ground of physical unfitness. It will help members of the class called out to know as soon as possible whether they are physically eligible or not. It will assist the Government to get this portion of the work to be handled covered as soon as possible.

The Military Service Council has therefore proposed that Medical Boards be established at a very early date at convenient centres, which will pass authoritatively on the question of physical fitness, and the Military Service Council is anxious to secure the co-operation of the different communities in support of this measure. The Military Service Council has asked that the Peterborough Board of Trade discuss the question of physical fitness at once, and also the establishment here of a Medical Board to decide the standard of physical fitness to be required of the members of the first class to be called out under the Military Service Act. This board has already been established in Peterborough, and it is now desired to consider the questions arising out of its establishment.

It will readily be understood that the matter is a very important one, and one that will have far-reaching effects in the community, and it is therefore desired that at the meeting to be held in the Council Chamber to-night at eight o'clock p.m., under the auspices of the Board of Trade, a large attendance of manufacturers, merchants, professional men and representatives of the Trades and Labour Council be present at the meeting, and take part in the discussion.

The meeting is not confined to members of the Board of Trade.

Yours truly,
THE PETERBOROUGH BOARD OF TRADE,
J. J. TURNER, President,
B. D. HALL, Secretary.

Majors Cameron And Eastwood Will Be Local Medical Board

Will Examine Recruits in Connection With the Military Service Act---Great War Veterans Will Meet To-night--Letters From Peterboro' Soldiers Overseas--To-day's General Military News.

Majors G. S. Cameron and J. H. Eastwood of Peterborough who have been in charge of all the medical work in connection with recruiting in Peterborough since the outbreak of war will continue to carry on during the administration of the Military Service Act as they have been appointed to act as the local medical board.

The Kingston Standard says:—

The medical boards of this district to handle the men called up under the conscription act have nearly all been appointed by Lt.-Col. R. J. Gardiner, A.D.M.S. The boards have been appointed except those of Renfrew and Cornwall, which will be appointed in the near future, and are as follows: Kingston, Capt. McGregor, Capt Stevens, Capt Jones; Ottawa, Capt. M. McLeod, Capt. Laidlaw, Capt. Davy; Peterborough, Major Cameron, Major Eastwood; Belleville, Major McCall, Capt. Tennant, Captain Gibson; Trenton, Col Kidd, Capt. Crowe, and one to be named later; Port Hope, Capt. McKinley and two to be named. A certificate of unfitness from a medical board will secure freedom from responsibility under the military service act from any exemption tribunal.

The regular semi-monthly general meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will be held to-night in the Barrie Building. A large turnout of members is expected.

Tom Hatley, a member of the city Fire Department, who early in 1916 exchanged the blue uniform of the fire fighters for the khaki of the Empire's defenders and went overseas with the 93rd Battalion resumed his duties at the Fire Hall yesterday. He has very nearly recovered from the effect of injuries received when a German shell buried him in a dugout.

Mrs. Geo. Wiskin, 280 Thomas St., a member of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club has received the following letter:—

France, Aug. 25th, 1917.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to you hoping they will find you well, to thank you for the socks that you knit and which I was fortunate enough to get. I was more than glad to get them as I was in need of socks at the time and I now have them on my feet. You must have known my size as they just fit me. The ladies of Peterborough are certainly doing good work, especially your club and as you say you are certainly doing your bit. I got them from Pte. Wagstaff, who came from Peterborough with the 21st Battalion. I am from Peterborough myself and was in the 93rd Battalion. This is my address: Pte. H. Wood, 105247, Bombers A Company, 52nd Battalion, 3rd Canadian Entrenching Battalion. I saw quite a lot of boys from Peterborough yesterday. I also saw Mrs. Stanley's son and I am pleased to say he is doing alright. Well, I am also pleased to say that I am keeping well and trust you can say the same. We are having pretty good weather over here. By the reading of the letter you seem to have a son out here. I hope he is alright. Will now close, again thanking you and can say that the boys appreciate your work very much, so goodbye and good luck. From a Soldier from Peterborough.

Mrs. Robert Stark, Peterborough has received the following letters from her brother, Sapper Adam Stark, formerly of Otonabee who enlisted at Winnipeg and has been in France for some time.

Mrs. Robert Stark,
Peterborough, Ont., Can.

Dear Sister,—You will kindly excuse me for not answering your letter before. However, you see where I am. I am not feeling Jake this time, but I am as well as can be expected. I guess Fritz got one over on me this time. I hardly know what happened me, as I did not come to before I was in the hospital and I expect it was in the front line when it happened, as I never remember coming out. However, I can sit up and write anyhow, although I feel as if some one had kicked a few of my ribs out. Yes I am able to be up and walk about a couple of hours, then I have got to make for the bed. Well, I suppose we are still winning, but old

WESTERN LABOUR DELEGATES ADVOCATE GENERAL STRIKE

In the Event of Enforcement of Conscription, Resolution Reads, A Strike Should Be Called, to Continue Until Wealth Is Conscripted and Industries Nationalized.

WARM DEBATE LIKELY

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—Conscription already looms on the horizon as a topic for warm debate at the meeting of the Dominion Trades Congress which opened here to-day. Among the 75 or more resolutions presented for disposal is one from the Transcona (Manitoba) Trades and Labour Council. This resolution recalls Labour's opposition to conscription, cites the fact that Labour has not been consulted by the Government during the war, declares the workers of that district have been denied free speech and Labour men holding meetings have been assaulted by police and soldiers, mentions the constructive services of Labour during the war, and declares that in the event of the enforcement of conscription a general strike should be called, to continue until the Dominion Government conscripts wealth and nationalizes industries.

EXECUTIVE IS LAW-ABIDING

Debate on this long resolution is to commence to-morrow. Already the Executive of the Congress has sought to offset it by comment issued to-day in which, while admitting previous declarations against conscription, the Executive adds: "Still, under our representative form of government, it is not deemed either right, patriotic or in the interests of the Dominion or of the Labour classes to say or to do aught that might prevent the powers that be from obtaining all the results that they anticipate from the enforcement of such law."

The Congress adopted a resolution favouring the organisation in conjunction with the Great War Veterans' Association of a Workmen's and Soldiers' Council to protect the interests of soldiers and workmen in all contemplated adjustments of prevailing systems, as a result of conditions brought about by the war. The resolution was presented by John W. Bruce of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters of Toronto.

The morning and afternoon sessions were devoted principally to the cleaning up of some of the routine business and the formal welcome of the two hundred and eighty-four delegates. In the morning there was an interchange of courtesies and addresses by Sir Robert Borden, President J. C. Watters, local President, John Cameron, and other officials.

MADE GOOD SHOWING AT THE EXHIBITION

Mr. S. W. Blewett's two splendid roadsters, Princess and Patricia, made a fine showing at the Peterborough Industrial following their good record in Toronto, where they were second in three classes. At the local Exhibition, Princess took first in the under 15.2 class, and Patricia first in 15.2 and over class. Shown in the class for best farmer's roadster, they took first and second, and shown as a team they won two firsts. Patricia was shown in the saddle class, and cleverly ridden by Miss Shaw, took first prize.

PTE. WM. EBBS,

A Peterborough soldier, and former member of the 93rd Battalion, who for six days and six nights was behind the German lines near Lens in company with a wounded Canadian officer. They had no food or water and were very weak when finally rescued. A London, Eng., newspaper, describes the event as follows: "During the subsequent cellar to cellar fighting the Canadians discovered one of their officers and a private, who had been imprisoned in a dug-out for six days. The artillery fire was so great that their captors had been unable to send them back through the city."

Pte. Ebbs went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to the 87th Battalion, Grenadier Guards, of Montreal.

GOOD PROGRESS IS BEING MADE WITH THE CENTRAL SPAN

By One O'clock To-day One-third of the Distance to be Traversed to the Floor of the Bridge Had Been Covered Safely

ENGINEERS SATISFIED

Canadian Press Despatch:

QUEBEC, Sept. 18.—Lifting operations in connection with the placing of the central span of the Quebec bridge in its final position, linking up the two cantilever arms, were recommenced this morning. The early hoists this morning showed that the engineers were able to make better time than yesterday.

Progress, that the engineers style as "eminently satisfactory," was made with the elevation of the span throughout the morning, and by one o'clock practically one third of the disfance to be traversed to the floor of the bridge had been covered and the links were going steadily on their way.

BOSTON LAWYER HERE WITH BAIL FOR THE ALLEGED "DIPS"

Joseph Sullivan, a Boston lawyer, applied to Chief Thompson this morning for the release of the four men held on charges of picking pockets at the Exhibition. He endeavoured to negotiate bail, but his efforts have thus far proved ineffectual. One of the prisoners is reported to have sent out an S. O. S. to political friends in Boston, hence the presence of Mr. Sullivan in Peterborough this morning.

THE FOOD SAVING PLEDGE.

One would think that not one woman head of a household in Peterborough would hesitate a moment, not to speak of refusing, to sign the Food Service pledge, that will be presented from house to house in the next few days. It is likely that the women of the city and country will be as willing to cooperate in this war-winning service as the mass of them have been doing in other ways the past three years. Food saving is a relative term; what one would consider saving of food may be considered waste by another—according to the respective standards of living and the respective equipment of common sense and patriotism. Food saving need not mean sacrifice in respect of any necessary article of food; but it must mean reasonable abstention, sacrifice of luxuries, and cessation or curtailment of extravagant waste in the purchase, preparation and service of food. There must be no fragments left—meat must be consumed—in such extensive processes of utilisation—to the bone. This is only a general intimation of what must be done. No mere man would venture to go into details. Every housewife should know what to do, and how to do it.

Help to keep the pledge of food saving will be afforded by an attempt to realise and recognise the important part food plays in fighting, battle-winning and war-winning. Napoleon, the Great, said, it is said, that "an army marches on its belly." Another way of saying that adequate food sustenance is necessary to equip the soldier to not only do his best work physically, but to endow him with the spirit and give him the morale that can only come from a well-nourished body. "The spirit may be willing but the flesh is weak," does not apply to the fighting soldier. If the flesh is weak from imperfect nourishment, there will be mighty little "spirit" to be "willing."

The United States slogan in regard to food saving—"Food Will Win; Don't Waste it,"—is a splendid war cry, as full of inspiration as of truth. If we can get all our housewives and their families to realise this to the full, and try to appreciate what real economy and avoidance of waste mean, they will fall into line.

But there are housekeepers and housekeepers. Some were born housekeepers; some achieved housekeeping, and some had housekeeping thrust upon them. The latter will be the ones to be looked after and helped. They came into the dignity of housekeeping with only the will to do their duty, and lacking the knowledge and experience that their premarital days did not provide.

Signing the food service cards is not enough. A little diplomatic inquiry by those who present cards for signature would discover those housewives who stand in need of advice and instruction in the most difficult of arts, the economical use of foods, the art of economical purchase, and the art of economical preparation and conservation.

To get the best results from any campaign, there must be organisation and continuity of effort. Leaving a card is not the fulfilment of social obligations any more than the futile post card "National Service campaign," so-called was a fruitful war work.

It seems obvious that the signing of the food service pledge card is only part of the work; and that it must be supplemented, and that it should be supplemented with systematic means to give the campaign a directness and "punch" without which the best and widest results will not be forthcoming.

A military force, enrolled and attested, is not a fighting force; without mobilisation and organisation it is only an army on paper.

THE PROUD HOG OF AMARANTH.

One day last week an Amaranth farmer arrived at the Orangeville market driving his new automobile, and with a large dressed hog occupying the rear seat of the car.

The Dufferin Post fancies that the hog had an expression on his fat face showing appreciation of the style in which he went to market. He weighed two hundred pounds and sold for thirty-six dollars. All of which shows the improved status of the once poor and lowly pig. The Post says:

"The incident of this little pig's ride to town in an auto is recorded to show how the farmer, who is on the job, can save his time, which is real money, at this juncture. The pig was put into the auto, driven to town, sold, purchases made, and the farmer on his way home in an hour. With good roads and fast cars the town and the country are coming together. It is a Good Thing for everyone."

When the roads are made good the interchange between town and country will be revolutionised—but no road will be called good unless it will stay good under the rubber tires of rapid motor traffic. Nothing short of asphalt or concrete seems likely to stand the stress. Autos are increasing in numbers everywhere, and we recently spoke of the thousands of them which came in processions along every road leading into the city on Labor Day. In one rural county of the Province it is estimated that over a million dollars is invested in autos. The roads of the past will not do now, and the notion that the auto is a city machine that ought not to trespass on country roads, will not do either. The farmers everywhere are buying cars and no class has a better right to them, and more use for them. The automobile has revolutionised individual and family locomotion, and it will do the same to a large extent with marketing.

But in connection with this revolution there is one great point which Governments, Federal, Provincial and municipal, have to learn, and that is, that the road, the highway, is no longer the concern solely or even mainly, of the man whose farm fronts on it. He cannot be permitted to let it fall into decay, nor can he be expected to asphalt and maintain it. The highway like the railway, is in the service of all who use it, and must be maintained at the broad expense of all on some general plan not yet figured out satisfactorily.—Toronto Star.

Here we have confirmation of The Examiner's frequently presented contention that the proper policy consists in the government assuming a large interest and more direct responsibility in respect of the highways of the province. Traffic conditions have greatly changed and, as the Star very aptly says,, "the road, the highway, is no longer the sole concern of the man whose farm fronts on it." And as a matter of fact, it never has been. The streets of a city are not the sole concern of the citizen whose residence or business premises front it. It is the concern of the whole community; and the whole community is responsible for its proper construction and maintenance, and the individual resident, or the collective residents of a street, are not expected to look after it. It is as with other streets the care of the whole city.

It is equally illogical to expect good results from the residents on a "road beat" to effectively care for a stretch of road which is to be considered in connection with the connected roads. Neither is it logical to expect the best results, or that individual townships or municipalities make a success of road building in their borders. The best results can only be got from general oversight, supervision and responsibility; for the roads of a country are the aggregate of those in the several muncipalities. Logically the provincial authorities are the proper custodians of our provincial highways; and they cannot use the people's money—either the general provincial funds, or specially levied taxation—in a better way than by assuming the general charge of construction and maintenance of public highways. The duty and responsibility of the province are recognised in the fact of the provincial government assuming four-tenths of the cost of county systems of highways, and the idea of placing the whole responsibility of the application of a proper, systematic and scientific plan of highway construction upon the provincial government does no violence to consistency or practicability.

Public interest as well as individual interest would be immensely promoted by extending government charge and responsibility to include all our roads. The government constructs colonization roads, and the results are generally of the best. In remote, sparsely settled districts there are stretches of colonisation roads that are superior to the generality of highways to be found in townships settled from seventy-five to one hundred years.

If the Borden government links up conscription as an issue in a general election with its own unsavoury record, there is danger of someodyb getting a "black eye."

Former Peterboro' Boy Accidentally Killed At Fort Sheridan

Mrs. A. J. Johnston received a telegram this morning breaking the sad news of the accidental death yesterday at Fort Sheridan of her nephew, Ernest Stephens of Chicago, son of Mr. Harry Stephens who resided in Peterborough until he moved to Chicago about sixteen years ago. Ernest Stephens was 26 years old. Early this summer he completed his law studies and had opened an office in Chicago. About six weeks ago he enrolled for the officers, course at Fort Sheridan to prepare himself for overseas service with the National Army. The telegram conveyed only the bare announcement of his accidental death.

War Tax Is Suggested For Alien Residents

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—That all aliens in Canada not naturalized, be compelled to pay a war tax on their earnings was the resolution adopted today by the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, and a memorial will be sent to the Dominion government recommending this. This resolution emanated from Sault Ste. Marie, where it was stated there were over one thousand Austrians and Germans drawing big pay in the steel works and paying no taxes.

After considerable discussion, during which some delegates declared it was no part of the Labour Congress business to take up the cudgels for the soldiers, it was decided to refer a resolution re separation, pensions, etc., to the Congress Pension committee. A rural credits resolution developed considerable opposition.

BAIL IS ARRANGED

DANNY SIMONS ENTERTAINS THE SOLDIER BOYS

Dannie Simons, well-known local boy, who has made a name for himself in vaudeville, appeared recently in an entertainment for wounded soldiers at the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Home in Ottawa. Mr. Simons was playing at the Francais Theatre in that city and with other vaudeville artists offered his services. An Ottawa paper says: "Mr. Dannie Simons, from the Francais, gave a clear sketch in which he impersonated a Scotch soldier who had just joined the ranks. Simons is a big fellow, and the Cameron tartan set off his musular frame.

Having no dressing room in the theatre Simons disappeared behind the piano to change his costume, and presently appeared. A loud scuffling preceded the rushing charge of a wooden horse carrying "Teddy Roosevelt," somewhere in France. "This is the Bull Moose charge," yelled "Teddy," as he galloped furiously over the battlefield, firing blank cartridges, which made the "Seven Darlings" run for their lives. Fortunately none of the audience were suffering with shell shock or the effect might have been disastrous."

Palmist Was Found Unconscious On Street Left Hospital To-day

Mrs. Gordon Meyers, the palmist of the Patrick Show that made up the major part of the midway at the Exhibition, was picked up in apparently a semi-conscious condition at the corner of Charlotte and Bethune streets, on Sunday night. She was bleeding from the mouth and unable to give a coherent explanation of her condition and identity. P. C. Sanbach found the woman at 11.20 o'clock. He called Dr. Cameron, who ordered an ambulance and had the woman removed to the Nicholls Hospital. At noon to-day she had recovered sufficiently to be able to leave the hospital. When found by the Constable she had in her purse only five cents, the receipt of her board payment at 326 Rubidge street, and several photographs.

BRITISH BUILDERS RUSH HUNDREDS OF VESSELS TO SEA

Standard Patterns Speed Work of Manufacturing and Assembling.

CONCENTRATE ENERGY ON MERCHANT TONNAGE

Ways of Four Shipbuilding Rivers Are Scenes of Feverish Activity.

GLASGOW, Sept. 18.—On the hull of a big vessel being built in one of the many yards that line the river banks of Scotland and northwest England a workman has written with chalk in bold letters six feet high five words that express the determination of British shipbuilders to "do their bit' towards defeating the German submarines. The five words are these: "We will deliver the ships!"

A staff correspondent of the Associated Press has just completed a trip through the principal yards of the rivers Tees, Tyne, Wear and Clyde as the guest of the Foreign Office and the Admiralty. The purpose of the journey was to permit the gathering of information regarding Great Britain's efforts which could be transmitted to the people of the United States.

Great Britain not only will deliver the vessels, they are being delivered now—dozens of them, scores of them; even hundreds of them. On the four principal shipbuilding rivers of the country every available foot of adjoining land has a ship more or less completed over it. Nearby engine works are turning out motive power for the vessels at a tremendous rate. Ship-Builders of various sorts—men, women, boys, girls—all are working at top speed to beat the Germans.

The rivers are overhung with smoke blast furnaces are glowing everywhere, streaks of red go back and forward in the rolling mills, and through it all on these busy rivers there is a roar of automatic riveters, the clash of sledges on steel plates and the throbbing of ponderous machines punching holes in plates an inch thick which at times is truly deafening. So great is this noise at many places on the banks of the Clyde that to talk it is necessary to place mouth to ear.

Just now the builders of vessels are rushing through work on countless destroyers, cruisers and other naval ships that must remain for the present as "mysteries." They, too, are working at a tremendous rate, completing merchant ships, of which there appear to be hundreds. Some are large and some are small. Some are being built for private owners, some for the government. Especially fast work is being done on the merchant vessels, as the government and the builders are eager to increase British tonnage by building standard vessels, of which many are even now under construction, many having been launched.

These standard vessels, builders unanimously agree, will greatly enlarge the output of tonnage. In the first place, it was pointed out, construction has been simplified; all parts of hulls, engines—everything—are standard and may be used where first needed. Heretofore, for instance, thirty-five sizes of steel sections were used in the construction of ordinary vessels. The standardization process has reduced this number to eight. So far all the standards, as they are assembled, have been named after flowers, the word "war" preceding the name of the flower, such as "war rose," "war thistle," "war poppy." But for the name it would be impossible to tell that they are standards. They look just like the ordinary cargo carrying vessel; not much superstructure and wide decks upon which a heavy load may be carried. Their engines are powerful enough to drive them through the seas at a rate slightly faster than that of the ordinary cargo carrier, and they all will be well armed when they set out to bring materials and supplies to the British Isles from foreign countries. It is quite possible that within the next few months every port in the United States will have seen one or more of these standards, for some of them already are in the water and making ready to perform the duties that have been cut out for them.

The Germans during the early days of the war tried their best to destroy the yards of the Tees and the ... and the War. In one shop behind a mass of roaring machinery there is a big brass plate, which was placed there by the company in honor of more than a score of employees who gave up their lives on the spot when a Zeppelin bomb crashed through the roof and exploded On any river they will point out to the visitor where bombs from the "Zepps" have dropped before the British did away with the menace, at least in that section of the country. The "Zepps" do not even try to reach the yards any more. It would be suicide for them to make the attempt.

Mrs. Sacky Laughs Last in Chase By Deputy Sheriffs

Officers win Race but find Writ of Attachment is of No Avail.

New York, September 18. — Mrs. Lillian Suares Sacky, wife of "Count" Aribert Sacky, against whom she recently began an action to recover $32,000 alleged to have been entrusted to him, was the central figure in an automobile race that thrilled Riverside Drive. Though the rival automobile containing John Lanyon, head of Lanyon's Detective Agency, and Deputy Sheriffs Vinters and Hochstadter, proved a winner in the speed contest, Mrs. Sacky emerged a final victor and drove away with a smile at her discomfited pursuers.

The deputy sheriffs, who were armed with a writ of attachment for Mrs. Sacky's automobile in an action that was brought by Mr. Lanyon for a bill of 1,963 for services and expenses, first sighted Mrs. Sacky in an automobile at the Riversido Drive, and 116th street. With Mr. Lanyon at the wheel of the automobile they gave chase and the two cars sped down the drive as far as Seventy-second street. Mrs. Sacky then directed her chauffeur to turn and at Eighth avenue had the car stopped.

She accepted the writ of attachment and then informed the deputies that she had sold her automobile to Herbert F. Dawson a week ago. The officials learned that at this time the New York license for the car was substituted for one of New Jersey. Inquiry at the police headquarters showed that the license was in the name of Mr. Dawson.

Mrs. Sacky before her last marriage was the widow of a wealthy Cuban banker named Suares. In his search for further property upon which to levy to satisfy Mr. Lanyon's claim, Sheriff Smith received a letter from C. B. Jordan & Co., lumber dealers, of No. 11 Broadway, stating that Mrs. Sacky owned 80 per cent of its stock of a par value of $40,000, and that she drew a salary of $100 a week.

In his complaint Mr. Lanyon alleged that the money due him was largely for work in connection with Mrs. Sacky's action against her husband, and that he had been instrumental in recovering for her property of great value.

Labor Conditions Following The War

ONE of the most serious problems which Canada must face at the close of the war is the re-arrangement of our affairs upon the basis of normal civil life, with the incidental question of labor unemployment.

Labor conditions in Canada to-day are, in many respects, very similar to those which prevailed in the United States during their Civil War and the re-construction period. Our labor conditions immediately previous to the war had the same chaotic aspect. The start of the war first brought depression in industry, followed by a rapid return in the damand for labor as manufacture of munitions and other war supplies extended, and to-day in Canada there is little if any unemployment and skilled labor is in strong demand.

At the close of the Civil War, the United States had a population of about 33,000,000. The Union Army at the time of Lee's surrender numbered slightly more than 1,000,000. It was estimated that another million men and women were employed in the Northern States in the manufacture of munitions. During the four year period of the Civil War, immigration had fallen off, and recruiting had depleted the workers on the farms, and drawn largely from the laboring classes in the cities. The call for munition workers was supplied from other branches of industry, with the result that ordinary enterprises were compelled to run short-handed or pay a high premium for labor.

Compared with this situation, we find Canada's army of about 400,000 drawn from a population of about 8,000,000. It is estimated that some 300,000 men and women are now engaged in munition work. Only 12% of our army, however, has been enlisted from the farms and more than half of the total has been recruited from among the skilled and manual laborers. The comparison shows the same situation regarding the scarcity of labor for ordinary enterprises, because of the drain through the army for overseas forces and munition workers.

During the Civil War period, wages gradually increased. Prices of commodities also advanced. The laborer, however, skilled or unskilled, was placed at a disadvantage because his wages did not advance in proportion to the prices of necessities. Even with this situation, conditions were better among the mechanics and trades than among the clerks and salaried people, whose incomes did not advance in proportion to the increased price of living.

When the Union Army started to muster out in 1865 at the rate of about 300,000 per month for the three summer months, there was for a time a glut of the labor market. This was but temporary, however, as 1866 witnessed an active industrial and agricultural revival. The returning soldiers, a large percentage of whom had volunteered from the farming districts, went back to producing or migrated to the homestead lands in the newly opened Mississippi Valley States. This wholesale homesteading brought demands for new railways; more than 15,000 miles of rails were laid in the west during the five years directly following the war. This railway work took up quantities of labor from the eastern centres and assisted to a marked degree the settlers who had gone into the new country without sufficient funds to tide them through the breaking and growing seasons of the first years.

The first annual report of the United States Commissioner of Labor published in 1886, summarizes the pre-construction period, as follows:

"The year 1867 can hardly be called one of financial panics or industrial depressions, although hard times apparently prevailed. The stimulation to all industries resulting from the war, the speculative enterprises undertaken, the extension of credits, and the slackening of production, necessarily caused a reaction, and a consequent stagnation of business; but the period was hardly spoken of by business men as one of any particular hardship. People for a while began to be conservative; but the impetus gained during the war could not be overcome, and it was not until the crash of 1873 that the effects of undue excitement in all branches of trade and business were thoroughly noticed."

The five years following the Civil War saw the organization of the first labor unions. These had been started in a local way during the last two years of the war, In 1866 the first National Congress of Labor met at Baltimore. The slogan of the organizers of the period was the necessity for organization so as to protect American labor against invading foreigners, who were immigrating in large numbers during the five years following the war.

The plants established for the manufacture of munitions for the Northern Army during the war marked the beginning of the factory system, and the centralization of industry in the larger cities. A continuation of this system after the war had a further influence in bringing about labor organizations.

Canada has, since the opening of the war, increased her manufacture of staples and reduced her imports. Industry has been given an impetus that should mark a great era of development. We have demonstrated that many new lines can be profitably manufactured in Canada. We face the same dangers, however, that culminated in the crash of 1873 in the United States—the danger of speculation and over-production, without properly developed markets.

A general survey of the labor situation in Canada indicates that about 150,000 more men will be required after the war than are now employed in Canada. This would about take care of the proportion of returning soldiers which will require employment after the war. The problem then arises as to what we will do with our munition workers—an estimated detail of about 200,000 being employed in this work at present, fully 75% of which number will be called upon to find other employment when the war is over.

We will also have the problem of finding employment for those immigrants seeking work, because it will be difficult to restrict immigration to those who wish to engage in agriculture. Our greatest need to-day is more farmers and greater agricultural production, as will readily be recognized from the fact that our population is half urban and we consume more than we produce. There will be great opportunity and a crying need for farmers and farm laborers all through Canada after the war, but unless proper governmental plan is worked out to direct our immigration into that channel, we face the danger of a flood of unemployed in our cities and towns, while our farms remain undeveloped.

Next in importance to the problem of increased agricultural production is that of the development of our vast natural resources through the extension of existing and promotion of new industries. We must replace the munition plants by utilizing them in extending our present lines of manufacture and promoting the introduction of new lines. Canada should prepare for increased participation in export trade after the war and should grasp the opportunity now to extend in every possible way her industrial development to enable the opportunity to be taken advantage of.

The problem of capital is always closely related to that of labor. Statistics show that Canada has always been able to absorb immigration in direct proportion to the amount of foreign capital it has been able to secure. It is estimated that during the six years preceding the war, Great Britain invested $1,500,000,000 in Canada. After the war, the Mother Country will have her own financial problems to solve and we will be compelled to look elsewhere for our capital. So far we have been able to obtain large sums from the United States and they will probably be willing to be our bankers after the war. They have the money—and it should be only necessary to educate them as to our resources and opportunities; when we will be able to obtain the capital we require.

Available information shows that more than one-half of our overseas forces were recruited from among skilled workers. Some plan must be put into operation for returning these men to civil life gradually so that they will not glut the labor market; otherwise we can count upon serious labor congestion at many points. If, on the other hand, we begin to grapple with these future conditions; to employ every effort of our governmental, financial and commercial organizations to handle the problems of re-organizing our industrial life, Canada will be able to grow by great strides and occupy a prominent place among the nations of the world.

CHARLTON MAN FOUND IN DYING CONDITION

Cobalt, September 18. — Peculiar circumstances surround the death of John McLaren, who was found in his bed at his home in Charlton. McLaren, with his skull fractured, was unconscious and bleeding when found at six o'clock in the morning by a neighbor. The injured man it is stated, appears to have met with an accident while driving in a motor car with a local doctor. After being taken to New Liskeard Hospital he succumbed to his injuries. How his skull was fractured has not been explained.

Will Not Make Reply Public For The Present

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John H. Hearley.)

ROME, Sept. 18.—The Vatican will not make the Central Powers' reply to Pope Benedict's peace suggestions public until the Pope and all the Vatican clergy begins its week's annual retreat the latter part of September. In making this statement to-day to the United Press, the Vatican authorities laid stress on the fact that during this retreat special prayers will be said for the "justice Christian peace," which the Holy Father has implored of the belligerents.

The Teutonic replies to the peace note have not yet been received by the Papal Secretary of State, but are expected within the next few days. The announcement was made to-day that the Vatican expects to publish its diplomatic papers in full after the close of the war.

GERMAN NEWSPAPERS SUSPENDED BY CENSOR

Amsterdam, September 18. — The Deutsche Tages Zeitung and Boerse Zeitung have been forbidden publication by the censor. The Freisinnige Zeitung also announces that it has suspended. The reason for this action is not stated, but the Tages Zeitung was possibly stopped owing to Reventlow's article on Friday attacking the government submarine policy. He said that from Count Luxburg's proposals concerning the treatment of Argentine vessels it appears to be the order of the day for Berlin to conduct the submarine war according to the wishes of German ministers in neutral countries. This phase of the Luxburg despatches may be graver than others, says Reventlow, who recommends it specially to public attention.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Peterboro' Caledonians Meet In Old Blighty

LANCE CORP. ROBT. HENDRY (on the left) and CORP. WM. LYBURN.

12th Reserve
East Sandling,
England.

Editor Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—I take the liberty of writing you and enclosing a picture of two Peterborough boys who have been away for a considerable time taking part in the great struggle. We both got wounded in the Spring fighting and reached England unknown to each other from the time we left Peterborough until a week ago, when, by accident, we met at a training school for officers and N.C.O's. We had both gone there to take up a special course. I can assure you it was quite a treat to meet again. We have both seen quite a bit of service, and are very fortunate to be out of it for a time. My friend, who is Bill Lyburn, and resided at 220 Wolfe street, and myself were both connected with the Caledonia Club in Peterborough, myself being President at time of enlistment, and I am sure some of the old members will be glad to know that we have met. As you perhaps know, the Canadian boys have won a great name for themselves. There is no better fighting force in the present war than the Canadian Corps, and that is saying something, in fact it has been acknowledged. We look forward to the day when it will be over and we be permitted to return to the old burg once more. Would be glad if you would insert our picture in your paper for the benefit of those known to us, and who are always in our thoughts. We trust that the Examiner is keeping up its good reputation and going as strong as ever.

Corporal Lyburn is on the right of picture and myself on left. Thanking you, I am

Yours sincerely,
Lance-Corporal Robt. Hendry.

SUBSTITUTE IS THE FOOD CONTROLLER'S ADVICE TO CANADIAN WOMEN

The following letter has been issued by Food Controller Hanna.

Office of the Food Controller,
Ottawa.
September 14th, 1917.

To Lady Hendrie, the Members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Organization of Resources Committee and their co-workers throughout Ontario:

Great Britain and her European Allies look to Canada for food. The King has notified the Canadian Government that "increased supplies are absolutely essential to the defeat of the enemy's services and to a speedy and successful termination of the war."

Lord Rhonda, the British Food Controller, has told the Dominion that Great Britain looks to the resources of Canada and to the indomnitable energy of Canadians for an answer that will shatter Germany's threat of starvation."

There is a world famine of wheat and a world shortage of beef and bacon. These are the commodities most required for overseas. It is to ensure supplies of these foods and other non-perishable and easily storeable commodities that every housewife is being asked to sign the Food Pledge. Canada has abundance of other foodstuffs. By reducing domestic consumption of wheat, beef and bacon and by using substitutes the housewives of the Dominion can give vital war service. They will give it once they realize the necessity. All that is asked at present is that they do not use beef and bacon on two days a week or at more than one meal on any other day. That they reduce their consumption of wheat bread by one-quarter and that they use perishable and non-exportable products to the greatest possible extent as substitutes for staple foods required for export. The appeal to the housewives is contained in the one word substitute. When they realize the great need of the fighting forces and our Allies they will also save every ounce of food possible in order to release more for export. To do this means the complete conservation of our food supplies and the elimination of waste.

To yourself, to the members of your Committee and to your co-workers I wish to express my great appreciation of the services you are giving in circulating the Food Service Pledges by a house-to-house canvass and thus bringing thome directly to the people the imperative need for substituting other foods for those required for export. Your task is an arduous one, but I am confident that the housewives of Ontario will respond splendidly to your war appeal.

Very truly yours,
(Sgd.) W. J. HANNA.
Food Controller.

A Smooth, Hairless Skin For Every Woman

(The Modern Beauty.)

With the aid of a plain delatone paste it is an easy matter to rid the skin of unsightly hairy growths. The paste is made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs not wanted and after 2 or 3 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. When you go to your druggist for delatone, be sure you get the genuine article.

DENY STATEMENTS BY REV. DR. CHOWN

Condition of Canadian Troops in London are Quite Satisfactory.

London, September 18. — Statements which have been made by Rev. Dr. Chown, before the Social Service Department of the Methodist Church at Toronto, regarding the temptations for the Canadian soldiers in London, and in the training camps in England being greater than ought to be endured, are criticised at the Canadian headquarters, where one officer said that there was no foundation for such statements.

On the other hand this is a matter on which there is a sharp cleavage of opinion, and the clergy are found on both sides of opinion.

At the Canadian command of the London area, the Mail and Empire correspondent was informed that conditions were quite satisfactory as compared with the Imperial troops, and that there was no need to adopt further measures, in fact there is one office in London which is always open for advice, and has given the best results.

Reporter Arrives Judge Hylan Flees

New York, September 18. — Judge John Hylan, democratic candidate for mayor, accompanied by his wife, and daughter, several of his campaign workers and a score of moving picture men, appeared in the Long Island City yard of the Long Island Railroad, where they had planned to take poses of the Judge as a fireman on a locomotive. The pictures when taken are to be used in the campaign and will help show how the candidate started life as a railroad man, meanwhile studying law and later being admitted to the bar.

All went well and the judge was getting ready to take his place on the engine when a reporter from a local newspaper appeared on the scene. Judge Hylan learned that the reporter was present. After a hurried conversation with his campaign workers, he took his wife and daughter, and made a hasty exit. The movie men waited for him to return but the judge had decided to postpone his posing. After an hour's delay one of the movie actors posed as Judge Hylan, and after shovelling some coal on the locomotive fire, stretched himself out near the engine and started to study the law book brought by the judge.

Whether Judge Hylan ever will return for the purpose of placing himself in the movies or permit the movie actor to take his place in the life sketch could not be learned.

Mephiboseth, Or The Crippled Pauper

Such was the subject taken by Evangelist Harold Harper at Gospel Hall last evening. This is one of the clearest pictures of grace in the Old Testament. This man was a son of David's enemy. He was lame on both his feet and he lived in a place of no pasture. This was true in a spiritual sense of every unsaved person, said Mr. Harper. Continuing he spoke of the way David treated this crippled pauper. First of all it was all done because of Jonathon's sake. God is dealing in grace to-day with the world, because of what Jesus is and what He did. David not only enquired for Mephiboseth, but he fetched him from his place of no pasture; he spoke words of peace to him; he fed him at the king's table and spared his life in the day of judgment. who trusts His son. He speaks words of peace and pardon, feeds him out

How like God's grace to the sinner of His royal bounty and protects him in the day of judgment.

The speaker urged all present to believe in Christ and to accept God's offer of grace.

Mr. Harper will speak this evening again at 8 o'clock. You are invited to attend.

SHUT OFF ENGINE TO HEAR COMRADE

Aviator Killed at Camp Borden under Peculiar Circumstances.

Borden Camp, September 18. — Flight Cadet Whetrick, of the 81st Squadron Royal Flying Corps, lies dead in the morgue as a result of a fatal crash of his machine some five miles east of camp on Saturday. The accident happened under rather peculiar circumstances. Another machine had made a forced landing and its pilot called out to Whetrick, who was not far away, to take word to the camp to send the repair truck. To hear better what was being said, Whetrick shut off his engine and did not succeed in getting it going again to rise. His machine took a nose plunge from about 150 feet and was badly smashed up. Whetrick was conscious when picked up but died before leaving the hospital. He came from Buffalo, N.Y.

Plowing Match On Farms Of J. K. Moore And James Young

Effort Will Be Made to Have Demonstration by Tractors at This Years Match in Smith Township Prospects For Provincial Match Here.

The fourth annual plowing match for the championship of Peterborough county will be held this year on the farms of J. K. Moore and James Young on the fourth line of Smith on October 23rd. Final arrangements for the match were made at a meeting of the directors of the County Association held recently. Five classes will be held this year as last; in all $260.00 in prizes will be offered. It has been decided to continue the class for double plows.

This year's match is likely to include two special features. An effort will be made through Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M. L.A., and District Representative McRae to have some farm tractors on hand to demonstrate their possibilities in the matter of plowing. A farmer in Smith township who owns a tractor, is also to be invited to have his on hand. The directors decided also to have a special class for plowmen sixty years of age or over who will compete for three special prizes of $8.00, $6.00 and $4.00, $10.00 of which is given by Farm and Dairy. Plowmen in this class will not need to commence plowing until one o'clock in the afternoon and will be required to plow only eight rounds.

The ladies of Central Smith are planning to have a tent erected and to serve meals at a nominal cost for the benefit for the Red Cross.

The Provincial Match.

The possibility of holding the provincial match here next year was discussed. It was realized that it would be a very big undertaking, it having been estimated that over 15,000 people attended the match last year at Whitby it was felt that if suitable ground can be obained it may be well to make an effort to secure the match. The directors agreed to be on the lookout for suitable fields. The matter will be discussed later in the fall after the county match is over.

The directors present at the meeting were President Joshua Smithson and Messrs. J. H. Garbutt, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., D. Crough, N. Webber, W. J. Cleghorn, H. B. Cowan and Secretary C. Brown.

Rev. Father Power Goes To Trout Creek

Rev. Father Power announced to the congregation of St. Mary's church at both masses on Sunday last that he was about to leave for other fields of labour and on the conclusion of his sermon extended to all his blessing and best wishes. He thanked the congregation for his pleasant associations and many kindnesses received while here and the memories it would bring to him for years to come. Father Power has been curate for over a year in the parish and during that time won the esteem of old and young. He will be especially missed by the young people, whom he endeavoured to furnish innocent amusement at all times. His new parish will be Trout Creek in the Parry Sound district, for which place he will leave probably on Wednesday next.

Rev. Father McHugh of Peterborough is his likely successor.—Lindsay Warder.

MANY CATTLE ARE DYING OF BLACKLEG

There is a Way to Prevent This Dreaded Disease

A great many farmers of this County have lost valuable cattle within the last few days from Blackleg. A disease which is very prevalent at this season of the year.

If cattle contract this disease there appears to be no efficient remedy, and it cannot be cured. When cattle die, the carcass of the victim should be promptly burned or buried deep and covered with quick lime.

Burning is much to be preferred as a protection to surviving cattle.

There is only one sure way to prevent this disease and that is to vaccinate them and this treatment will prevent the disease in cattle, just as sure as smallpox can be prevented in people.

Either write or go to J. Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street and you will be furnished with better literature and full particulars how to prevent this dreaded disease

"SKY PILOT" MAKES A HIT AT BUFFALO

Dramatization of Ralph Connor's Best Known Novel Enthusiastically Received

BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 17.— Ralph Connor's (Major Gordon of the Canadian Highlanders) "Sky Pilot," was presented for the first time on any stage to-night at the Teck Theatre. The play is founded on Connors' two best known novels, "Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock," the dramatization being the work of Frank Mandel and George H. Brennan. The scene is laid in the Canadian Rockies and the production was faithful to the original story characterization. Scientifically, it was superb. An immense audience, including the British, French and Italian Consuls, testified to its approval by repeated curtain calls. The advance sale of seats is said to be the largest in the history of the theatre for a new dramatic attraction. At the conclusion of the Buffalo engagement the play will commence a short tour of the principal cities in Canada. In November it will go to New York to remain for the balance of the season.

Mr. Jos. J. Mr. Duffus states, however, that he has a limited number of cars in stock which will be sold at the old price, $495. 3d-64

Duck Season Has Been a Lean One

The first duck hunters of the season have practically concluded to hang up their firearms until the cold weather brings the main flight of birds. Up to the present the season has been a disappointment and many a new and old gun has yet to receive the first 1917 notch. The game has been gun-shy since the opening fusilade on September 1st, and are playing safe out in the middle of Rice Lake, where the visibility guarantees their security.

The Marjorie Powell Mather Pianoforte Recital

The pianoforte recital given in the Collegiate Assembly Hall, last night, by Miss Marjorie Powell Mather, daughter of Mr. Francis Mather, was—which is high praise—as good as its material object, strengthening the funds of the Red Cross. There was a fair-sized audience, and whatever was lacking in large numbers was compensated by the large enthusiasm with which Miss Mather's performance was greeted.

And the enthusiasm was fully justified. Miss Mather presented, in a most musicianly manner, a splendid and well-balanced programme, capable of displaying every phase of an artist's qualification. Her method is adequate and effective, her tone broad and round, as specially developed in the Andante of the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 27, No. 2. Her technical equipment is ample—her runs being especially smooth and defined — and this was shown along with intelligent reading of the spirit of the music in the execution of the varying moods of the Liszt Liebestraum and Staub's "Sous Bois." Mendelssohn's Andante and Rondo Capriciboso brought out splendidly Miss Mather's technical efficiency, and her virility of exeution was grandly developed in the heroic fortessimi of the Moszkowski Concerto in E major, the orchestral accompaniment, given on a second piano, capably provided by Miss Marion Porter, Toronto. This brilliant and brilliantly played piece was a fitting finale to a magnificent programme, in which Miss Mather displayed the characteristics of a true pianoforte artiste. Her striking proficiency is all the more praiseworthy because it is the outcome of true musical endowment, which has not had the stimulus of professional ambition. She is the true musical amateur in a literal sense—loving music for its own sake. It is, in one way, unfortunate, that she does not purpose further study and intense development of her wonderful talents, which would bring her a prominent place upon the professional concert stage. Her capacity as a pianist makes us proud to aknowledge her as one of our own, and her splendid proficiency is a tribute to our local teaching caapcity. Miss Mather received her early musical education in England; and, for the past few years in Peterborough, she has been a student—not a mere pupil, for her work shows that she has been a keen student—with Mr. John Renwick, and later with Mr. John Allan.

Miss Mather was well assisted in the presentation of the programme by Mr. John Smith, baritone, pupil of Mr. George Kenyon, organist and choir master of Knox Church. He has a fine, natural voice of grateful quality, and its employment shows careful training, which, joined with the musical spirit of his singing, marks him as a vocalist of unusual ability. While he performed Don Juan's Serenade and Schubert's "Wanderer" with excellent effect, he was at his best in the excerpt—"All Our Grief (Stabat Mater) — but his very best was perhaps shown in the beautiful rendering of his encore number, "Annie Laurie."

Miss Mather's pianoforte recital was a splendid success, and it is hoped that her approaching change of home life will not deprive us of the pleasure of public enjoyment of her artistic work.

The pianoforte, so well used on the occasion, was a Nordheimer, kindly furnished by Mr. F. Whitehouse.

Programme.

Bach—Prelude and Fugue No. 21.—Beethoven—Sonata op. 27, No. 2. Piano.
Tschaikowsky.—Don Juan's Serenade. Vocal.
Chopin—Nocturne op. 9, No. 2.
Staub—Sous Bois.—Piano.
Schubert—The Wanderer.—Vocal.
Liszt—Liebestraum, No. 3.
Mendelssohn—Andante and Rondo Capriccioso.—Piano.
Rossini—All Our Grief (Stabat Mater)—Vocal.
Moszkowski—Concerto in E major, op. 59.—Piano.

"OPEN BAR WILL NEVER COME INTO FORCE AGAIN"---J. D. FLAVELLE

LINDSAY, Sept. 17.—"The open bar will never come again," says Mr. J. D. Flavelle, reviewing the first year of the Ontario Temperance Act. "It is working out smoothly and in a highly satisfactory manner," said Mr. Flavelle. "There are now in Ontario over 100 more Standard hotels than when the Act went into force, and they are giving good accommodation. In fact, we have received many letters from travelling men stating that the accommodation is better today than it was when the hotels were under the License Act, and that more attention is given to the accommodation end of the hotel and less to the bas as formerly. We have also received letters from prominent business men who at the outset were opposed to the Act but are now strongly in favour of it; many who were formerly staunch opponents of prohibition would not return to the old order under any consideration. They tell us that they are selling more goods (and this refers to all classes of goods) and accounts are now paid that were never paid before. The Ontario Temperance Act has practically done away with open drunkenness on the streets and loafing in the bars.

"Fines collected by the Department, exclusive of those collected by municipalities have exceeded our expectations and amounts to between $125,000 and $150,000, but I will say that the Act is being rigidly enforced. We have now 60 inspectors in the Province, whereas we formerly had 100, but the 60 are doing their work well—more effectively than under the old system. I don't believe the open bar will ever come into force again.

"We have had a certain amount of friction between the Dominion Act and the Ontario Temperance Act, in connection with proprietary and patent medicines, more particularly in regard to invalid wines.

"Under the present Act the Dominion Act precedes the Ontario Act. Under the former Act a fine of from $1 to $50 can be imposed on druggists selling intoxicated beverages and wines, but under the Ontario Act a fine of from $200 to $1,000 can be imposed. An amendment is under way which will give us power to prosecute under the Ontario Act. It is not fair that the druggists should suffer in this respect, unless they are flagrantly breaking the law, and we propose to go after the manufacturer first, then the druggists.

"The past year has been a good year for business, all tradesmen and merchants will tell you, and has been good for men, women and children. You will find that men who had been in the habit of spending their earnings on drink have learned to pay some respect to the needs of their families, and have themselves gained in that personal asset—self respect."

FIRE CHIEF GRANGE WITHDRAWS RESIGNATION

Newly Appointed Chief Will Continue in the Service of the City—Applications For Chief and Assistant Chief

The resignation which Fire Chief Grange tendered to the Fire, Water and Light committee has been withdrawn. An announcement to this effect was made by Ald. Dobbin at a special meeting of the committee, which was held last evening. The chairman of the committee outlined the circumstances connected with the appointment of ex-Chief Howard's successor. This consisted of an appeal to the militia authorities and the subsequent release of Mr. Grange from his position of caretaker at the armouries. Sergeant Cooper has succeeded to the position made vacant by Mr. Grange when he accepted the position of Fire Chief. Ald. Dobbin explained to the committee that Mr. Grange came to him on Saturday and wanted to know if Mr. Cooper's appointment was a permanent one. If so he would withdraw his resignation as Fire Chief and continue in the services of the city. Mr. Grange in tendering his resignation said that his family made valid objections to him accepting the position of Fire Chief and the militia authorities were loathe to release him.

Ald. Duncan—"He told me he wanted to clean the yard up and drill the men there instead of on the street. I don't think that four men in the station know how to put up that big ladder."

"Get rid of the chickens," suggested one of the aldermen.

"What kind of chickens?" inquired Ald. Worth.

Signed Petitions

A petition endorsing the action of the Council in appointing George Grange to the position was presented to the committee. The document was signed by every member of the force.

An application was received from Fireman A. McDonald for the position of Assistant Chief.

Ald. Smith thought that the new Fire Chief should be given an opportunity of selecting his own man for the position. "He should have a chance to size up the men first," said Ald. Smith. "An Assistant Chief should be a man who can pull with the men as well as the Chief," added the East Ward representative.

J. A. Ploufe, a former member of the Fire Department, was an applicant for the position of Fire Chief. Ex-Fireman Raymond, now employed in a bakeshop, was another applicant. Police Sergeant A. Kidd was spoken of by Ald. Smith as another promising prospect should a vacancy occur.

Accidental Death Jury Verdict In J. D. O'Brien Inquest

Stepped From C. P. R. Passenger Train While It Was Moving—No Blame Attached to Company

That James D. O'Brien came to his death on Saturday, September 8th, at St. Joseph's Hospital, from injuries received on the evening of Friday, September 7th, when he stepped off a moving train, between Brady's flag station and Burketon, on the C. P. R., that the accident was due to an error in judgment on his part, and that no blame be attached to the C.P.R.

The above verdict was returned by the Coroner's Jury that investigated the circumstances of the death of the late James D. O'Brien of Downeyville, who stepped from a rapidly-moving train west of Burketon where he expected to change cars on his way home to Lindsay, following a visit in Toronto. The evidence was quite clear that the deceased had made an error in judgment. After hearing the brakeman announce the approach to Burketon, Mr. O'Brien parted from several friends, passed out of the coach and stepped down into the dark and to his death.

The jury was as follows: Messrs. Harry Smith (foreman), G. N. Graham, James Collins, George Woods, A. B. Cranfield, Thomas Bacon, D. A. Donoghue, F. S. Raymond, W. N. Griffin, Robert Beach, J. W. Armstrong and Robert Claghorn.

Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the examination of the witnesses, and Mr. L. V. O'Connor of Lindsay, was present in the interests of the family of the deceased.

THE EVIDENCE.

Patrick Murray stated that he had seen Mr. O'Brien talking with several other men in the coach. The accident happened between Myrtle and Burketon. Witness heard the call given for Burketon station. Mr. O'Brien left his seat and walked to one end of the coach.

"I was close behind him," Mr. Murray continued. "He reached the coach platform and ran down the steps. He just stepped right out into the dark. I heard no cry from him as he fell. The train had slowed down farther back, but it was still going at a fair speed."

Witness said he re-entered the coach and informed Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Scollard, with whom Mr. O'Brien had been sitting, that he had jumped from the steps. They immediately searched for the conductor but when they had found him they had reached the Burketon station.

JAMES SULLIVAN.

Mr. James Sullivan of Ennismore, corroborated the evidence that after Mr. O'Brien had heard the brakeman give the call for Burketon he got up and said good-bye to Mr. W. Scollard.

"He turned as if he were forgetting me," said Mr. Sullivan, "and walked to the rear of the coach. I didn't think the train was running at a high speed at that time. It seemed to be coming into Burketon station. I did not get up as I was coming on to Peterboro."

Mr. Hatton—"How do you account for the accident?"

Mr. Sullivan—"If I had been going to Lindsay I'd have got up when Mr. O'Brien did, thinking I was going into Burketon to change for Lindsay."

"Do you think Mr. O'Brien was mislead by the call?"

"I would judge by the way he said good-bye to us that he thought he was at the station."

WILLIAM SCOLLARD.

The next witness, Wm. Scollard of Peterboro, recounted the incidents previous to the accident. He heard the brakesman announcement of Burketon Junction.

"After the call," he said, "I noticed the train's speed become slower. I don't know how long it was after the call before Mr. O'Brien left us."

Mr. Hatton—"Did you think it strange that he got up and left the coach?"

"I concluded that he must have thought that when the train slowed up it was going into Burketon."

Arriving at the station Mr. Scollard and others met the conductor and told him the train should go back for Mr. O'Brien.

DR. MOIR.

Mr. O'Brien's death was caused by the injury that he received in his fall, stated Dr. Moir, who met the midnight train.

Dr. McArthur of Blackstock had been called to Burketon and accompanied Mr. O'Brien to Peterboro.

The latter was badly bruised about the head and face, particularly on the left side of the scalp, where there seemed to be a slight depression in the skull. The left shoulder was also bruised. After the wounds were dressed at St. Joseph's hospital Mr. O'Brien appeared to be recovering consciousness. He put up his hand as if to thrust the doctors away from his head, but did not regain consciousness. No bones were broken and there were no internal injuries.

The doctors left him at 2 a.m., and Dr. Moir visited him again at 8 a.m. His condition was grave and Dr. Moir called in Dr. Neal. At 11 o'clock Mr. O'Brien seemed brighter, but he died suddenly at noon.

"Dr. McArthur told me the section men had found him about four miles from Burketon.

Mr. Hatton—If the train had been backed up and Mr. O'Brien picked up do you think it would have made any difference in his chance of recovery?

Dr. Moir—I don't think so from the manner in which he died.

He was unconscious when Dr. McArthur first saw him. There was no paralysis nor indications for operative procedure. Dr. McArthur had a cold application to his head and kept him perfectly quiet on the way to Peterborough. The concussion was the cause of his unconsciousness. He seemed to have been a man in good health, although past sixty years.

CONDUCTOR F. W. ABBOTT

Mr. Abbott, conductor on the "local" on C.P.R. September 7th, said that the first intimation he had of the accident was at Burketon station, when he heard passengers discussing it. He couldn't back up the train without sending a "flag" out ahead of it, and it was quicker to send out the section men. They had left Burketon before the train continued on its way to Peterborough.

The train had stopped at Brady's flag station, three miles west of Burketon, to let off a passenger. Mr. Abbott heard the brakeman give the call for Burketon after the train had left Brady's.

Mr. Hatton—He didn't call Burketon until you had passed Brady's?

Mr. Abbott—No sir, we never call a station until we have passed the last one preceding it.

Wm. Doricutt, the brakerman, stated that Mr. O'Brien was in the coach next the baggage car when he called Burketon. The usual practice is to begin at the front of the train and proceed through to the rear. Witness knew nothing of the accident. He gave the usual call for Burketon after passing Brady's.

DISEASES AMONG CATTLE AND PIGS

Quite a Few Have Died in This Locality

A farmer near Indian River, who was in the city recently, stated that he had lost seven head of cattle through Blackleg, a much dreaded disease. In Smith, very lately, another farmer has lost two hogs and is fearful of the rest. If there is any prevention it is hoped that every measure will be taken to stamp out what is now apparently going to be an epidemic unless attended to.

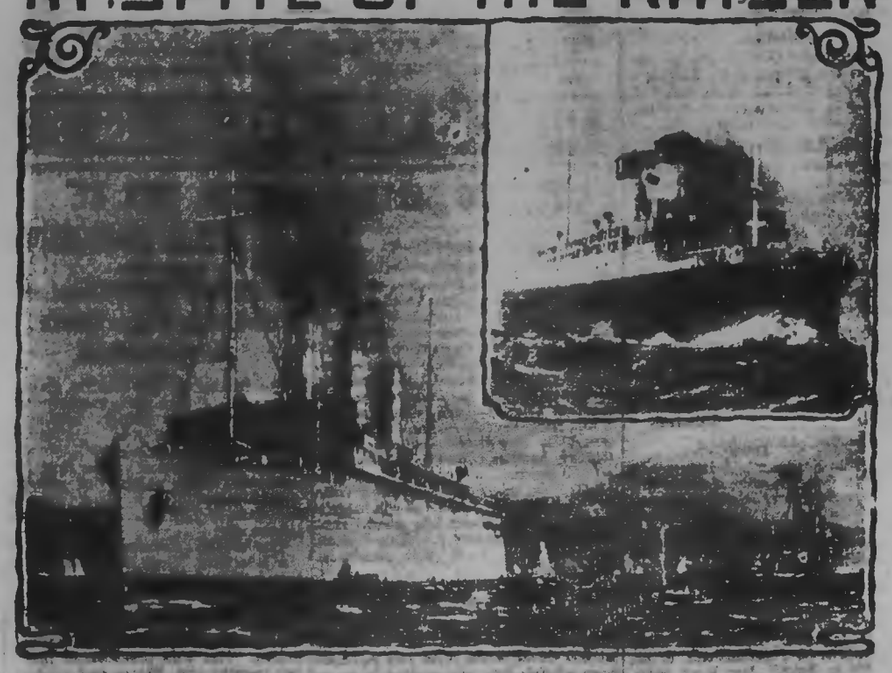
IN SPITE OF THE KAISER



(1) C. P. O. S. Pacific Liner which made a speed record a few weeks ago.
(2) C. P. O. S. Atlantic liner.

THE claim made by Kaiser Wilhelm and his satellites that the British merchantile fleets are disappearing from the ocean seems particularly ludicrous in the case of the fleet most closely associated with Canada, namely that of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, which so far from diminishing has actually increased its tonnage since the beginning of the war by nearly 30%. No fewer than 15,000 men are employed with approximately 50,000 dependents, and the numbers are steadily increasing.

Taking the Atlantic fleets first. At the outbreak of the war the steamships of the Allan Line and Canadian Pacific Co. (now known as the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services) numbered 35, with a gross tonnage of 313,000 tons. The value of these fleets to the British Empire in war-transport work has been inestimable, and the earliest possible advantage was taken of it by the British Government. Almost from the moment of declaration of war on the 4th August, 1914, a large proportion of the joint fleet was requisitioned, including the larger and newer vessels then in service. Two of the newest and largest of the Allan Line steamers were immediately put into commission as armed merchant cruisers. "The Empress of Russia," "Empress of Asia," "Empress of India," and "Empress of Japan" were immediately fitted out as armed cruisers. Many of the other vessels of the joint companies previously engaged on the passenger trade between Europe and Canada were brought into Trooping Service or employed in transporting supplies and ammunitions, not only across the Atlantic but all over the oceans of the world from the Far West to the Far East. Notwithstanding this great call on the Canadian Pacific and Allan Lines' resources, these companies have been able without break to carry on regular passenger and freight business, maintaining an uninterrupted service of mails and passenger and freight traffic westbound, as well as carrying home eastbound large supplies of troops, stores, ammunitions of war. From the outbreak of war down to the present day the Canadian Pacific and Allan vessels engaged on trooping and similar work have transported no fewer than 700,000 troops and passengers from or to Canada, the Mediterranean, India, China, Egypt, Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, or across Channel, or on the Pacific. Up to the same moment the companys' vessels since the outbreak of war have steamed over 1,230 000 miles and have carried eastbound and westbound over three million tons of cargo, munitions, supplies, etc. These figures indicate no mean contribution to the "carrying on" of the war, and constitute a splendid tribute to what Canada—Britain's Nearest Dominion—has tried to do to help the Mother Country in her hour of need. Add to this the fact that these ships have been carrying in practically every case large quantities of munitions made in the Canadian Pacific Augus Shops, the value of the contribution of the companies under notice and of the great parent company—the C. P. R.—received still greater emphasis. The Canadian Pacific Fleet, although suffering but a slight diminution of tonnage by the act of the King's enemies, has been gradually increasing by purchase or building, so that to-day the combined fleets of the Allan Line and Canadian Pacific number 40 steamers, with a gross tonnage of 411,000 tons, whilst further orders have been placed for four more of still greater tonnage. Services are being steadily maintained carrying mails for the different parts of the Dominions and the outer European ports of the Allied countries. Every means within the power of the Canadian Pacific is being used to maintain export trade and the importation of necessaries alike for the use of the armies in the fields, and for the people at home.

The recent assumption by the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services of the entire management in control of the operations of the Allan Line recalls the fact that the Allan Line was one of the first companies, if not actually the first to effect a direct service between Great Britain and Canada. The founder of the Allan Line was Captain Alexander Allan who in 1822 sailed from Glasgow to Quebec in the brig "Jean," in search of cargo for his vessel. In 1852 the sailing vessels of the Allan Line were replaced by steamships in the Canada-British trade. As showing the progressive tendencies of these hard-headed and tenacious Scottish founders of the line, it is worthy of note that the Allan Line has been pioneer (A) in the adoption of steel in the construction of its vessels; (B) in the adoption of the turbine as a mode of propulsion; (C) in the adoption of twin-screws on its steamers; and (D) bilge keels as a means of checking oscillation.

The founder's family, now headed by Col. Sir Montague Allan, C.V.O., and his cousin, Mr. H. A. Allan, always adopted a progressive policy, with the result that steady increase in the size and speed of steamers has been witnessed whenever additions to the fleet were made, and these adjuncts have done much to stimulate the demand for passenger and cargo accommodation on the Atlantic service to Canada.

Manila, in the Philippines, has also been of late brought into the service as one of the numberous ports of call in the East, and the company is steadily but surely working up a strong and useful service on the Pacific which cannot but be of the greatest advantage to the Pacific trade in general. On the Atlantic, the C. P. R. instituted its own directly owned and controlled fleet of steamers in 1903 by the purchase of the Atlantic vessels of the Elder Dempster Beaver Line, a service which has grown to its present proportions and which now includes some of the finest passenger and cargo carrying vessels plying between Canada and the Mother Country.

Fritz has not quit yet. But he is sure getting the rough end of it.

Yes I was glad to get the parcel Bob sent, and it was Jake and I hope to get the other soon. I cannot say how long I will be kept here, but I do not feel as if I could get away very soon. I thought I would make Blighty but, however, I may have a chance yet. Well this is three or four weeks now since I got it. The first couple of weeks my temperature stayed at 102, however, it is back to the place, now about 97, and I could not move without a pain catching me somewhere. Well Jennie I will have to ring off for this time. Hoping you are all well, and I am glad Fritz did not get me altogether. Well remember me to the rest.

Your loving Brother,
SPR. ADAM STARK,
Reg. 153493,
26 General Hospital, Ward 3,
France.

LINDSAY, Sept. 14.—The distressing information reached town to-day from Ottawa that Mr. John Wilford, of the Royal Flying Corps, and son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Wilford, had been officially reported missing on the Western front.

"Jack," as he was affectionately known, became attached to the air service in Canada, and after training for a time in Newoptr News, U.S. set sail for England, the latter part of January of the present year. He crossed to France on August 23rd.

His host of friends as well as the friends of the family sincerely hope that the good news will be received at an early date that he has been located.

Folowing is a letter from Pte. Southeran, who went overseas with the 235th Battalion.

England, Aug. 30th, 1917.

Dear Friend,—How is everything around Millbrook this year? I suppose the Toronto Exhibition will be over by the time you get this and it will soon be time for the big Millbrook Fair. I was in hospital at Ottawa at the time of Millbrook Central last year and now am in England. I came across with the 235th, but am now in a Reserve Battalion. We had a grand trip across, which took us eleven days. We were all glad when we landed. I thought the cars queer after riding in the Canadian trains. They travel faster here, though. We were in quarantine for some time. Twenty German 'planes dropped bombs, but they were wide of their mark. We just laughed at them wasting their bombs. A couple of bumble bees scared me worse. I ran from them. I'm a great soldier to let a couple of bees chase me. I am mail orderly here, getting along fine and feeling fit. On Tuesday night we had a very strong wind and rain storm. About 12.30 (midnight) we were all awake and talking. One lad said he would like to see some of the other tents blown down. A few minutes later a strong whiff of wind blew our tent down on top of us and we stayed under it until morning as there was no use trying to put it up that night. We got soaked with water and mud. We laughed everytime we thought about it. Fifteen other tents met the same fate. It was a great joke on us.

I have seen a lot of pretty scenery since coming across the ocean. I had my landing leave and a chum and I went to Belfast, Ireland. It is a very pretty and live city. We were used tip top. We were "guests" at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Aid Club. We were three days there and then went to Dublin. We had to watch ourselves there. We passed some of the places where the riots were. You could tell as soon as you saw it that there had been a disturbance, seeing the bricks, glass, etc., lying about, and many windows were broken in the houses, and walls knocked down. The general Post Office was destroyed by the rioters. On some streets we saw a lot of women in their bare feet sitting on the edge of walls with shawls over their heads, offering fish for sale. The streets smelled awful fishy. We were followed by five old women. We soon got away from them, if we hadn't made a quick get-away, we should have had to fight our way through the people. Dublin is against those in khaki so that is why we had to keep our eyes open and ears alert. It was a common thing to see boys leading goats up and down the streets in Dublin and Belfast and to see old women and children driving donkeys, hitched to carts. We were in Holyhead Wales. It is a very pretty part of the country, too. The Irish Channel was fine when we crossed it.

I was down to the big Canadian races at Seaford. I was in the walking contest and made the fastest quarter-mile walk in the Canadian Army, making it in 1 1-2 minutes. I was up against 25 walkers. MacDonald, of Toronto was one of them. I have beaten him twice over here. While at Seaford I saw your Miller. He was Acting Brigade Sergt.-Major. I also saw Norman Mitchell and Fred Devell. All are well and looking fit. Remember me to the Millbrook boys and girls at home.

WILL SOOTHERAN

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Figures given in the Commons to-day by the Minister of Militia, together with some recently given in replies to questions by Mr. Sinclair, indicate the rate at which the Canadian reserves overseas are being depleted under the present system of voluntary recruiting.

In August the total number of recruits was 3,009, of whom 1,251 were received from the United States. Casualties of all kinds during the month totalled 10,080.

Of the new recruits, 1,543 joined the combatant branches of the service, and 1,556 joined the non-combatant branches.

During the heavy fighting of the last two weeks of August, casualties totalled 7,586, classified as follows:

Killed in action, 907; died of wounds, 313; prisoners, 13; mising, 145; died of disease, 25; wounded, 6,183.

Allowing one-third of the wounded as being permanently disabled, this makes a permanent wastage of about 3,500 for the fortnight of heaviest fighting.

During June, July and August recruiting in Canada has totalled 13,703 while casualties of all kinds during the same three months have totalled 18,068. No official figures have yet been given classifying the recruits, according to combatant or non-combatant branches, or indicating what perentages of the casualties can be classed as being permanently disabled.

According to the August figures given, about half the new recruits are now going into the combatant ranks, while the permanent wastage at the front is, according to Militia Department unofficial records, a little more than one-third of the total casualties.

Mrs. Bertrand, 631 Union street, has received a letter from her husband, Pte. Percy Bertrand, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, in which he says, in part: "We are just having a rest now. We have had a pretty rough time. We have been through a pretty rough battle again and made another good advance. We sure made a finish of hundreds of the enemy, besides the large number of prisoners which were taken. I thank God for helping me through such an awful struggle. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wiskin of 280 Thomas street, Peterborough, sent me a nice parcel a few days ago, and I must write to-night and thank them for their kindness. It was their son that was killed shortly after the 9th of April, that I wrote, and told you about. I knew him real well and we were always together.

Mrs. Joslin, 563 Elm street has received the following letter in regard to the death of her husband:

August 25th, 1917

My Dear Mrs. Joslin:—

You will already have had the very sad news of your husband's death. It was during the very heavy fighting last week that we went [illegible] a party to try to rescue some [illegible] wounded boys. He was hit in the throat and soon gave his life, as bravely as ever, for the sake of others.

Do you remember that I once or twice wrote to you for him last winter? Much as you will grieve for your husband you will yet be very proud of him and his brave memory will be very dear to you and your children. He played a hero's part over here and has left an example of devotion which should help others in turn to do their duty.

His comrades carried his body back behind the battle line and we laid it to rest in a more peaceful spot where a cross will mark the grave. His few personal effects will be sent home to you by the authorities. May our God in His love be your comfort until He brings you together again. Your husband spoke of you with much affection and I know he would want you to be brave in your turn.

Yours very sincerely,
W. T. ARCHER,
Chaplain.

Deductions Were Regular

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—That all deductions from profits and amounts written off in the William Davies Company statements to the government were prefectly proper and regular and had nothing to do with the liabilities for war taxes. This was the assertion of E. C. Cox, the general manager of that company at the enquiry to-day. Mr. Fox further stated that although the directorates of the Wm. Davies Co. and the Harris Abbatoir Co. interlocked, there was business competition between them.

Herzog, Under Ban, Draws Suspension

Failed To Accompany Giants to Boston—May Not Be in Series

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Almost on the eve of the world's series, an announcement is made to-night by President Hempstead of the New York Giants that Captain and Third Baseman Herzog has been suspended for refusing to accompany the team on the recent trip to Boston.

Last April, when the Giants were entraining for Philadelphia, Herzog slipped and fell upon the floor of the Pennsylvania Railroad station, injuring the base of his spine, so that he was unable to play for some time. Recently he claimed the officials of the New York club had promised to allow him to rest and recuperate just as soon as the series of double-headers with the Philadelphia team was completed at the Polo Grounds. He is now at his home at Ridgely, Md. and says his medical advisers assert it would be injurious for him to play for some time.

"Player Herzog, without notifying me, did not attempt to go on the second western trip," said President Hempstead. "As soon as I heard of this I held a consultation with the club physician, Manager McGraw and Herzog. He was advised that the club needed his services, even if he did not play, and Manager McGraw advised him that he need not play if he did not feel equal to it. He changed his mind, went with the team and voluntarily played. The day before going to Boston on the last trip, Herzog notified us that he would not go with the team. Manager McGraw told him he need not play if he did not feel equal to it, but that he needed him along with the team, notwithstanding which Player Herzog left the team, and nothing was left to do but suspend him.

A case similar to that of Herzog also has arisen in the local club of the American League, which to-day indefinitely suspended Third Baseman J. Franklin Baker, for alleged insubordination.

Baker had requested permission to visit his farm in Maryland last Sunday, but was told that he had been advertised to appear at an exhibition game in Bridgeport, Conn., that day. Instead of reporting Sunday with the other players, Baker is said to have gone to Maryland. Upon his appearance at the Polo Grounds to-day he was ordered to the bench by Manager Donovan, and to-night the club announced that he had been indefinitely suspended.

80,000 French Women In Hospitals And Red Cross Work

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Henry Wood.)

With French Armies in the Field, Sept. 18.— There are eighty thousand French women serving in Red Cross ambulances and hospitals with the French armies in France, Algeria, Morocco and the Orient. Ten thousand additional women of various nationalities are aiding them. The eighty thousand are beyond all dreams of woman's part in the war which any army chief or feminist entertained back in 1914. There were just eighty permanent French women nurses before the war. Such a tremendous growth as this illustrates aptly the part in the war which France's womanhood is bearing. In recognition of the devotion of these women, France has just created a series of medals in gold, silver and bronze, which will indicate service from one to three years. Scores of nurses and hospital workers have received the highest military decoration which France has to bestow. Their deeds of heroism have paralleled those of her men. Six thousand French nurses it was estimated to-day, serve constantly in the fire zone, where they are subject to constant risk of death and wounds from shells.

WEDDING BELLS

SCOTT—GIFFORD.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's church, Chandos, on Wednesday morning, Sept. 12th, when Theresa Ann, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gifford, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Michael Francis Scott, of Clydesdale, Ont. Rev. Father Meagher performed the wedding ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The bridesmaid was Miss Mae Scott, and Mr. David Gifford, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's parents, where about fifty guests partook of a sumptuous wedding dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Scott will reside in Clydesdale.

DUFFUS—KELLOGG.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at St Peter's Cathedral, this morning, at 6 o'clock, when Miss Iris A. Kellogg of this city was united in marriage to Mr. Egbert L. Duffus, son of Mr. James J. Duffus of Romaine street, and a brother of Mayor Duffus. The bride was attended by Miss Martha O'Brien and Mr. Frank Grady was best man. Rev. Father Phelan performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate friends of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Duffus will reside in Peterborough.

Society Women Use New Wrinkle Remover

Since the discovery that a solution of ordinary saxolite and witch hazel has a peculiar effect upon wrinkled skins, it has been learned that many prominent society women all over the country have used this simple home-treatment with great success. The formula is: powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. Use daily as a wash lotion.

The beneficial action of this wash is felt at once. There's an agreeable refreshing sensation and feeling of exhilaration. Flabbiness and all wrinkles are immediately affected, and the skin soon becomes firmer and more youthful looking. No one need hesitate to get the ingredients at the drug store and make the remedy herself, for there are no harmful effects whatever.

A lawyer tells this story of himself and his efforts to correct the manners of his office boy. One morning the young autocrat came into the office, and tossing his cap at a hook, exclaimed:

"Say, Mr. Jones, there's a ball game down at the park to-day, and I'm going."

The lawyer thought he would teach him a lesson.

"Harry," he said, "that isn't the way to ask a favour. Now, you come over here and sit down, and I'll show you how to do it."

The boy took the office chair, and his employer picked up the cap and stepped outside. He then opened the door softly, and, holding the cap in his hand, said quietly to the boy in the chair:

"Please, Sir, there is a ball game at the park to-day. If you can spare me, I would like to get away for the afternoon.

Whereupon the boy replied:

"Why, certainly, Harry; and here is 50 cents to pay your way in."—New York Times.

General Cadorna Condemns Treason Behind The Lines

Commander, in First Reference to Civil Matters, Emphasizes Will to Conquer—Declares Victory For Italy is at Hand—Unrest at Home Due to Bread Shortage and Cards to Be Issued.

ROME, Sept. 19.—The Popolo Romano explains that Italy is the last of all the war countries that should be affected by the food shortage, adding: "Although poorer than England and France, and, because the protracted war has brought suffering to the people, Italy should not let her troubles appear too much on the surface nor attempt political demonstrations or violence."

The principal excuse for the present unrest being the bread shortage, the newspaper asserts that the government proposes to issue bread cards on October 11, limiting the individual consumption to a half pound daily since the wheat harvest was short ten million quintals. The recent attacks on the Ministry were based on the Turin incidents, the government being charged with negligence in not having foreseen the shortage and forced Italian farmers to produce more wheat, but it appears, says the paper, that the shortage was due to the lack of workmen in the field.

However, the socialists and the Austro-German propagandists and peace parties seized on the situation in the hope of causing more disturbances among the civil population. Parliament, when it meets in mid-October, according to the Giorn d'Italia, is expected to pass energetic measures to repress international shortage, and instance of which was the loss of a shipload of wheat off Civita Vecchia due to improper means of unloading.

Evidence of a new attitude of the Ministry toward internal disturbances is shown in General Cadorna's message to a political group at Milan, this being the first reference by the General on civil affairs since the war. The message follows:

"Any weakness behind the lines at this moment will be considered treason. We are all armed now with the will to conquer and victory is at hand. All classes and all parties must remember that Italy knows only one way."

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 81 cars, with 1,470 head of cattle, 45 calves, 481 hogs and 952 sheep and lambs.

There was but a light run of fresh cattle in yesterday, but with about 1,200 held over from Monday's market there was plenty for all requirements. The demand for butcher cattle was slow, and the general trend of prices was easier. Good loads of butcher steers and heifers barely held steady, and in some cases sold about 15c. lower than Monday. Medium and common cattle are a good 35c. lower for the week.

There was a fair demand for stockers and feeders, Monday's easier prices holding steady.

Calves are a little easier.

Millers Fix Price.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 18.—All the big milling companies have agreed on a price for flour and also on certain changes in the matter of delivery. The millers state that as no fixed price for flour has been made in Canada, and as the price for wheat is identical in both Canada and the United States, they have made their prices as nearly in accord with the American prices as possible. That is, the American law limits the profit on flour to 25 cents per barrel and on feed to 50 cents per ton.

The cash price, in car lots, on the basis per barrel of 196 pounds in 98-pound sacks, is as follows, according to territory:

Ontario, west, of and including Fort William and Port Arthur, The Pas, Manitoba, east of and including Portage la Prairie, $11.

Manitoba, west of Portage la Prairie, $10.90. Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia, east of and including Golden, Cranbrook, also Kootenay Central Railway, $10.80. Revelstoke, Nelson, and common places, $10.90. British Columbia, coast, Okanagan Valley, Kettle Valley, Grand Forks, Midway, Phoenix, and Greenwood, $11.00. Vancouver Island, $11.05.

These Men Will Help You Decide

Are you liable to be selected for service under the Military Service Act?

The answer to this question is being made readily available for you. Remember that the first class to be called includes only men between the ages of 20 and 34, both inclusive, who are unmarried or widowers without children, those married after July 6, 1917, being deemed single for the purposes of the Act.

Medical Boards are now being established throughout Canada. These Boards will examine, free of charge and obligation, all men who wish to be examined as to their physical fitness for military service. They will tell you in a very short time whether your physical condition absolves you from the call or makes you liable for selection.

It is important that you obtain this information as soon as possible. A certificate of unfitness from a Medical Board will secure for you freedom from responsibility under the Military Service Act from any Exemption Tribunal. A certificate of fitness will not preclude an appeal for exemption on any ground.

In order that you may be able to plan your future with certainty, visit a Medical Board as soon as possible and find out if you are liable to be selected. Your family and your employer are interested as well as yourself.

The Military Service Council.

NO RELIEF SHIPS USED AS DECOYS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—In response to Great Britain's protest against the charge that Belgian relief ships acted as decoys to trap submarines, the German Foreign Office has explained that the accusation was based upon the report of a submarine commander who said the Baron Baevens, a relief steamer, turned toward him when sighted.

The German statement, forwarded to the British Embassy here, from London, says that the Baron Baeyens flew flags and pennants indicating her connection with Belgian relief and that the submarine commander had to conclude that in making use of the distinctive signs she was acting as a trap for submarines because "the steamer on coming in sight turned toward the submarine and when the submarine abstained from attacking and went off turned back again."

The British Government stated that the vessel in question had been continually in the service of Belgian relief and had been furnished with safe conducts for all her voyages. She displays by order all the distinctive markings in amplification of repeated assurances that relief vessels and markings will never be used for any purpose other than that for which they are intended.

STORM WINDOWS VITAL

Fuel Economy Depends Upon Radiation Losses—Saving One-half

The cost of fuel is a large item of expense to the householder. Anything that can be done to reduce this cost without suffering inconvenience from the cold should be welcomed by all. The average householder has but little knowledge of the principles and application of heating, and there are many portions of Canada where the saving of fuel by the use of storm windows (commonly known as double windows) is not fully appreciated.

Heat is lost from a building in two ways, by (1) radiation, that is, that transferred through walls, windows and other exposed surfaces by conduction and lost, and (2) convection currents, or leakage, namely the losses through the openings around windows, doors, etc. By the opening of outside doors much heat is lost. This, to a great extent, can be overcome by the use of storm or outside doors. Better still is the storm porch, which allows of one door being closed before the other is opened. This porch may be removable, to permit of the use of all verandah space in summer.

The radiation losses are usually of greater importance than the convection. As losses due to radiation from walls, floor, ceiling and doors are determined by the structural features of the house, they are largely unavoidable. The most serious radiation losses are from windows and the saving of heat resulting from the use of storm windows is largely due to the layer of dead air—one of the best non-conductors—between the inner and the storm sashes. Storm windows also prevent uncomfortable drafts.

The great heat loss from single windows is demonstrable. A square foot of window surface radiates as much heat as 2½ square feet of an 8-inch brick wall surface. Storm windows reduce the loss to nearly one-half of this amount. In addition, they reduce the loss due to leakage and save from 10 to 15 per cent. of the fuel bill.

German Fairy Tales

If the censor does not tell Britain exactly all that happens, that is better than the German style of telling the people lots of things that never happen at all. A girl who arrived home in London after a long detention in Berlin, had to be taken to the City by her father before she could be got to believe that St. Paul's Cathedral was still standing. She had been quite convinced to the contrary, because she had seen, at a Berlin "movie," a picture showing the actual ruins of St. Paul's after a Zeppelin raid.—Tit-Bits.

A High Wycombe (Bucks) firm is executing a first order for a thousand clock cases of the kind formerly made in Germany and Austria.

The general atmosphere of the trenches can be summed up in the phrase, "shell fire, slush, and smiles."—Sir R. S. Baden-Powell.

There must be no listening for a moment to foolish and short-sighted people who talk of making peace.—Bishop of London.

For every trained chemist we can boast of Germany has no fewer than forty-two!—Dr F. A. Mason.

To Restore Wet Shoes

Remove the shoes immediately, and wash off all mud. Wipe thoroughly with an old cloth, then rub in plenty of vaseline, and set aside away from the fire for several days. When quite dry the grease will have restored the natural oil, and the shoes will be almost as good as new.

When You Eat Dinner To-day

Give thanks, please, to those valiant men who, on the fields of France and Flanders, hold back the Hordes of Destruction, and make possible the peaceful enjoyment of your meal.

Some of those men have not had a sight of a home meal for three years. Home to them is a vision—a hope—a prayer. Will you let them suffer still further for want of food?

You cannot—will not—must not.

Resolve then, to sign and live up to the letter of the Food Service Pledge.

Eat less Beef, Bacon and White Bread so that we may have sufficient of these foods for export.

Instead of buying so much white flour (if you do your own baking), use one-third oatmeal, corn, barley or rye flour. If you get bread from a baker, order some brown bread each day.

Second, substitute for beef and bacon such equally nutritious foods as fish, peas, lentils, potatoes, nuts, bananas, etc.

Third,—prevent the waste of a single ounce of food in your household.

For the honour of Canadian womanhood, Sign and Live up to the Food Service Pledge.

Practical Housekeeping Hints

HOW BEST TO USE CEREALS

Cereals rank first among vegetable foods. They contain in varying proportions all the elements necessary to support life. They contain a great deal of starch, which is needed to keep the body warm and to make it do its work. A bowl of oatmeal, eaten for breakfast, will furnish the average man with all the strength, heat and energy he will need. Cereals with cooked fruits are particularly appetizing.

It is best not to buy cereals in very large quantities, because if they are kept too long insects are apt to develop in them. Cereals should always be kept in glass-covered jars.

Cereals are improved by long cooking. Therefore, oatmeal, hominy and other cereals which are left over can be added next day to the fresh-cooked cereals.

All cereals should be cooked at first for ten minutes directly over the fire, and then put into a double boiler. If you haven't a double boiler, place the saucepan containing the cereal in a larger saucepan that contains hot water. By using a fireless cooker you can prepare your cereal at night, cook it on the stove for about ten minutes, put it in the fireless cooker, and when you get up in the morning you will find it all cooked and ready to be eaten. In this way you save both time and fuel.

Cereals requiring more than one hour to cook should be cooked the day before they are to be eaten and reheated in the morning.

Coarse, flaky cereals should be stirred as little as possible. Fine granular cereals may be beaten.

WHAT THE END OF THE WAR MUST BE.

(New York Journal of Commerce.)

Whatever pretense may be brazenly kept up by the official voice of the German Empire, the world knows now why it precipitated this war and what it intended that its should be. It had been boldly preparing for it at least a quarter of a century and its chief spokesmen made no secret of that fact, however incredulous those who listened might be. The Empire armed itself to the teeth, cased itself in protective armour and trained its forces to the height of effectiveness and brutality for a purpose. Its determination was not only to dominate Central Europe, carry its sway eastward over Turkey and the Black Sea into Asia and Africa, and over the seas, but to make a display of armed power that would make other nations subservient if not submissive.

What becomes of the present Kaiser and Imperial brood of ministers is a minor consideration, but their power and influence must be destroyed. If it is accomplished with the aid of those who have been its deadly and unconscious victims, so much the better for them and for the cause, as well as for those who have the task on their hands of compelling it. The American republic with its resources, its men and its spirit of freedom, is destined to be the decisive factor. Its people have the opportunity of teaching Central Europe a lesson which it greatly needs.

War Cripples Everywhere At Work in Paris

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Even as late in the war as last year it was impossible for me to repress a shudder when some of the dear shattered wounded went by. It seemed to me that the time would never come when these harvests of the almost death could appear normal—natural.

I resented their armless sleeve, their turned up bit of red trouser leg; I loathed all it represented of human suffering; I raged at the juvenile enemy it suggested. The swing-swing of their crutches as they moved slowly forward was much worse to me than the patient little tap of a wooden leg.

But now, some way, that has gone. Busy, energetic men stump vigorously over the pavement on the way to work. Under that powerless arm with its carefully gloved wooden hand is a huge package of papers—a chief of a bureau hurrying back after lunch.

Refill Civilian Positions.

So common has it become, and yet so thoroughly are the men equipped with the latest devices in artificial limbs, that there is only a warm glow now at the unquenchable optimism and courage of the man who has set himself out to learn a new trade; a new life against such odds. No more of that horror, of that sickness at the sight of poor, mangled beings. To-day Paris is refilling her civilian positions with men of this sort. There isn't a restaurant where at least one of the waiters or one of the chasseurs hasn't a wooden leg. There isn't a shop or a bank or a office in town where there aren't clerks whose arms or hands are gone. The little grey glove usually tells the fate. But ribbons are measured; books wrapped up; drugs poured carefully out drop by drop, by this same clerk.

The chauffeur of a well-known Chicagoan who is here has only half of his right hand, and yet he is as steel-quick in the melee of this Paris traffic as any two handed man could be.

Get Systematic Training.

A large part of this is due to special training in convalescense hospitals, and another share to the improved apparatus which are manufactured nowadays.

I was interested a few days ago in seeing the work that is done at the "White House"—an institution for preparing the amputated men for a new profession. This institution is just a year old. That was what the party was for, in celebration. It is the gift of Mr. Stotesbury of Philadelphia and was secured to France by Mrs. Baylies, who has had charge of the work in New York.

She wired Mr. Stotesbury: "I need $80,000. Can I have it?"

The school was built and the running expenses, amounting to $5,000 a month, are all met by the banker.

Fields of Employment.

There have been 1,600 men received there who have had either arms or legs off. They have been fitted with perfect artificial limbs and have received a training for some useful, well paying position. Among other things, accounting, stenography, commercial drawing, as well as applied design and decoration, mechanics, auto driving, carpentering, sculpture and wood carving, saddlery, tanning, horticulture. I can't begin to enumerate to you the different occupations to which the various men are apprenticed according to their tastes. And in addition to this there are night classes organized for the less educated. It is surprising to see, after working all day, how many of the men want to study English or Spanish at night.

A 12 Year Old Victim.

Among those coming forward the other day for his diploma was a little boy of 12. He had great dark eyes under smiling brows, a sweet, fresh face—but you wanted to take him home to one of our big, breezy western farms and feed him milk and eggs and butter all day while he chased bumblebees and grew fat. He hopped quickly along over the big paved court to get his diploma for his year's schooling; and it wasn't until he got out from behind the row of chairs that I saw that both his legs had been cut off, and that the funny old fashioned trousers, that made me smile at first of such a wee kiddie, were only there to cover up the ugly joints of wood and leather, and to let peep out at the bottom the little wooden feet on which he balanced himself so agilely without a stick or a cane.

His mother was a widow living at Amiens, and in one of the aerial bombardments one of her legs was taken off, and both of the little boy's. But they say that in the year that he has been at "La Maison Blanche" no one has ever heard him complain when all the tedious and painful fitting of the apparatus was going on. That, on the contrary, he used to run after the men who, driven almost to frenzy by the irritating pain of the new, unaccustomed legs would try to throw them away, and coax the men to resume them.

A PRAYER.

O Thou, who from Thy radiant throne above
Rulest on earth, supreme, in power and love,
Grant me unfailing vigour, so I may,
Labour, for Thee, until life's sunset ray.

Bid me go work on in Thy vineyard here,
Till Thou shalt call me to a higher sphere;
Then at the welcome word, would I lay down
The toil, and sadness, for the stargemed crown.

Let not decay before time's footsteps steal,
And life's warm current in my veins congeal;
Nor age decripit, waste in sloth supine,
The trancient day, before the eve's decline.

Fain would I girt, in ready armour stand,
Eager to forward, move, at Thy command;
Willing to sow, although no harvest hoards,
The unresponsive, sterile soil affords.

Grant me like Him, who died, on Nebo's height,
With eye undimmed and unabated might,
In warlike gear, to die upon the field;
Nor 'ere till then, the strenuous battle yield.

But if Omnicient wisdom should deny,
My selfish wish, instead, decree, that I,
Find swift discharge, amid the thick of fray,
While scarce life's sun has reached Meredian Day.

Be mine, sweet grace, to take the seeming ill
In resignation, to His righteous will,
On strength Almighty, calm, submissive, rest,
Sure that what ere a Father sends, is best.

Aye, worthier far than costliest sacrifice,
Obedient faith is reckoned, in His eyes;
And the reward, of patient hope, and love,
Is endless service in the realms above.

—Mrs. A. F. Calder.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Several years ago the late Booker T. Washington made an address in a small town in Georgia on the duty of the white man to the black, and of the black man to the white. Washington, always an effective speaker, was at his best that night. At the conclusion of the speech, an elderly gentleman with white hair and in the dress of a well-to-do planter came to the platform. "Washington," he said, "I want to do what I never thought I'd do in my life—I want to clasp your hand. And, furthermore, I want to tell you that, regardless of colour, you are the smartest man I ever heard talk." "I thank you for the compliment, but you do me too much honour," said Washington. "How about Colonel Roosevelt?" "Oh, him—" snorted the Georgian. "I ain't had no use for him since he invited you to dinner."

Mr. Frank Adams returned last night from Toronto.

CULINARY MAKESHIFTS

In frying porridge its crispness will be improved if it is first dipped in white of egg.

A quart of water to each pound of meat is the usual proportion in making soup.

Cold cooked vegetables may be used for salads or for cream soups.

The water in which any vegetables except potatoes or cabbage have been cooked may be used for the basis of a soup, or to add to the stock pot; there is considerable nutriment in it.

Throw a handful of coarse salt over the coals when broiling steak, and the dripping fat will not blaze up and smoke the meat. A very small pinch of salt added to the whites of eggs before beating them will make them come quickly to a stiff froth.

Salt mackerel is delicate and digestible if, after soaking in cold water over night, skin side up, it is put on a broiler over a large pan of boiling water in the oven and steamed until tender. Slide on to a hot platter and pour over a little cream sauce.

A change in rice puddings may be made by adding two or three pared and cored apples to the milk and rice; then bake as usual, but add a little more sugar than customary. The proper portion of rice is two tablespoonfuls to a quart of new milk; then bake slowly till rich and creamy.

It is a good plan in summer to can any extra vegetables for soup in winter. Different kinds can be cut into very small pieces, cooked until thoroughly done, and canned in small jars, adding half a teaspoonful of salt to each jar. Celery, tomatoes, onions, carrots and beans or peas and corn are all good put together in this way, and are a great improvement to the winter soup.

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

594 CHAMPLAIN ST., MONTREAL.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Diz. y Spells, and when I took food, felt very tired and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen.

A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LAMBRE.

A woman owning a house in Philadelphia before which a gang of workmen was engaged in making street repairs, was much interested in the work.

"And which is the foreman?" she asked of a big curly Celt.

A proud smile came to the countenance of that individual as he replied. "Oi am, mum."

"Oi kin prove it, mum," rejoined the Irishman. Then turning to a laborer at hand, he added, "Kally, ye're fired!"—Harper's.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVMN

It is not in the sheltered garden or in the hot house, but on the rugged Albine cliffs where storms beat most violently, that the toughest plants are reared. The oak that stands alone to contend with the tempest's blasts only takes deep root and stands firmer for ensuing conflicts; while the forest three, when the woodman's axe has spoiled its surroundings, sways and bends and trembles and perchance is uprooted. So it is with men. Those who are trained for self-reliance are ready to go out and contend in the sternest conflicts of life; while men who have always leaned for support on those around them, are never prepared to breast the storms of adversity that arise. Many a young man, and for that matter, many of those who are older—halts at his outset upon life's battlefield and falters and faints for what he conceived to be the necessary capital for a start. A few thousand dollars or hundreds, or something handsome in the way of money in his purse, he fancies to be about the only thing necessary to procure his fortune.

How many of our readers think as often as they should of their mother, their dear old-fashioned mother? Other faces may fade away and be forgotten, but her's will shine on forever. When in the fitful pauses of life our feet wander back to the old homestead, and crossing the well worn threshold, stand once more in the room so hallowed by her presence, how the feelings of childish innocence and independence overcome us, and we kneel down in the molten sunshine streaming through the window, just where year's ago we knelt at our mother's knee lisping, "Our Father." How many times when the tempter hurried us on, has the memory of those sacred hours, that mother's words, her faith and prayers saved us from plunging into the deep abyss of sin. Years have filled great drifts between her and us, but they have not hidden from our sight the memory of her pure unselfish love. Dear old-fashioned mother.

People of means and taste may make their homes perfect dreams of beauty, but they cannot make them too beautiful, as long as the comfort and happiness of the inmates are sought and promoted. Surely money cannot be expended to a better purpose than in making and adorning a home for one's self and loved ones, and furnishing it with all that is calculated to foster in the inhabitants thereof of love of home, as well as a love of the true and beautiful and the good; and even poor people will best secure their own happiness by toiling and saving to acquire and embelish homes for themselves. There is a pleasure that is rare, rapturous, and absorbing, and love of home is as noble and ennobling of feeling as can still the human soul.

Let the young people who weekly read this column never lose an opportunity to say a kind word to their parents. Your parents have planned for your best interests all these years. They may sometimes (their nervous system all used up by the cares, and losses, the disappointments, the worries of life) be more irritable than they ought to be, and they probably have faults which have become oppressive as the years go by. But those long before they took on spectacles, were watching for your welfare, and their hands, not as smooth and more deeply lined than once, have done for you many a good day's work. Life has been to them more of a struggle than you shall ever know about, and much of the struggle has been for you, and how much they are wrapped up in your welfare you will never appreciate.

* * *

What tribute more wholesome, effective and lasting could be chiseled on a granite shaft erected to the honor of any man than to say that he was a good neighbor. Do you, Mr. Reader, so live that when your time shall come that those who have known you, may join in such a token of respect, esteem and admiration?

Love and appreciation are to a woman what dew and sunshine are to a flower. They freshen and brighten her whole life. They make her strong-hearted and keen-sighted in everything affecting the welfare of her home. They make her to cherish her husband when the cares of life press heavily upon him; and to be a very providence to her children. To know that her husband loves her and is proud of her, and believes in her; that even her faults are looked upon with tenderness; that her face, to one at least, is the fairest in all the world; that the heart which to her is the greatest and noblest, holds her sacred in his innermost recesses above all other women, gives a strength and courage and energy and sweetness and vivacity which all the wealth of the world could not bestow.

* * *

It is unity which makes the happiness of a home. One discontented and disloyal member can spoil the peace of a household and make a place of torment where paradise should be.

* * *

Why are some people all smiles when their visitors are about, and all frowns when all are gone but the home folks? Why not have some smiles for the family?

Solomon did not set up one standard for the girls and another for the boys, he says "train up a child." One child in the dear home nest is as lovely to us as another, and yet there are but few homes where the boys are as tenderly shielded as the girls.

$1,100 RECOVERED

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—While on her way back to the plant of the National Leather Belting Company with the weekly payroll of $1,100, Miss Katherine Dickstern, twenty-one years old, of No. 304 East Broadway, was assaulted and robbed of the money by Michael Valentine, twenty-three years old, of No. 150 West Seventeenth street. Miss Dickstern pursued the thief, placed him under arrest, and recovered the stolen money.

Miss Dickstern had a cashed cheque for the $1,100 at the Market and Fulton National Bank, of New York, at 81 Fulton street, and was returning with the money to the office of the company at No. 342 East Thirty-eight street. When she turned into Thirty-eight street from First Avenue, she was accosted by Valentine, who jostled her, pulled the envelope containing the money from under her arm and ran west.

Shouting "stop thief" as she ran, Miss Dickstern pursued Valentine for more than a block. Near the corner of Second Avenue she caught up with him and grabbed his arm. Several persons who had joined in the pursuit offered to assist her in bringing the young man back to the company's office, but Miss Dickstern refused their assistance and single-handed marched him back to the plant. Policeman Matbeck, of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who was summoned, searched the prisoner and in his inside coat pocket the missing payroll was found.

After the thief had been locked up at the station house on a charge of assault and robbery, Miss Dickstern was highly praised for her courage in arresting Valentine, by both the police and her employers.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I find in 1st Peter 3-15, we are too ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason for this hope we possess. Look at one or two other places about hope. Titus 2-12 to 4th verses and Heb. 6-18-19.

I have been led to look pretty solemn at the situation, and if there was not something good in me a good many people have been deceived or mistaken.

When I was a mere boy or young man, and went into some neighbours' homes they would ask me to pray with, or for them, and I never; but once as I remember excused myself and my class in Keene used to often come of an evening and take possession of my home and enjoy themselves and on going away leave something good behind for which I was truly thankful.

And once walking with a friend to a meeting followed by tea in this city he said "you may think something of yourself or you would not be sent here." And when the late Dr. Andrews after preaching more than 50 years passed away in the absence of an expected minister, I was requested to hold religious service beside the departed, to me at least it was solemn. Mind I never had much schooling, but when the late James Stratton a few days before he passed away met and spoke to me. While talking to another man on the market, then stepped on and came back and spoke to me about the prospect in the future. Now the Book declares them that honour me, I will honour. Oh, how wonderfully this has been fulfilled in my case, in many many ways, not only in those cases of which I have spoken, but many many others.

Oh taste and see that God the Lord is good. Blessed is the man that trusteth in Him. Psalm 34-8.

Now in my youth I wanted to preach the Gospel, but my father wanted me to take care of him in his declining years and I became a farmer, in my views that is the grandest business under the sun, all but one to cast the seed into the soil and then look to our Father in Heaven for the rain and sunshine and the various influences needed, all coming from a kind Father; we may at any time soon realize how helpless we are. But I thought that if you will print what I write, I will yet preach or spread the Gospel for I believe it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes.

Let thy prize before thee
Gird thine armour on;
Heir of Grace and Glory,
Struggle for thy crown.

The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men.

TWO CRAZY MEN INHABIT A SWAMP NEAR CAMERON

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—Two men who are supposed to be insane now inhabit a wood lot near Cameron, according to a report received yesterday.

One of the men had been a lunatic in the county jail until about two months ago, when he was given his discharge by the jail surgeon, Dr. Jeffers. On his previous arrest by Constable Conquergood he had as few clothes on him as Adam before he partook of the apple in Paradise and was taken with some difficulty by the officer. Constable Parkes and Thornbury scoured the woods on Saturday last, but got no trace of the fugitives, whom it is understood carry firearms with which to defend themselves.

A warrant was sworn out by a daughter of one of the men, who is fearful lest they should do bodily harm to the residents. Another search will be made for them later on. How they subsist in the woods is an unexplained mystery.

New Drug Acts on Every Organ of Body

Makes Your Checks Rosy.

A pale face, sallow complexion, weak stomach, clogged liver, painful kidneys, catarrh affections, rheumatic pain, run-down and anemic conditions of the whole system are caused from an impure, thin and watery condition of the blood. All these organs of the body are directly dependant on the blood for their source of strength. It will be a great boom to all these thousands of weak, anaemic, nervous, run-down people to hear and learn about this new drug "Ronisd Phosphorus with Iron." After each meal and at bedtime take from two to three of these tablets with a little water. You will note that you will get results after the first few doses the iron acts immediately upon the blood while the phosphorus goes direct to the spine, the center of the nervous system.

As soon as you get the blood purified and the nerves soothed, the stomach, liver and kidneys begin to do their work and in 8 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger. Your blood pressure will be increased, making your cheeks rosy and you once more have that vigorous, vivacious, keen, bright, alert feeling of boyhood days. The new drug is dispensed by F. C. Webber.

Two Subs. Sunk By British Naval Forces

Inside Story Of The Crisis That Russia Has Just Passed Through

At Moment When Korniloff's Revolt Was At Its Height Russia's "Peace At Any Price" Fanatics Were in Control in Petrograd and Kernesky Was Virtually a Prisoner---Terrorists Roamed About the City Unhampered and All Semblance of Order Disappeared---Two German Subs Sunk

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By William G. Shepherd, Copyright 1917, by the United Press.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, September 19.—At the moment when Korniloff's revolt was at its height, Russia's "peace at any price" fanatics were in the saddle in Petrograd, Premier Kerensky was virtually a prisoner in the Winter Palace and armed mobs, delirious with power, roamed the streets. This story of wild excesses, of the growing power of the Bolsheviki adherents, and of Russia's perilous situation of last week, can now be told for the first time from this neutral port. A Bolsheviki censor was in control at Petrograd.

When Korniloff's rebellion menaced Petrograd, Premier Kerensky, searching for defenders, released and armed the Kronstadt sailors and workmen who last July terrorized the city. He hoped to send these men against the rebels.

They instantly assumed control of the city's streets. Great motor trucks loaded with the terrorists of July roamed about the city unhampered. Kerensky, in the Winter Palace, was to all intent and purposes, a prisoner. Outside his door, on the streets nearby, and all through the city, they rejoiced in the wildest excesses of joy. They sang and danced deliriously. All semblance of order in the city disappeared. That was on Friday. On the same night, the same type of Bolsheviki fanatics assumed control of the Workmen and Soldiers' Council at Petrograd. They sought to impose a resolution for instant peace on what remained of the Russian governamental machinery. They demanded Kerensky's removal immediately. They insisted that Tschernog, the extreme Radical, who was formerly Minister of Agriculture, be made Premier. President Tschsidse of the Council alone prevented such revolutionary action. He counselled for adjustment.

Three times on Friday Kerensky arranged new ministries. Thrice the Bolsheviki force arrogantly rejected his selections.

LONDON, September 19.—The official statement issued to-day by the British War Office concerning military operations on the battle front in France and Belgium says: "The successful raid against German positions in Inverness Copse reported in last night's communique was made by troops of Cork and Lancaster regiments. There was nothing of special interest to report."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

GENEVA, September 19.—American Minister Stovall has been summoned to Washington at President Wilson's request to report on the Swiss food situation, according to word received here to-day. Stovall has already left Switzerland.

COPENHAGEN, September 19.—Two German submarines have been sunk by British naval forces near the Danish coast. Six men from the U-boat were taken prisoners.

BERLIN, September 19.—French aerial squadrons on Sunday bombarded several German cities in Wurttemburg, Rhenish Prussia and Upper Alsace, according to an official statement issued to-day by the German War Office. Text of the announcement reads: Our enemies on Sunday undertook several bombing raids against south German territory. Stutgart, Tuebingen, Freudenstadt, Oberndorg, St. Ongbert, Saarbruecken and Colcar, were attacked. The War Office said one soldier was wounded, but otherwise there were neither losses nor material damage as a result of the raids.

GERMANY SEES HERSELF BALKED IN RUSSIA

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, September 19.—England sees in the recrudescence of German peace feelers admission of a Russian plot that failed. Germany now hopes to make peace before the Russian army, re-organized, re-habilitated and modernized by American aid, can get into action, making complete the cordon of the Allies about her strongholds.

The German peace discussion is raging unhampered by censorship in the German press. No doubt was erpressed here that the greater part of the editorials and review articles are inspired.

As observers here read the signs to-day, Germany now sees herself balked in Russia. She fomented mutiny in the ranks of General Brusiloff's soldiers when they began making alarming inroads against the Teutonic Lemberg line. She started what was extensively advertised as a tremendous land and sea offensive against Riga and Petrograd. She took advantage of General Korniloff's revolt to press her agents in the Russian army to dedoubled activity. Russia survived all these. Where Germany had hoped to frighten Russia into a separate peace, the Teutonic leaders probably now see they have stung the new democracy into action.

NO MORE PEACE OFFERS WILL BE MADE BY POPE

Vatican Now Believes That the War Must Go On at Least Two or Three Years More and Peace is at Present Impossible

NO MORE NEGOTIATIONS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. — Pope Benedict has made his last peace proffer, according to official cables received here to-day. The Holy See believes the war must go on at least two or three more years more—until the full effect of the Allies' vast power has been felt and either a victory or a hopeless deadlock in the great struggle reached. The United Press was informed on the highest authority today that the Vatican realizes that peace or further negotiations at present are impossible. President Wilson's rejection of the Pope's last peace offer —which rejection was heartily approved by the Allies—has convinced the Vatican that the Allies want no peace which will leave the Central Powers under their present rulers. No peace is possible—which is based on mutual concessions as suggested by the Pope. It is realized by the Vatican that the Allies, with America's vast resources now thrown into the balance, now have the upper hand, and can wring from the Central Powers a peace acceptable to the democracies. Any further proffers would be foredoomed to failure. Official cables to-day state that Vatican circles throw out the suggestion of an understanding, at least between England and Italy, that no peace proposals emanating from the Vatican shall be seriously considered, and that when peace negotiations begin, the church is not to be admitted into the pour parlers. These hints go so far as to say that Italy's entrance into the war hinged upon acceptance of this condition, two years ago. It is added that this has never been denied by the Allied powers.

Medical Regulations Are Tightened Up Under Draft System

Defective Eyesight No Bar to Service in the Trenches If Defect Can Be Overcome By Glasses---Other Changes Announced by the Director of Medical Services--To-day's General Military News.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—Since the great demand for recruits under the draft system is for infantrymen and trench fighters, it is becoming increasingly difficult for Class One men to dodge that service, the latest list of amendments to the medical regulations issued by the Director of Medical Services for the Dominion, just fresh from the printers, and intended to cover the present examination of applicants, showing a marked tightening up in many phases of the physical examinations. The inevitable result of the amendments is that hundreds of men will be put in Grade A. and classed as infantrymen who formerly might have slipped through and been listed as overseas non-combatants. Perhaps the greatest shock of all will be that which comes to many young men who have been relying on defective vision to stand between them and Grade A. service, the latest regulations stating that any man whose eyesight can be improved with glasses to see to shoot, and who has no other physical defect sufficient in itself to debar him, shall be listed as fit for duty in the first category, that is, for infantry service. Future tests of eyesight will not be made with the naked eye alone, as any man showing a sufficient defect with the naked eye to bar him from the first grade, will be tried out by an eye specialist with a variety of lenses to see whether or not, with proper treatment, his sight could be brought up to a point where he could see to shoot. From the standpoint of eyesight, a man must be in pretty bad shape to miss Grade B., that is, overseas non-combatant service, though the old regulations stand for this grade. Even though the applicant may be totally blind in one eye, if he has fair vision with the other with the use of glasses, he is to be put in Grade B. The only eye condition which will completely bar an applicant for some form of service is near or total blindness in one eye from a disease which already has, or threatens to effect the other eye. It may be interesting to the general public to know that a squint, though of the compound variety which affects both eyes, is not a handicap to the fighting aspirant.

LOST FINGER NO BARRIER.

Another striking amendment shoves the man with one missing finger from Grade B up to Grade A. while the man with one or two of the lesser toes missing from either or both feet, also becomes a fighter. There was once a time when an applicant suffering from hernia was recommended for an operation at the Government expense, but now the regulations state that if the hernia can be securely held by a truss, the man shall be put in Grade A, otherwise he becomes a total reject as there are no intervening stages for this trouble. Suspected cases of pulmonary tuberculosis are to be carefully investigated, and already this order has resulted in a number of applicants being instructed to return later. In cases of acute colds the medical men find it impossible to determine whether or not the lungs or bronchial tubes have been permanently affected. The question of poor hearing promises to bar a few but the man with little or no hearing in one ear will be put in Grade A, provided he can hear the ordinary voice with the other ear at a distance of twenty-one feet, while he qualifies for Grade B if he has lost the hearing of one ear and understands the ordinary voice with the other at fifteen feet. Enlarged tonsils are no longer a barrier to service, the regulations stating that where the removal of chronically inflamed tonsils will fit a man for grade A, an operation should be performed. On the whole, the medical regulations are gradually tightening down, and perhaps a study of the above will enable the average applicant to form some idea as to just what will be his fate before the medical board.

The Lindsay Warder says:—

A meeting of the Great War Veterans was held at the Armouries on Monday night, with the President in the air, when fifteen returned men turned out to discuss matters relative to the situation. There promises to be a great treat in store for the people who attend the concert in the Armouries Thursday evening. A thoroughly excellent programme has been arranged and a grand success is expected. Sergt. Victor, with his group of comedians, has kindly consented to come from Peterborough and a number of speakers, including our worthy friend, Mr. Bradford, and other prominent gentlemen will be on deck. The people

MEDICAL EXAMINATION PRIOR TO PROCLAMATION

Board of Trade Endorses Proposal That Men of First Class Be Enabled to Present Themselves Before the Official Call is Made —Will Assist Manufacturers.

MANY CALLED, FEW REJECTED

At the request of the Military Service Council the Board of Trade last night discussed the Government's proposal to secure the medical examination of the men of the first conscriptive class prior to the issuance of the proclamation that officially calls up for examination all the men of this class. By this time it is probably generally known that the first class comprises unmarried men between twenty and thirty-four years of age and childless widowers between the same years. The advantages of this proposal were indicated last night. It will relieve the Medical Boards of the congestion of the work that would otherwise follow the proclamation, and it should materially assist manufacturers in estimating, previous to the operation of the exemption boards, the effect on their staffs of the first draft. The character and importance of this assistance were carefully explained by Messrs. S. Cameron and Major A. W. McPherson, and finally a resolution was passed on a motion by Mr. J. W. Worth, seconded by Mr. W. R. Morris, that the Board of Trade and the citizens of Peterborough keenly desire the fullest co-operation with the Military Service Council in the physical examination of men of the first class before the proclamation is issued.

Mr. J. J. Turner presided at the meeting which was well attended. Manufacturers, merchants, bankers and other employers were among those present. The scope of the Medical Boards was clearly set forth by Dr. Cameron who stated that the Chief Medical Officer of this district was expected in Peterborough on Wednesday night when it was expected the local board would be apprised of the complete plans of the Military Council. The local Medical Board will consist of three doctors, one of whom is yet to be appointed with Major Cameron and Major Eastwood.

No Exceptions.

When the proclamation has been issued all men of the first class must appear before the Medical Board. There will be no exceptions made of those who have buttons or other certificates of examination under voluntary recruiting. If a man is found physically unfit that ends his career as a soldier. If he is fit for service, but desires exemption he must appear before the local tribunal and state his case.

The New Categories.

Major Cameron emphasized the new basis of classification. Formerly if a man had a minor defect that excluded him from service in the trenches he was rejected as unfit. At the present time it will be difficult for a man to be rejected. When examined he will be listed in one of four categories. The first category, A, will include all men who are physically fit to go into the trenches.

Category B will show all those who are fit to go overseas. Section (1) will be all those who are fit for garrison duty, on occunication lines and with forestry and construction battalions and for other work behind the lines.

Section B (2) will be those who are fit for other occupations around the military camps.

R. H. MUIR,

Sergeant-at-arms of the local branch, who is the choice of the Great War Veterans of Peterborough to succeed Fire Chief Grange as caretaker of the armouries.

R. H. MUIR IS RECOMMENDED FOR ARMOURIES POSITION

Former Member of the 21st Battalion Is the Choice of the War Veterans to Succeed Chief Grange as Caretaker

THE PRESIDENT RESIGNS

Robert H. Muir, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association and a former member of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, is the choice of the local War Veterans to succeed Fire Chief Grange as Chief Caretaker of the Armouries. Mr. Muir was selected at the regular meeting of the C.W.V.A., in their club rooms, last night. Capt. J. H. Burnham, M. P. for West Peterborough, wrote to the Association asking that they make a recommendation for a successor to Chief Grange. Three members of the club were applicants for the position and on a ballot being taken Mr. Muir was selected and his name will be recommended. He was wounded in the head and face by shrapnel in France..

President Resigns.

Owing to personal affairs President Wm. Dalliday presented his resignation from that position.

The resignation was accepted and on motion of Comrades Victor and Staunton, a vote of thanks was tendered the retiring President for his services.

The question of appointing his successor was left over until the next meeting. Several members were nominated, but a motion to defer action for further consideration of the appointment was carried. In the mean time Vice-President Fred Long will carry on the duties of the position.

The report of Financial-Secretary Fred Haggart showed that both the Working Fund and the Relief Fund of the Association are in good shape.

Five new members were enrolled at last night's meeting.

Treasurer Peter Victor will leave for New York to-morrow to make arrangements for the proposed tour of a squad of local War Veterans through the Southern States, an announcement of which was made in last evening's Examiner. The Veter-

A GOOD MAN GONE.

To-day is laid at rest the mortal part of a true Christian gentleman and a good citizen in the highest meaning of the words. The life and influence and service of the late Dr. Burnham are a fine memory and an inspiration. For the past forty years he has lived his life in the white light of public relationship, and has stood the test. His memory is a clean and wholesome one.

In all the associations of private citizenship, professional and public service, he has fulfilled his duties with fidelity, sincerity and effectiveness. His sympathies were wide and his interest genuine. His solicitude for education was demonstrated by nearly three decades of service as member of the Board of Education. Without parade he gave effective service. He took broad views of education. Several years ago he introduced the matter of savings banks in the schools and had the Board "almost persuaded." His action in this direction was only a type of his public-spirited and broad attitude towards educational improvement. His fidelity to his religious obligations and his generous support, extended, in spirit and action, beyond this relationship, was repeated in his attitude to every good cause. His contributions were abundant and unostentatiously bestowed, in keeping with the modest discharge of every duty of citizenship and social relation. The closing of the schools, this afternoon, and other tributes of respect, in only a partial way reflect the universal feeling of esteem for the character and life of a man, who, subject to the common frailties of humanity, was of the highest type, and in respect of whom we can use as no mere form of expression, the words:

He was a man, take him for all in all,
We shall not look upon his like again.

BREAKING FAITH.

We Canadians pour measureless contempt and reprobation upon the moral monstrosity of the German "scrap of paper" ethics — making "junk" of solemn treaties. The Canadian government made a treaty with foreigners whom it had invited to the hospitality of our citizenship. It gave them papers of naturalization, that guaranteed them enjoyment of the privileges of citizenship in the exercise of the rights of citizenship on the same terms as native Canadians.

The foreigner complied with every requirement and for years has been an industrious, law-abiding, nation-building citizen. No charge has been brought against him. All at once—his vote for a government candidate not being a certainty—the government resolves to take no chances. By process of law as autocratically enacted—by closure—as any German decree could do, he is deprived of his highest rights in respect of the government bargain or treaty by which he was guaranteed full rights of citizenship—it is declared a "scrap of paper;" and he is dis-citizenized, disfranchised and robbed of the highest right under British citizenship — the right to a voice in the government of his adopted country.

And this outrage is committed—not to protect the interests of the country nor the cause—the laws of the land do that—but for the furthering of the miserable and insignificant interests of party advantage—no higher object is asserted or possible.

The Borden government does this disgraceful "evil that good may come," not to the country, but to its party, an outrage, iniquitous enough in itself, but doubly so at a crisis like this. No wonder that the Social Service Board of the Methodist Church, apart from any political bias, condemned the win-the-election franchise act of the Borden government, as more "Prussian than Prussia."

The United States deals with alien citizens in a larger and more equitable and patriotic spirit. While Canada denies foreign-born Canadians, who have been good subjects the past fourteen years or less, the ballot, and thus relieves them from the duty of military service—for the man who cannot vote cannot be conscripted — the United States law, that has already passed the Senate, provides for the drafting of all friendly aliens, and besides the law empowers the president to enlist for non-combatant war service all natives of Germany and her allies now living in the United State. It is estimated that drafting aliens will add 1,275,00 men to the United States colours.

Which is the better ambition for our government to measure up to—the sanity and patriotism of the United States in dealing with its citizens of alien origin—or imitating the Hun method of making "scraps of paper" of solemn national obligations?

The food saving pledge won't amount to much if it is broken like the government's pledge of citizenship to our population of alien birth.

PRAISE FOR THE POLICE.

We have few complaints of our police force; there are not enough malefactors in the city to keep them busy, or they are too well watched to become troublesome. The arrest of the four pickpockets suspects at the Exhibition, is a credit to the force, and especially a tribute to the vigilance and keenness of the detective branch, with which, however, the rest of the force well cooperated.

It is hard to set an abstract standard of police efficiency; but evidence of relative efficiency helps.

On two different previous occasions in the past the local police have rounded up a gang of exhibition pickpockets, who had plied their craft with impunity till they got to Peterborough. On one of these occasions the offenders were not so much downcast at being "pinched" as over the disgusting fact, that they had operated safely in Toronto, Montreal and other large centres, only to be nabbed in "a one-horse little city like Peterborough;" and no doubt the present batch in jail, if their guilt is established, will share the feeling, and join in the highest possible practical tribute to the effectiveness and wide-awakeness of the local police force.

Every Household Should Be Pledged

Every household in Canada should be pledged to the saving of waste in foodstuffs and voluntary cooperation with the Food Controller.

British households have bound themselves in honour to observe the food regulations. Every woman signing the pledge is a "Food Controller." The United States has also circulated food service pledge cards for the people to sign and they are sending them into Washington by the hundreds of thousands.

The Food Controller for Canada is also issuing pledge cards to be signed by housewives. They will be circulated from house to house by canvassers sent out by the combined Women's Organizations in every province.

These cards will be signed in duplicate, one to keep, the other to be filed at provincial headquarters in each province.

With these pledges goes another card to be placed in the window of the home as an outward and visible sign that this household has joined in the national organization of the Food Controller.

Food saving is the duty of every individual in this world crisis. Every one must realize the truth personally. Hence the importance of these pledge cards.

The pledge card reads:

"Realizing the gravity of the food situation, and knowing that Great Britain and our Allies look to Canada to help to shatter Germany's threat of starvation, I pledge myself and my pledged to carry out conscientiously by the advice and directions of the Food Controller that requisite foodstuffs may be released for export to the Canadian Divisions, the British forces and people, and the Allied armies and nations."

The window card reads:

"To win the War this household is pledged to carry out conscientiously the advice and directions of the Food Controller."

Every man and woman in Canada should join the organization for saving. Only thus can results be obtained worthy of Canada and the need of the situation.

Food regulations in Germany began by autocratic methods of centralized official control of the people's daily food. These measures failed.

In England, the voluntary cooperation of the people was sought, and the people responded. The "honour bound" system has been immensely successful.

People carry out the regulations in a cheerful voluntary spirit, knowing that their service is a service to the army and to the cause for which the army is fighting, and that the inconvenience is trifling in comparison to the discomforts, the hardships and the suffering that the men at the front endure for them.

OFFICIAL DEMONSTRATION OF CANADA'S IMMENSE FOOD WASTE

The Educational Department of the Food Controller's office issues the following important bulletin in reference to food waste:

It is impressive to learn that enough good food is wasted in Canada every day to feed every Canadian soldier who has gone overseas to fight for us.

Through carelessness and inefficiency there is wasted in garbage every year throughout Canada, food to the value of $56,000,000 or about $7.00 per capita of the home population, according to the recent estimates of the Canadian Food Controller. To this huge sum must be added a large, though indeterminate, number of millions lost through poor storage, delay in transportation, and unhygienic surroundings. What the grand total would be there are no present means of discovering. The important points are that this waste is needless and preventable.

Wasting $7.00 worth of food per year means a daily waste of only 1.92 cents per head. Without doubt, larger crops better distribution, closer buying on the part of the housekeeper, more careful preparation and more thorough utilization of our foodstuffs, would not only correct this waste, but would appreciably reduce the actual cost of living very considerably. Let it be assumed that, by complete national organization and rigid economy, the cost of living could be reduced by 5 cents per day for each individual. Roughly, then, counting in the elimination of garbage waste, we would have a saving of 7 cents per day, or $25.55 per capita annually. The national grand total saving would then amount to the astounding sum of $204,400,000; enough to feed an army of one million men for a year. These figures are appalling, but they are not beyond the range of achievement.

For the sake of clearness let us summarise the estimates given above: Estimated annual cost of feeding Canada's overseas soldiers, $50,000,000. Estimated annual preventable waste in Canadian garbage, $56,000,000. Estimated annual saving possible by preventing garbage waste and further reducing cost of living by 5 cents per head (total 7 cents per head), $204,400,000.

But there are other equally cogent illustrations of what economy in little things can accomplish. Suppose, for example, that one million families in Canada waste one slice of white bread per week. For convenience we shall consider that the one-pound loaf divides into 14 slices of 1.14 oz. each. The sum is simple:

1 slice of bread (1-14 of loaf) weighs 1.14 oz. If 1,000,000 families waste one slice per week, the weekly total waste of bread is 1,140,000 oz., or 71,250 one pound loaves, or enough for 3 1-3 divisions for one day, or one division (21,500 men) for three and one third days, or 10 meals to each man.

The annual national waste rising from the same source is impressive; Annual total result of 1,000,000 families wasting 1 slice of bread per week, 8,700,000 one pound loaves; or 2,593,500 lbs. flour; or 3,572,000 lbs. wheat; or 59,344 bus. wheat.

The tremendous importance of waste preventing and of food economy is clear. It is appropriate to touch briefly on a subject that, in these times of war, is equally vital—the possibilities of substituting other staples for wheat flour.

If, once a week, one million Canadian families use a one pound loaf of corn, or rye, bread instead of a similar loaf of white, the weekly and yearly saving would be:

Substituting one pound loaf of corn or rye bread per week would have, 1,000,000 lbs. of white bread; or 700,000 lbs. of flour; or 3,571 bbls. of flour; or 16,070 bus. of wheat.

The yearly saving on the same scale would amount to 52,000,000 lbs. of bread, or, 36,400,000 lbs. flour, or 185,712 bbls. flour; or 835,708 bus. of wheat.

What applies to the saving of wheat flour, is also, in greater or less degree, applicable to the saving of beef and bacon, the two other commodities that Canada must strive above all things to ship overseas. It is not to be doubted that habits of economy induced by watching carefully the consumption of flour, beef and bacon, will automatically bring about savings in all other foodstuffs. Thus the suggested saving of 7 cents per head seems not only attainable, but may lead to even greater economies.

JURY RETURNED AN OPEN VERDICT

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—After making a thorough investigation into the death of Mabel McReynolds, the young woman who died in St. Michael's Hospital during the early morning hours of September 5, after a gay party with several friends the night before, Coroner McCallum's jury returned an open verdict. The jury found that they were unable to determine the cause of death from the medical and other evidence submitted to them at the various sessions. Coroner McCallum concurred in their finding.

The evidence heard included the testimony of several of the dead girl's men and women friends, and corroborated the stories told at the former session of the party that started in an apartment house and proceeded to a Yonge street restaurant, to terminate with the girl's death in the hospital. The point that whiskey had been secured, drunk and taken to the restaurant in ginger ale bottles was brought out again. Mrs. May Fellows, who was a member of the party, was recalled at her own request, and after hearing her prior evidence read, stated that she wished to correct a statement. She said that she had ordered the whiskey drunk, and that it was paid for by an officer with the party.

The outstanding feature of the session was the ineffectual attempt of the Crown to obtain the name of the person from whom the whiskey was purchased. He appeared to be some mysterious man known to a certain set as "Jim," but beyond that no trace of him could be found. Mrs. Fellows stated that she knew nothing about him beyond his telephone number. This she declared she had secured in a downtown cafe from a friend. When asked to give the telephone number she said that she had lost the slip of paper on which it was written, and that she could not remember the figures.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

Few Minors Next Season In Action

By John H. Farrell,
Secretary of the National Association of Professional B. B. Clubs.

AUBURN, N. Y., Sept. 17. — The minor leagues this year have experienced the toughest sledding they have seen for a period of twenty years at least.

The declaration of war and the promulgation of the rules and regulations governing the drafting for the army have almost completely occupied the attention of the public, especially in the smaller cities.

The loyal minor leagues stood the strain as long as they possibly could. When they reached the breaking point, they confidently looked to the national board, which is the minor league governing body, for relief and help from a condition that had not existed before for fifty years. In all, some twelve leagues applied for relief from the burden, after making great financial sacrifices.

After due consideration, the board directed a ruling which has brought about peace of mind among minor league club owners to a great extent, for, through this ruling, territory and the title to players has been protected.

The board felt that a crisis entirely beyond the control of any human being existed; that the situation was not of the making of the club owners, due to extravagant operations or any other cause, and that the request of the several leagues had a genuine basis. All were more than eager to preserve their organizations, and the board, as the father of the family, was their natural haven in distress.

With the ruling which protects players and territory until such time as the national board may see fit to make further rulings, or the war comes to an end, the temper of the minor leagues is now reconciled, in so far as possible, to conditions.

The hands of the minor leagues are practically tied by conditions they cannot control, and for this reason it is more than probable that 1918 will see but few, if any, minor leagues in operation. It is to be hoped and expected that the leagues will exhaust every possible effort before giving up the struggle, yet it is the consensus of opinion that should the war continue minor leagues in general should suspend operations for that period.

It is believed that the rest even minor league territory would bring minor league baseball back with a bang the following year. The club owners and board members feel that the players, fully realizing the unusual conditions caused by the war, will gladly and willingly co-operate thus retaining local league organizations, and thereby guaranteeing employment for thousands of players in the future.

There is no way of computing the actual losses of the minor leagues due to the war. That they have been tremendous is a certainty, for, with patronage threadbare and many players taken in the draft, the minor league magnates have been buffeted about on the stormiest financial sea which they have ever attempted to sail. That a few of the minors finish the season is a big tribute to the stability of the National Association for those who went through did so only by shouldering losses in the aggregate, and few club owners will be able to show profits.

Jack Johnson Is Still In Spain

Former Heavyweight Champion Seen in Barcelona Bull Ring.

Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight champion of the world, has not yet fulfilled his threat of visiting America and is still in Barcelona. The negro has filled out considerably, and is making ends meet in Spain, where he is a great favourite. Doing a little bit in the bull ring and a little boxing, he makes a living.

Johnson has a cafe in a fine neighbourhood, managed by his wife, who is doing well. Jack is by no means a bad entertainer. He is a good speaker, can sing a good song, and dances very well indeed; in fact, there is little he cannot do. He has had two matches since he went to Madrid. Johnson will be 40 years old next March.

of Lindsay and the district should take advantage of this occasion to advance the good cause of the returned heroes. Be it understood that all these men have been overseas. None but these men are allowed in this branch.

The Kingston Whig says:

The executive of the local branch of the Dominion-wide Great War Veterans' Association are greatly pleased with the progress the Association is making in Kingston. Although in existence here for only a few weeks they are already nearly eighty returned men now members. A fine class of men is being taken on the membership list who are not out for sympathy but only a square deal.

The new club-rooms furnished by the I.O.D.E. were opened on Friday night and form an ideal place where the men may gather with their pipes and talk over old times spent together and of hopes for the future.

The Great War Veterans' Association and the public generally will be interested in learning that the amount collected in the boxes hung in the trenches during the Exhibition for the Overseas Tobacco Fund, was $109.82.

Kingston, Sept. 18.—Kingston will have at least five hundred artillerymen quartered here this winter. It is stated that Nos. 1, 2 and 3 sections of the D.A.C. will be located in Kingston, and also the 72nd, 73rd, and 74th Batteries. Lieut. W. Young, 16th Regiment has been appointed to first Depot Battalion Eastern Ontario Regiment.

Lieut. R. D. Webster has been reinstated to his appointment to "C" Battery, R.C.H.A., which was canceled on September 10th. Lieut. Webster was on staff of R.S.A. for some time.

CAPT. GILBERT EDWARDS KILLED.

Port Hope, Sept. 18.—Capt. Gilbert Edwards, a former Deputy Reeve of Hope Township, has given his life on the battlefield. His aged mother received the message that he was killed on Sept. 11. He was one of the best known and most highly esteemed young men of Durham county. He was a member of the municipal Council for several years, and also served on the Counties Council of Durham and Northumberland.

Mrs. Silas Bullied received a letter from her son, Pte. V. A. Bullied, in part, as follows:

Monday, August 27.

At 11.30 I underwent an operation with my arm and they took a piece of fat out of my leg to fix my arm; then put stitches in both arm and leg, to be removed September 4th, which is Tuesday. I woke up at 2.30 a little dizzy, but not sick, but they would not give me anything to eat.

Tuesday, Aug. 28.—I had my breakfast as usual, of toast, egg, bread and butter. Then at noon I had a good dinner. Then about 2.15 some ladies came to see me and brought a couple bunches of grapes, a bag of apples, a bag of pears, a couple bags of mixed cake and forty cigarettes, and my four companions and myself certainly enjoyed them. At 6 o'clock the Sergeant came and told us we are all going to move from Ramsgate, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Wednesday, Aug. 29.—About 11 a.m. they brought me a registered letter with five dollars in it, and thanks very much for it.

Thursday, Aug. 30.—I was on a stretcher to move at 9.15 in a Red Cross Hospital train and started on our way at 10 a.m. We had dinner and tea on the train. We landed at Warrington at 6 p.m. and went to the White Cross Hospital, which is a V.A.D. and had our supper.

We get good treatment here and extra good grub; there is certainly no room for complaint. I am still in bed till the stitches are removed. I have been about three hours writing this with my left hand. News is scarce so I will now conclude, hoping to hear from you soon, I remain,

Your son and brother,
VICTOR.

CONSCRIPTIONIST DELEGATES WIN THE FIRST ROUND

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.— Delegates favourable to conscription won out in the first division in the Trades and Labour Congress on this important question to-day. The question at issue was merely a preliminary to the main subject, but the voting on it showed which way the wind blew. After much discussion an amendment that Congress discuss conscription and a general strike separately was lost on a vote. This amendment had been put forward by the anti-conscriptionists. While many delegates delivered fighting speeches against Canadian labour recognizing the government's right to conscript, the majority took was not in accord with the principles the view that although conscription of organized labour, it was the duty of labourites and others to obey the law in the present instance.

Has Put Him Back In Old Time Form

Hamilton Man Says He Would Nearly Fall on Account of Weakness

"Honestly this Tanlac has built me up to where I was before my health began to fail, and I'm feeling so good I want to tell everybody about it," said W. H. Dyson, an expert cabinet maker in the employ of the National Car Company, and residing at 527 Barton street, Hamilton, the other day.

"I had been going down hill for the last twelve months," he explained, and was steadily getting worse in spite of all the medicines I was taking. I didn't have a bit of appetite and just had to force down enough to keep me alive, and many a morning I left home without eating a bite for breakfast, and would get along on as little as I could all day. I was troubled with a fluttering of the heart that alarmed me and whenever I stooped down my head got to swimming so I would nearly fall. I could not even lie down to rest without becoming so dizzy I had to get right up again to keep from fainting. I was weak and tired and all run down and was on the road to a complete nervous breakdown when I began reading the statements in the papers about Tanlac, and decided to give it a trial.

"The way it took hold of my troubles and began straightening me out right from the start was a complete surprise. Tanlac gave me an appetite such a boost that I can eat like a regular farm hand, in fact, I get away with five good meals every day, and am hardly satisfied at that. I am stronger and heavier than I have been in over a year, my nerves are as steady as a clock; I sleep like a log and get up in the morning with plenty of vim and energy for the day's work. I always speak a good word for Tanlac whenever I can, for it is such a splendid medicine that I want all the fellows in my shop to get acquainted with it."

Press Comment On Korniloff's Failure

"Remarkable Influence."

Springfield Republican:—"The remarkable influence which Kerensky has acquired is illustrated once more in the way in which Russia rallies to his support, leaving the Korniloff movement to collapse almost as ignominously as the revolt of the generals in China."

"Experience will Sober Them."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times:—"The Kerensky party is not representative of the best element in Russia, but the experience through which the Premier and his fellows are passing will undoubtedly sober them; their socialistic views will undoubtedly undergo modification that will make them acceptable to the sane world in normal times."

"Still Uncertain."

New York Times:—"If Korniloff 'rebellion' has ended in failure and surrender it is still much too early to say whether the defeat of the cause and the purpose he represented is a deliverance or a disaster for Russia."

"Ideals Vindicated by Outcome."

Albany Knickerbocker Press:—"With the ideals for which Kerensky stands vindicated by the outcome of this initial revolt, it may be expected that the provisional government will be better able to handle the next internal convulsion. Kerensky has shown himself again to be a man of action as well as one of keen intellectual perception."

"Antidotes for the Future."

Boston Globe:—"Against future counter revolutions the best antidotes will be a well fed population, a better organization of transportation and production and an army that will stand its ground. No doubt its revolutionary leaders know better than any one can tell them that in order to make good the revolution must cash in where the autocracy failed—with the ordinary necessities of existence."

"Spared Almost Miraculously."

Brookly Eagle:—"Korniloff may have to pay for his failure to make himself the instrument for uniting Russia, but the question of the degree of punishment to be inflicted upon Korniloff is second in importance to the fact that to all appearances Russia has been spared almost miraculously an internal convulsion, that might have proved the last act in the nation's tragedy."

FORBADE SON TO REGISTER.

Austrian Mother's Defiance Lands Whole Family in Jail.

HARTFORD, Conn.—What the Federal officers characterize as one of the most important arrests made in the country under the Registration act landed a family of Austrians in the Hartford County jail in default of the $5,000 bail named by United States Commissioner Richard F. Carroll. The aliens, who are charged with conspiracy, are John Balaski and his wife Mary of South Prospect, Conn., and their 21-year old son, Michael Balaski.

The arrests were made by the State police co-operating with the United States Marshal's office and the agents of the Department of Justice, who entered the Balaski farmhouse through a rear door and seized Mrs. Balaski from behind as she stood at the front door brandishing a revolver and shouting she would kill the first officer that tried to enter the house to get her son for the army.

The father and son were more tractable, and when Mrs. Balaski was arraigned with them before Commissioner Carroll she was considerably less bellicose.

The son, who was born in Putnam, Conn., said he had failed to register June 5 and since then because of his mother's terrible threats against him if he ever thought of joining an army that would fight against Austria-Hungary.

King Charles XII. Not Murdered Is Shown By Autopsy

Swedish Scientists Open Coffin of Sovereign Dead Nearly 200 Years

INDICATIONS WOUND CAME FROM ENEMY

Disputed Point of History in Way to Being Settled by Official Investigation.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18.—An autopsy on King Charles XII., Sweden's warrior king, killed in battle almost two hundred years ago, to determine whether the shot through the temple which caused his death came from the enemy's lines, or from an assassin among his own men has just been made here in an effort to clear up one of the mysteries of history. If the bullet entered the right temple it would indicate that it came from Fredrigshaid Fortress, before which the King's forces were intrenched, while a shot from the opposite direction would show that it was fired by a traitor in his own ranks.

The scientists who are conducting the investigation have not yet announced their conclusions and will not until they have made an effort to fit together the pieces of bone taken from the wound, but the indications are that the bullet entered the right temple and came therefore from the enemy. The wound on the right side is comparatively small, as if made by an entering shot, while the left temple was blown entirely away and the left side of the shell shattered, as would be caused by the missle as it emerged.

Body Well Preserved.

The King's body was examined in the old Knights' church, where it lay in a simple coffin. It was covered with a linen shroud, with the arms at the sides, the fingers meeting across the waist, the hands encased in faded yellow gloves. On the head was a laurel wreath placed there in January, 1749, the day he was buried. Those who viewed the dead king were struck by his masterful countenance, still bearing through all the years the look of a leader of men.

The wound, covered by patches of linen, was found to consist of a cleft in the skull beginning at the left corner of the left eye and extending at an angle of about forty-five degrees upward to the right for about three inches. A triangular piece of bone, loosened by the bullet, was still held in place by the skin. It was marked by a deep depression.

According to contemprary accounts of the King's death, he netered the trenches on the evening of December 11, 1718, and went to a point opposite where the Danes had a battery. With him were the engineer who had designed the trenches, and Siquier, the King's aide-de-camp. As Charles lay on the parapet of the trench, his head and shoulders exposed, an enemy cannon fired a load of grapeshot and the King fell dead.

Origin of Murder Report.

No question that a grapeshot was the cause of his death ever arose a year later, when Siquier, while in a delirium of fever, said that he had murdered the King. When he recovered he was horrified at his own ravings and denied until his death that he had killed the king. He died in poverty. Voltaire, who investigated the affair, reached the conclusion that the fatal shot could not have been fired by Siquier, and must have been grapeshot. The murder theory, however, once started, has persisted down to the present time.

The coalition formed against Sweden, resulting in the outbreak of the Great Northern War, froced Charles XII. to take up the sword, which he never afterward relinquished. His campaigns against Russia, undertaken when he was not yet twenty-one years old, have given him a prominent place in history. After routing the combined Poles and Saxons at Klissoff, and three weeks later, by "an act of almost fabulous audacity," capturing the fortress of Cracow, he undertook the invasion of Russia.

On New Year's Day, 1708, he crossed the Vistula, and early in July of that year he cut into the line of the Russian army, near Holowczyn, forcing it to retreat. The victory opened the way to the Dnieper. Though the Swedish army suffered terrible hardships, the Russians slowly retired before the invader, burning and destroying everythin in its path. A few months later Charles saw that his scheme to capture Moscow was impossible. He, however, determined to march southward instead of northward, and join his forces with 100,000 Dnieperer Cossacks, under Ivan Mazeppa.

Attacks on Russia Fatal.

But the destruction of this relief army by the Tsar Peter and the annihilation of another relief army that was trying to join him from Livonia was a serious blow to the success of his enterprise.

At the end of February, 1709, he began the siege of the fortress of Poltave, which he wished to use for subsequent operations. The Russians after throwing the greater part of their army over the River Vorskla, gave the Swedes battle. Charles was at first successful. The Tsar, taking advantage of tactical blunders, annihilated his cavalry and infantry, and the Swedish army, worn out and demoralized, surrenderd a few days later at Perevolochna, on the Dnieper. Charles fled to Turkish territory for safety.

After an absence of four years he returned to Sweden, collected another army and in 1717 attacked Norway with the avowed object of adding to his territory. It was during this adventure that he met his death.

HAVE GOOD BEAN SEED NEXT YEAR

Careful Selection of Best Vines Before Harvest and Proper Care of Seed Over Winter.

Many of our people grew beans on a large scale this year who never did before, and it is possible that they will repeat this crop next year.

The importance of clean bean seed, properly cared for through the winter, was made very clear by the failure of some poor seed to even come up last spring, can scarcely be overemphasized for next year's crop.

The very best way of getting seed that is clean, free from disease and which has not been injured by frost, is to pick the seed the fall of 1917. The best way is to pick vines in the field which are free from disease, which have ripened before frost, ripened uniformly, and which show themselves to be good yielders by having a heavy growth of pods.

It will take a little work to gather this seed, but if it is gathered, thoroughly dried out and stored in a dry place over winter, the increased returns in next year's crop will pay for the labour many times over. The time to select bean seed is just before harvest. Of course, it is better to have a seed plot, but next to a seed plot is the selection of plants before harvest. Do it now.

FIRST CLASS FISH.

September 19th, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is claimed by some people that the fresh sea fish supplied through the medium of the Food Controller's Department and sold in this city, is inferior fish. Permit us to say that the fish in question is the best fish on the market. It is brought direct from the sea in special refrigerator cars and is not held up at any point on the road. The fish may have a stronger smell than the general run of fish, but this is due to the short time that elapses between the time the fish is caught and the time it reaches its destination. The sea smell is still manifest when it reaches Toronto and Peterborough. The fish has a better flavour than any other that can be purchased on the market. People who have been using the fish ever since it was introduced testify to the high quality of the product which they concede to be much superior to the fish that has been out of the water for a much longer time.

DOUROS & GETTAS.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I read with pleasure in your issue of to-night, 17th, the various items, editorial and otherwise, concerning the Industrial Exhibition. I'm ure it must be gratifying to the Directors, the succes sthey have met with this year, as regards attendance, and should act as an incentive for them to "go on." I have great hopes fro mthe meeting of Directors, which is called for to consider new suggestions, that they are awake to the fact that there is room for improvement. I know there is in the section which interests me, namely, Horticultural. We all know there are lots of fine flowers grown in Peterborough yet there is very little competition for the prizes offered at the Fair. I have asked different parties whom I knew had good flowers and garden produce why they didn't exhibit, and their answer is always the same—not worth while. The prize list wants careful revising in this section, would have been a dismal failure this year if it had not been for the fine display made by Jordan Bros., and their Mr. Clee. Hoping to hear of progress, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. H. YOUNG,

ONCE A GERMAN ALWAYS A GERMAN

Interesting Clipping From a Peterborough Soldier

Mrs. Batcheler, of this city, has received the following clipping from her husband, Corporal E. Batcheler, who is now in France. The latter is a despatch rider:

Once a German, Always a German.

A naturalized Briton! What folly is this?
A fig for such humor and vapor;
Is Satan made fit for the regions of bliss
By signing a "mere scrap of paper?"
When morals are lacking, and humor is dead,
Pray what is the worth of parole?
A small bit of preaching may turn a man's head,
But that doesn't alter his soul.

Apostle or proselyte—both if you like:
It comes to the same in the end.
A double-faced man is far worse than a "tike."
A turncoat is never a friend.
A man who turns dog on the land of his birth
Is not to be trusted for sure;
An office-made pedigree, what is it worth?
Will it hold if the blood isn't pure?

A wolf in sheep's clothing is mostly in luck,
And easily comes by a feed;
A hen that is clucking may bring out a duck
But that doesn't alter the breed.
You may fit up a dog in the skin of a goat—
The dog wouldn't bleat if you did,
But he'd certainly plan from a different note
When bled for a quarter of kid.

Be kind to the stranger that enters your gate,
But this is the gist of my sermon—
It's no good to juggle and tinker with fate,
A German is always a German!
He appears to be British, and loyal of course,
While true to the land he was born in,
So don't put a cow-cover over a horse
And expect to get milk in the morning.

Canadian Press Despatch:

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 19.—That it is both his purpose and expectation to form a union government before the general election, which is now imminent, but if that should prove impossible he will certainly do so after the elections, if returned to power. This is the statement of Premier Borden in a letter addressed to E. P. Davis, local Liberal, under date of September tenth.

East City Dramatic Club Opened Season

The first appearance of the Dramatic Club of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in the parish hall on Monday night was greeted by a large audience that enjoyed a delightful and diversified entertainment. The opening number presented George and Arthur Leonard in "The Actor and the Janitor." The abilities of the Club members were shown in "The Bachelor's Baby," which was produced with fine effect. The caste included Mr. Alex. Primeau, Mrs. James Dillon, Mrs. John Primeau and Mr. James Dillon. In "The Coon Rehearsal" Mr. Jack Primeau and Mr. Dan Leonard made a hit with a skit that offered many opportunities for rich humour.

The other items of the programme were a recitation, "The Old Actor's Story," by John Primeau, Jr., a solo, "The Sands of the Desert," by Roland Leonard, a banjo selection by Frank Clark, and a solo "Asleep in the Deep," by Arthur Leonard, who possesses a magnificent bass voice.

The recommencement of the Club's activities revealed the development it has made since last year, and the present season should find continued progress

A pretty feature of this season's opening was the announcements of the programme numbers by Little Marguerite Gillman.

NO UNNECESSARY WORK IS BEING DONE ON SUNDAY

Peterborough, September 19th, 1917.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reply to the query in an editorial in the Review yesterday, I might say that Rev. Mr. Pogue and I were appointed a committee to look into the matter of Sunday work at the Quaker Oats plant. The Superintendent received us most cordially and satisfied us that no unnecessary work was being done on Sunday. A few years ago the Government made specific provision for the continuance of concrete work every day until completion, it being found necessary in Government bridge work to continue the work of concrete building every day from start to finish.

The Superintendent also assured us that it was not the practice of the Leonard Construction Co. to do unnecessary work on the Sabbath, either in Canada or the United States.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

THE FUNERAL OF DR. GEORGE BURNHAM

Service Was Held in St. John's Church—Was Largely Attended

The funeral of the late Dr. George Burnham which took place this afternoon was largely attended. A short service was held at the late residence of the deceased after which the remains were removed to St. John's church.

The body was met at the south entrance of the church by the Rev. Walter Archbold, Rev. W. H. White, St. Lukes, the Rev. James Price, South Peterborough and the robed choir. The procession then moved up the aisle to the opening sentences of the office for the "Burial of the dead," commencing with. "I am the Resurrection and the Life." Hymn 412. "Brief life is here our portion." was followed by the lesson, read by Rev. W. H. White.

The Rev. Walter Archbold spoke of the many activities and great unselfish work of the late Dr. Burnham; also of his life-long membership of St. John's. Many good works of the deceased gentleman would never be known till the secrets of all hearts were revealed. Hymn 562. "Nearer my God to Thee," was sung, then came the prayers and Benediction. The procession reformed, and led by the white robed choristers and clergy, singing Hymn 477, "Hark hark my soul," moved out of the church to accompany the body on the last stage of its earthly pilgrimage. The "Dead March" (Saul) and "O rest in the Lord" (Elijah) were played on the organ by Mr. R. J. Devey.

The pall bearers were: Mr. Harry Rush, Mr. R. Fair, Dr. Carmichael, Dr. Haliday, Mr. R. B. Rogers and Mr. W. H. Hill.

EVANGELIST HARPER AT GOSPEL HALL

"Behold I stand at the door and knock"—Rev. 3:20, was the text from which Mr. Harper drew a vivid picture of the Son of God and the sinner also the false professors, who have a profession without a person, although full of riches, yet, first, wretched and miserable; second, poor, needing Divine riches; third, blind, needing Divine help; fourth, naked, needing Divine raiment.

II.—The person who is referred to in the text, as standing, none other than Jesus Christ, Himself, who was ever the faithful witness to God, who died, yet now He ever liveth at God's right hand. and also, He is the Prince of the Kings of the earth.

What a marvel, said the preacher, to see the God of Heaven praying men to receive Him. He will never force an entrance into any heart, but if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him and sup with him.

The meeting throughout was one of intense spiritual power. Only three more meetings this week. All should hear this splendid speaker while the opportunity is here. He will speak again to-night.

APPEALING AGAINST THE ORR WILL.

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—Mr. T. H. Stinson was in Toronto yesterday for the Orr will appeal, which is before the Court of Appeal this week. When this case was up in February last he succeeded in getting a judgment for one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for his client, who lives down in Ohio. The Christian Science organization is now appealing against this judgment.

Medical Examination Prior To, etc.

Section B (3) all those who will be fit to do sedentary work as orderly clerks, batmen, etc.

Category C includes all those who are fit for home service. They will be divided into classes practically identical with those of Category B.

The last category, D, will comprise all those who are physically unfit for service in any capacity.

Major Cameron said that he was not in a position to state absolutely that this plan would be adopted, but this was the examination now followed in Toronto, and he had been informed that it would apply generally. The Board would be extremely cautious. There would doubtless be appeals against their findings and it would not be creditable if the medical findings were not substantiated by any subsequent examination. The local board would be only too glad to assist the manufacturers in having their men examined as quickly as possible.

Country Sessions.

Mr. Turner asked if there would be evening sessions. Major Cameron replied that this was probable for the reason that the local board would cover a wide district, perhaps several counties. This would entail a great deal of work.

When the proclamation is made every man of the first class will be regarded as a soldier. Major McPherson had informed Major Cameron that it was considered a busy morning for a board of eight in England to pass forty men. It will take practically the same time here.

Advantage To Manufacturers.

The special advantage to manufacturers of the early examination of their employees of the first class was dealt with by Major McPherson. They could begin at once to find out those men who came within the class and the examination would reveal the physically fit. Thus they would be enabled to know the probable effect of the draft on their employees. They could determine those who were indispensible and for what reasons, this to be presented to the exemption boards. Of those who are dispensible the manufacturer can prepare to substitute them by female workers.

It is in the interests of the manufacturers to prepare for the work of the tribunals. For every exemption appeal there should be a brief made out.

The discussion wandered to the manner in which the conscripts may be called up. Mr. Worth stated that before the manufacturers made their plans they should know whether the men will be examined in alphabetical order or whether, before the proclamation, their factories would send up their men in groups thus avoiding congestion before the board.

Mr. A. J. Johnston remarked that he had heard of the alphabetical method working smoothly.

Major Cameron replied that the Board had not yet received these details.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse had no doubt of the factory employees reaching the medical board, but the problem would be to round up the "disjointed element."

Mr. Chas Coleman, Mr. G. H. Logie, Mr. W. H. Dunsford and others also entered into the discussion.

Five Years Ago

A Treatment Which Has Proven a Wonderful Healer of the Skin—Certified Evidence of Lasting Cure.

Jordan, Ont., Sept. 19.—The old notion that eczema is a disease of the blood is refuted time and time again by the cures that are daily being effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

It matters not what the cause may have been if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment regularly you will obtain relief and cure of eczema. Here is the proof.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "My brother had a bad case of eczema on his legs. He was troubled nearly all one fall and winter with it, and could not work for days at a time. He tried different salves and ointments, but none cured him. One day he tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it gave almost instant relief. He continued its use, but had not quite finished the second box when he was cured. It is now about five years since then and it has never returned. We certainly can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and are very grateful for my brother's cure."

(Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites and the party to whom she refers, and her statements are correct.")

Mr. J. E. Jones, 228 University Avenue, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I had eczema in my hand for about five years. I tried a great many remedies, but found that while some of them checked it, none cured it permanently. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in six weeks my hand was completely better. I would not do without a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house if it cost $2 a box. I am giving my name to this firm so that it will get to those who suffer as I did."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint you. Insist on getting what you ask for.

In Heaven there's rest,

No Wooden Shoes For Uncle Sam

Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—"America is not going to Hollandize her shoes. This was the unanimous effect of statements to the United Press from big shoe manufacturers here to-day. The statement of western shoe manufacturers that wood will be used for the shoe soles if the war continues another year, was not taken seriously here. Every manufacturer interviewed pointed out a number of substitutes, such as fiber, felt and rubber compositions which might be used for soles to greater advantage than wood. It also was the general opinion that the supply of leather in this country is sufficient for some time to come.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—That William Davies and Co. were guaranteed cost price for pork supplied to the British War Office and the prevailing market price paid at the time of delivery, no matter much it was above cost. This was admitted by General Manager Fox in the cold storage enquiry to-day. He further admitted that these circumstances tended to increase the hog prices in Canada owing to the buying activities of the company. The company couldn't possibly lose and advancing prices enabled them to buy in large quantities. That accounted for the profits they made on the rising market

STEWART—McGEE.

A very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George McGee, Cavan, Ont., on Thursday, September 13th, the occasion being the marriage of their youngest daughter, Florence Jean, to Mr. Melville B. M. Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart, Cavan, Ont.

The bride entered the artistically decorated drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Floy Stewart, sister of the groom, who wore Russian green silk. The bride wore a gown of champagne silk crepe de chine, beautifully trimmed with pearls and lace. The Rev. G. W. Wickett of Bethany, was the officiating pastor, the ceremony being performed under an arch of evergreen and astors.

After the ceremony the bride led the way to the dining room, which was decorated for the occasion, and after all had partaken of a sumptuous repast the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Toronto and other points west, the bride wearing a suit of Belgian blue serge, with white hat, and wore the gift of the groom—a wristlet watch.

The young couple were the recipients of several beautiful and costly presents, showing the esteem in which they were held by their friends.

She was ably assisted by Miss Mattie Killoran, who wore a suit of brown with mink scarf, and also carried American beauty roses. Mr. Emmett Kylie acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents, 556 Roger street where a dainty breakfast was partaken of. The bride's gifts were both costly and numerous, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Killoran left on an extended trip to Toronto, Buffalo and Rochester. On their return, the young couple will take up residence in Hamilton.

Jilted Chauffeur Kills His Rival At Night Carousal

NEW YORK.—As the climax to a night of merry-making at South Beach, Staten Island, William Schaefer, twenty-five years old, a chauffeur of No. 300 West Tenth street, was shot dead and four women and one man are held at the Stapleton, S. I., police station as material witnesses. They are Mrs. Hannah Thurston, also known as Miss Hannah Malone, of No. 559 Greenwick street; Mrs. Teresa Sullivan, of No. 535 Greenwick street; Joseph Lenahan of No. 32 Rector street; Mrs. Elizabeth Lanahan, his wife, of No. 10 Greenwich street and Mary Schaefer, who is not a relative of the dead man, of No. 70 King street.

According to the story told to the police by Mrs. Sullivan, an elderly woman, two groups of eight young men rented two bungalows at South Beach, which they named Sea View and Billiken. On Saturday night they gave a party, numbering about fifty people, at Crane's Hotel, near by.

After the closing of the hotel they adjourned to the Billiken bungalow to play the piano and consume a keg of beer. Some went to the Sea View bungalow. Among them were Mrs. Thurston and William Schaefer.

SLAYER APPEARS, FIRES THRICE

Schaefer's predecessor in the affections of Mrs. Thurston, a man named Frank Norton, twenty-six years old, a chauffeur, of No. 559 Greenwich street, who had not been in the party, suddenly appeared in the Sea View bungalow about three o'clock in the morning.

Producing an automobile revolver, he fired at Mrs. Thurston, the bullet grazing her chin. He then advanced to Schaefer and shot him immediately above the heart. Norton then fired a third shot and disappeared.

The hotel proprietor notified the police, who rushed to the railroad crossing at Clifford, lowered the gates and thus stopped the fugitive automobile.

Twelve men and three women were in the car, and after Captain Van Wagner and his men had rounded up eleven more men and four more women, all thirty were taken to the police station at Stapleton. Mrs. Thurston had made her escape.

Questioning by the police, District Attorney Fach and James L. Vail, coroner, from half-past eight in the morning until the middle of the afternoon, failed to elicit any information. Finally Mrs. Sullivan broke down and told her story, which was corroborated by Mrs. Thurston, who had been found at her home in New York.

All but the four women and one man held as witnesses were released. A general alarm was sent out for Norton.

Birds Help In War On Germany

Food is needed for our armies. Birds help the farmers produce that food by destroying insect pests. Therefore, birds may be considered as one of the Allies. In the August Farm and Fireside we read:—

"Birds are almost as busy as bees, and their work in increasing crop yields is highly important. One of the cheapest and most effective ways to fight insect pests that annually take crop toll estimated at $800,000,000 is to aid in the preservation of bird life. Few people realize how many insects are destroyed by birds. A teaspoonful of chinch bugs has been taken from the crop of one quail, and an adult bird has been known to eat 5,000 plant lice in two hours. Such worms and bugs as infest our gardens are favorite food for bluebirds, robbins and many other kinds of birds.

"It is true that some insect pests may be fought with chemicals. Owing to the great war, though, prices for many materials commonly used in sprays, washes, and poison mashes are pretty near prohibitive. But the birds work at before the war wages.

"Birds also eat thousands of weed seeds. A single quail, when killed, was found to contain 10,000 pigweed seeds. With labour scarce and high, whatever will aid the farmer in his crop against weeds is worth while."

Food Economy Hits Soap Manufacture

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Soap manufacture is feeling the effect of the Food Administration's economy campaign. William C. Procter, a Cincinnati soapmaker, told Herbert C Hoover, Food Administrator, that since the family garbage can began dwindling shipping shortage had prevented usual imports of vegetable oils and that attempts to go more cargo space would be necessary.

Half Of American Army Ready To Begin Its March On Berlin

343,500 Men Are Now in Camp, With a Patriot Nation Prepared to Supply Its Vast Equipment at Short Order —Country's Industries Revolutionized to Meet Enormous Demands.

SEVENTEEN DIVISIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Marshalled for the last time as civilians and under civilian authority, more than 300,000 men of the National Army went forward yesterday to the sixteen cantonments to be trained for the battle against German autocracy. Their next move will be as fighting men toward the battlefields of France.

The whole nation will be astir with the movement of the selective forces. The men represent approximately forty-five per cent. of the total quota under the first call from each of nearly five thousand local boards. Already at the camps is the advance guard of five per cent of the total, composed of experienced men, including cooks. Out of this has been created a skeleton organization into which the second increment will begin to be absorbed with little confusion. When the last men of this increment arrive the camps will house half of the first call forces, or 343,500 men, and the other half will follow as rapidly as quarters and equipment are made available.

In a statement the War Department says the enormous task of obtaining equipment and supplies for the army is moving satisfactorily. Some of the men of the National Army may be only partly equipped for some time after they are mobilized, and no attempt will be made to furnish them with full war equipment until the eve of their starting for Europe. Some civilian clothing, such as overcoats, will have to be used for a time, as the clothing industry has not yet caught up with its work.

Seventeen Divisions Under Arms.

With the mobilization of one-half of the 687,000 men of the first call under the Selective law in progress, the question arises whether that number of men will be sufficient to fill all units of the National Guard and National Army. There are indications that a deficiency in men will be disclosed when official reports from all the thirty-two training camps are available.

Seventeen divisions of the National Guard have been organized, but with the exception of the New York, Pennsylvania and a few others and the Forty-second division, which soon will embark for France, they are not at maximum war strength. The fighting strength of the Seventeen divisions, under the new tables of organization, would be 623,000 men, supplemented by many thousands of auxiliary troops. Whatever deficiencies there are will be supplied promptly from the National Army as the militia will go first to the front.

Since the President called the first 68,000 men of the National Army, the Signal Corps, including the aviation section, has been greatly expanded. Nearly 100,000 additional men must be transferred to this service alone. The Medical Corps also has been increased greatly and numerous necessary auxiliary units for immediate duty abroad, not thought of when the call was made, have been organized. Where enlisted men of the guard or the regular army have been taken, their places have to be filled with National Army men.

Food Situation Satisfactory.

So far as known no definite figure concerning the probable total deficiency in men has been compiled nor any estimate prepared in the absence of complete reports from all National Guard divisions and auxiliary corps. It is not unlikely, however, that when the National Army divisions are organized, many vacancies will be found at the cantonments, and it will be necessary to make a second call on the drafted forces or to train in complete divisions.

Divisions will go to France only at maximum strength.

In a statement the War Department says that the industries of the country are expanding rapidly to meet the army supply demands, and only minor shortages are expected at the training camps. Quartermaster officials regard the food situation as satisfactory.

The problem of obtaining clothing and other equipment, however, has presented many obstacles, most of which already have been overcome. With two million men to provide for and $3,000,000,000 to spend in the first year, the department faced a gigantic task at the start of the war.

"Difficulties arose at the outset," the statement says. "There was a shortage of wool, a shortage of fast dye for uniforms and a shortage of labour. There was no appreciable shortage of cotton but a shortage of looms.

"These difficulties have been and are being gradually overcome. The item of tentage furnishes an illustration. The department desired to place orders for fifty million yards of tentage. The normal output of the country is twenty million yards a year. All along the line industrial establishments had to be expanded to meet unprecedented demands.

"The first officers' training camps resulted in a rush order to the quartermaster's department for approximately one hundred thousand uniforms. The equipment of technical troops, authorized by Congress after the declaration of war, brought other unexpected demands. The quartermaster's department also has supplied six months' equipment for the expeditionary force now in Europe, and has contributed to the equipment of the medical units.

"All this time perparations were continued for the opening of the cantonments. Incipient labour troubles and a shortage of raw materials for a while retarded this major task. A great industrial expansion became necessary."

MILLBROOK, Sept. 19.—The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas' church held the opening meeting of the season on Monday night at the home of Mrs. David Follis. Follis' line. Over twenty members were taken out in cars loaned by kind friends for the evening.

After the regular business was disposed of, an interesting letter was read from the Rev. C. H. Quartermain, telling of his work at Fort Vermillion, Alta. The Mission Study course for the year was discussed and the competition decided on.

Mrs. Fred Leach, of Togo, Sask., gave an interesting talk on the work of the branch there. Mrs. Westmacott then read a paper on the life of a native evangelist by Rev. Victor Spencer, missionary in Japan.

The serving of refreshments brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Thos. Medd.

(I Serve.)

The motto of the Prince of Wales might be adopted as the slogan of modern business. "To Serve" is the keynote of 20th century merchandising. The up-to-date merchant realizes that it is good business, as well as good morals, to render real service to his patrons, and he tells you about it in his advertisements.

It pays to patronize consistent advertisers. They are modern in their methods and imbued with the modern spirit of service.

SHE DID HER SHARE.

And It Was Not Upon the Blood Soiled Field of Battle.

During the first days of that most lamentable conflict that we now know as the war between the states a little woman down in South Carolina gave her husband and their four grown sons to fight for the cause that to her seemed just. She was not belligerent; she was brave. A few years later a neighbor brought her word that all but the youngest boy had been killed.

At the end of the war the youngest boy returned. He was a captain and not a captain merely by courtesy. As he rode through the old plantation he saw to his intense surprise that it was in a fair state of cultivation and that foodstuffs had taken the place of cotton. He had expected to find those broad acres filled with weeds and briers. As soon as he had proudly greeted his mother and been in turn proudly greeted by her he spoke of this.

"That was my part," she told him. "You couldn't fight without having something to eat, could you?"

It was then that he noted the marks of toil on her hands, and he knew that the faithful old negroes had left done all the hard work. He brought his heels together in the military fashion and lifted his hand to the rim of his hat.

"Mother," he said not very steadily, "I salute you, the greatest soldier of us all."

SEE THE FUNNY SIDE.

Use Your Sense of Humor When Distressing Situations Arise.

Humor proves to be the saving clause of many a distressing situation. The trouble with most of us is that we take our troubles altogether too seriously. We fail to see the funny side of things that for the moment concern us, even though we are quick to grasp it when we are mere onlookers.

In the face of gathered clouds that seem to shut out the sunshine forever it is not a bad idea to remind ourselves that this old mother earth has been revolving on her axis for countless ages, that generations of men have come and gone for thousands of years and that the march of human progress has gone right along in the forward direction d pite what seemed to be occasional setbacks.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you." There is humor in nearly every situation if we can only see it from the right angle. Those of us who try to smile in adversity and think how much more laughable it would be if conditions were reversed at least feel less uncomfortable over it and take pleasure in looking forward to the time when the shoe will be on the other foot.—Omaha Bee.

The Drum of the Ear.

The reason deaf people cannot hear is that the drum of the ear is imperfect or has been destroyed. Sound is nothing but the vibrations of the air acting on the drum of the ear. When people are quite deaf it is because the eardrum will not respond to these vibrations, but they can still feel these vibrations even if they cannot hear them. When a number of deaf mutes are sitting in a room together and one wishes to attract the attention of another he strikes his heel on the floor, and every one in the room feels the vibration and looks around to see who called. In the large asylums for the deaf and dumb the doors are hung very loosely, so that if you shake them it sets up a vibration like stamping on the floor, and that is the way they wake up deaf people that sleep too late in the morning.

Ether and Matter.

The densest matter is more or less porous. Gold will absorb mercury as a lump of sugar will absorb water, showing there must be litterstices or interatomic spaces in it, but the ether shows no such property. If a drop of water could be magnified sufficiently one would ultimately see the different atoms of hydrogen and oxygen that constitute the molecules of water. If a small volume of ether could be thus magnified the indications are that the ultimate pure weight look like the first, which is the same as saying that it is not made up of discrete particles, but fills space completely. This is expressed by saying that the ether is a continuous medium and incomparable with matter.

Safety First.

I was returning home the other evening about 6:30 o'clock when I saw Tommy, my neighbor's boy, playing with a crowd of other boys. I knew that his family always had supper at 6 o'clock sharp, so I said, "I'll bet you 5 cents you'll miss your supper, Tommy."

He grinned up at me saucily and replied: "Then you lose your bet, 'cause I got the chops right here with me. Ma sent me for 'em at 5 o'clock."—Everybody's Magazine.

Too Mean a Trick.

"See here; I wrote and asked you when you were going to pay that old account and even inclosed a stamp, but you never answered."

"My dear sir, wouldn't it have been a mean trick to use your own stamp to disappoint you?"

A Warning.

"Don't be too ready to bandy wit with a chemist."

"Why not with a chemist?"

"Because he always has a ready retort."

Postage Stamps.

There are at the present time over 21,000 varieties of postage stamps in circulation throughout the world.

Let gratitude for the past inspire us with trust for the future.—Fenelon.

A woman's idea of economy is to have her husband waste $3 worth of time putting up a 10-cent shelf.

AUTHOR A SUICIDE.

Alfred Conkling, New York Geologist, Is Found Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The body of Alfred R. Conkling, lawyer, geologist and author, was found in the courtyard of his home early to-day. He either fell or jumped from the fourth floor during the night. The police reported his death as suicide.

He was to have appeared before a referee on Thursday for examination as to the charges made by two of his daughters, Muriel and Olga, that he had mishandled funds in his charge as guardian and trustee.

"City Government in the United States," "Life and letters of Roscoe Conkling," "Hand book for voters," and "Guide to Mexico," were some of the works from his pen in addition to numerous articles on geology.

WON'T CALL NEGROES OF DRAFT ARMY YET

WAR DEPARTMENT WILL DETERMINE FIRST DEFINITE POLICY AS A RESULT OF RIOTING AT HOUSTON.

WASHINGTON.—Until the War Department determines upon a policy with regard to quartering negroes of the South no negroes chosen under the the outh, no negroes chosen under the selective draft system will be called to the colors. This course is due to protests from Southern States following the rioting by negro troopers of the Twenty-fourth Infantry at Houston, Texas.

The problem affecting negro soldiers has given the War Department a great deal of concern. It was originally intended to send negro members of the national army to the cantonments to which the selected men from their districts were assigned. It was hoped that the matter would adjust itself, particularly as it had been represented that there would be little danger of race difficulties from organizations of negro troops quartered in their own parts of the country where the relative position of whites and negroes was well understood.

No objection had been raised to sending to Southern cantonments negro units of National Guard contingents of Northern States, and it was felt by the department that if the subject was not agitated, danger of friction would be removed.

The rioting at Houston, however, has revived the issue, and the War Department feels that it is wiser to defer sending negroes selected for the national army to cantonments until it has had time to give careful consideration to the problem and decide upon a policy. One of the reasons advanced for not calling negroes in the first contingent of the draft is that some of the cantonments have not been completed, and this necessitates somewhat crowded conditions in the quarters provided for soldiers.

Fruit Blanc Mange.

One quart of stewed or one can of fruit—cherries, raspberries, and strawberries are best. Strain off all the juice. Sweeten it to taste and put on to boil. Moisten three even tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a little cold water and stir it into the boiling juice. Boil and continue stirring for five minutes. Add fruit and pour it into a mold that has been wet with ice water. Stand away to cool. Serve cold with sugar and cream.

A HISTORIC CHURCH.

Linked For a Century With Official Life in Washington.

In historic St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, just across Lafayette square from the White House, more presidents and men prominent in Washington official life have worshiped than in any other church in the national capital. St. John's, now a century old, was the first building to be erected on Lafayette square after the White House, which was completed in 1800. The presidents of the United States who worshiped here were John Quincy Adams, Madison, Monroe, Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, Fillmore and Arthur and in more recent times the White House was represented by Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Taft, who made St. John's church their church home.

Other prominent people were regularly seen in the congregation, including Stephen Decatur, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Chief Justice Fuller, Salmon P. Chase, Benjamin F. Butler, Lewis Cass, George Bancroft, Winfield Scott and George Dewey. Its rectors officiated at nearly all of the early White House weddings, many notable ones having taken place within its sacred walls.

The denominations have been pretty well represented in the presidency. Grant attended the Metropolitan Methodist church, McKinley the Foundry Methodist church; Benjamin Harrison and Cleveland attended the Presbyterian church; Wilson is a Presbyterian and, like Cleveland, the son of a Presbyterian minister; Garfield was a member of the Disciples church, and Roosevelt attended the Dutch Reformed church

Fashion's Changes.

One can say as a certainty that in the twentieth century no one will be able to boast that he has created anything absolutely new in fashions. The crinolines of the Empress Eugenie were a reminiscence of the panniers of Marie Antoinette, and long before her time, in the orient, women had conceived the idea of enlarging their skirts by means of hoops. A few years ago women of fashion affected high waists and sheath dresses, but before them Mme. Becamier had done the same thing, and the dresses of Mme. Becamier were suggested by the Greeks and the Romans. In short, like everything else, fashion is a part of the same everlasting come and go. We do not advance as we are so prone to imagine; we repeat our steps.—Roger Boutet de Monvel in Century.

How to Walk.

There is no virtue in a dawdling saunter. The slow and languid dragging of one foot after the other which some people call walking would tire an athlete. It utterly exhausts a weak person, and that is the reason why many delicate persons think they cannot walk. To derive any benefit from the exercise it is necessary to walk with a light, elastic step which swings the weight of the body so easily from one leg to the other that its weight is not felt and which produces a healthy glow, showing that the sluggish blood is stirred to action in the most remote veins.

Ruined by Jesting.

The Antiochenes themselves brought about the ruin of the beautiful city of Antioch, the ancient capital of the Greek kings of Syria. These people were famous for their biting and scurrilous wit as well as their ingenuity in devising nicknames. When the Persians under Chosroes invaded Syria in 538 the Antiochenes could not refrain from jesting at them. Ample revenge for this was taken by the Persians, who totally destroyed the city.

Planting Large Trees.

Careful consideration should be given to the planting of large trees and shrubs, as planting of this kind should be permanent. Flower beds may be changed more or less every year, but large shrubs and trees require years to develop fine specimens, so they should not be disturbed or moved after they are once located.

Save the Teeth if Possible.

The mania of many physicians for ordering diseased teeth extracted is meeting with outspoken protest from dentists and doctors. They say that teeth should be pulled only when the abscesses at their roots cannot be [illegible]

Stomach Cramps
COLIC

These are very painful and their attacks are often sudden, and sometimes fatal. The principal seat is in the stomach and bowels, producing severe twisting, cramping pain, and often accompanied by vomiting. If you are troubled in this way, there is only one remedy to cure you, and that one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has a record of cures extending over 72 years, and we have yet to hear of a case where it has failed to either relieve or cure.

Beware of imitations and substitutes sold by unscrupulous dealers for the sake of greater profits, as these no-name, no-reputation, worthless preparations may prove dangerous to your health.

Mrs. H. Miller, 735 Mark St., Fort William, Ont., writes: "Last summer my husband came home from work, and could hardly straighten up for cramps. The first thing I gave him was a dose of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and I hadn't repeated it very long until he was all right again. It is the only remedy I give my children in the summer for cholera or cramps in the stomach. I have never been without it in the house for the last two or three years."

ODD FREAKS OF FATE

SOME STRANGE ANECDOTES OF THE GREAT WAR.

How the Long Arm of Coincidence Plays a Part in the Fate of Men, as Shown by Experiences Recorded by the Soldiers Who Are Fighting for the Empire.

IN the distant, easy-going pre-war days we used rather to poke fun at some writers for what was called their habit of stretching the long arm of coincidence to fit the exigencies of the plots. That idea is perhaps one of the many that we shall have to revise in the light of the war. For the most extravagant among the users of the long arm rarely ventured upon any stretching of it that would equal Fate's almost daily exercise of it in this war. One day last year two hospital ships were berthed at the same time alongside the landing stage at Southampton, says A. J. Dawson, author of "Somme Battle Stories," in the New York Tribune. One was from France and the other from the Near East. For the most part the cases removed from one ship saw nothing of those disembarked from the other, but it happened by chance that one of the first stretcher cases from the Near East ship was laid down in the shed alongside one of the last stretcher cases from the French ship. But the two men did not see each other, because their heads were turned in opposite directions. The writer, walking between the stretchers, offered a newspaper to one of these men, and as he spoke both turned their heads and saw and recognized each other. They were brothers. Both had been serving since the autumn of 1914, and neither had the remotest idea what had become of the other.

In a sector on the Ancre, before the majority of people in England had ever heard of that little river, the company in reserve was reckoned almost as well placed as a company in rest. By comparison with a very vile front line, the support line trenches there were very good and had some really excellent dugouts. "D" Company's O. C. had an excellent dugout to himself there, and a splendid mess dugout was shared as a sleeping place by his subalterns, and then had a bunk to spare. On a bitter cold night at the end of 1915 "D" Company went into reserve, having been relieved in the front line by "A" after a rather hot turn in which the O.C. "D" had had no sleep at all. After posting his various support line duties, and having some food in the commodious mess dugout, the O. C. made off for the luxurious solitude of his own dugout, thankful for the prospect of a good sleep. Half an hour later he returned to the mess dugout, where there was a cheery little fire of coke and charcoal. Now he crouched over the little fire in the mess dugout to light a pipe and warm himself before climbing into the spare bunk. While he crouched there he heard the whirring moan of a biggish Boche shell, which landed not far away with a tremendous explosion. Then another, and then a third, and then silence. When the O. C. "D" went back he found that his dugout had suffered three direct hits, and its contents scattered for hundreds of yards; but soldiers have seen so many of these lucky escapes that they have almost ceased to note them.

The sergeant-major of "A" Company was recognized as a man of parts. He had once shared a moderately substantial business with a partner. But there had come a day of disaster. The sergeant-major's partner had disappeared, and the books and accounts, which had been his special charge, disclosed quite a long series of systematic frauds, the upshot of which left the sergeant-major picked pretty bare by the time he had honorably settled up with all creditors. When the war came it found him employed in the counting-house of another firm with which he had previously had dealings as a fellow wholesaler. With a wife, an invalid sister, and three children dependent upon him, he had not been able to satisfy himself in the quite early days of the war that he had the right to enlist, though he was an old volunteer and ex-Territorial. However, the early spring of 1915 saw him an enlisted man. He was a platoon sergeant within a couple of months, and company sergeant-major three months before his unit reached France. He was liked and respected by everyone who knew him but—"Can you see the sergeant-major holding his end up in the scrap?" asked the junior sub of the company, in a tent on the hill outside Boulogne during their first night in France. And his brother-officers nodded thoughtfully. "You'll find he'll do his job."

During those early months in France he often used a rifle in the trenches, was occasionally out on patrol, and more than once fired a drum or two from a machine gun. The O. C. found him very helpful in the discussion and arrangement of minor strafes, and the severest critic would never have found a hint of inclination to shirk in the sergeant-major. As the O. C. said, he was always "on deck," and never forgot anything. But at the end of four months he never had laid hands upon a Boche, or even seen one, save as one does catch fleeting glimpses of men in trenches a couple of hundred yards away. And then there came the first daylight raid in that bit of line. It was a Boche raid, and it came at the end of an hour's very hot bombardment on an extremely narrow section of our front. It really did not touch the section of the sergeant-major's own company, but it happened that he was on the extreme left flank of his company's line when a handful of Boches rushed a machine gun emplacement of the next company.

Some men of the next company were out on the parapet, and something made the sergeant-major climb out too. It was then that he had his first close look at Boches. Two of them had collared the next company's Lewis gun from that emplacement; big, beefy-looking Bavarians they were, one in a helmet and the other wearing a cap. Now, as though he were listening to some other fellow a good long way off, he heard himself yell with quite singular ferocity, and felt himself leaping forward at those two Boches, his bayonet held low. The one with the cap let all go and bolted into the greenish smoke, but the fellow in the helmet swung around at bay with a revolver which he fired just as the sergeant-major swooped down upon him, yelling like a South Sea Island warrior. The Boche grunted as the steel found his vitals, and his body pitched forward, almost dragging his rifle from the sergeant-major's hands. He was still alive when the S.-M. bent over him to look into his face, and the eyes of the two met in a queer, flickering glance, all curiosity on the side of the Englishman, and vindictive hate on the side of the German, who, by the way, was an unter-offizier. With that look of hatred in his eyes he died, having clearly recognized the man who killed him.

This first Boche seen in the war by the sergeant-major was his absconding partner.

THE RHODES SLOGAN.

The First Man to Organize a Gigantic Trust.

"So little done, so much to do!"

This was the sigh of Cecil Rhodes, one of the greatest men the world ever knew. John Hays Hammond, who knew him well, tells about Rhodes in the American Magazine. He says:

"The achievements of Rhodes are almost unthinkable. Long before American trusts were attempted, he formed what was then the greatest business combination in history, and became absolute autocrat of the diamond business of the whole world. He organized a huge consolidation of gold companies; he was the first financier courageous enough to institute deep-level mining on the Rand, the method on which now depends the future of the greatest of all gold fields.

"No Roman emperor ever won more territory than Rhodes brought under his native British flag. Through the Chartered Company, incorporated in 1889, he added to the British Colonial dominions territory equal to the combined areas of the British Isles, France, Prussia, Austria, and Spain. He made possible the federation of all South African States, and planned to link Cape Colony and Cairo by rail—a project that he carried half way to fruition before he was cut off by death when he was only forty-nine years old.

"Yet with this record of empire building behind him, his last words as he lay dying were these:

"'So little done, so much to do!'"

More Serious.

"You seem indifferent to criticism in the newspapers."

"I don't have time to keep up with it," replied Senator Sorghum. "You ought to see what my constituents send me direct through the mail."

An Old Friend.

"You're an old friend of Mr. Newrich, I understand?"

"I should say so. I can remember when he used to drink his coffee out of the saucer."

The Wise Ones.

"Don't you wish you knew as much as your children think you do?"

"No. I wish I knew as much as my children think they do."—Houston Post.

THE SPRIG of MAGIC HEATHER

Premier Borden and Sir Robert Borden at the Canadian War Memorial Exhibition in London—Mr. MacDonald on left and Sir Donald on right.

Deutchmann's cabin at Nakimu Caves, Glacier, B.C.

I'M just an ordinary, every-day working woman." That I worry my living with a fountain pen and a typewriter, rather than with a fine needle and sewing machine, or a woolly cloth and a pail of suds, is an accident of temperament. I get just as tired sometimes scraping up thoughts and putting them into sentences as the other woman does who fine-combs Vogue or the Pictorial for a new way to make her customer's evening coat.

But this summer I had a holiday. I've had them before, but they've taken me to towns that were bigger and dirtier and more bedizenedly sophisticated than my own. I've come back so many dollars poorer, not a pound heavier, and, if I brought mementos home with me, they were body-wearables, not soul-delightables.

But this year I had a holiday that was so different that I'd rather spell it the old way and call it a Holy Day.

I spent a whole month in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Do you know what I'm looking at now? It's a sprig of red heather and I wouldn't give it up for a wardrobe-trunkful of dutiables.

I hold it in my hand, the tough little brown stalk of it, and gay green leaves, the purply-pink flame that it flowers into. And the walls of my den go back, melt out——

The sun is high in the cloudless heavens—the blue heavens that seem to hang like a soft curtain dropped to rest on the snow-tops of the great mountains. All morning I've followed the trail through the great trees of the Asulkan Valley, by the side of the ice-cold roaring glacial river, until the path led me back to the sources of everything.

The mountain slopes lay before me in a vast fan. Great gullies into which you could drop a city block looked like wrinkles in the brown velvet flanks. The river had its source in fold beginning on these slopes. To follow anyone of the streamlets up to its parent glacier-tongue would have been a day's joy, but the trail had elected to keep to the left, according to the traffic laws of British Columbia.

At home I'm reckoned a fairly good walker. I can do a couple of miles without being tired. But in the sharp-clear air of these intoxicating days I could go ten miles and get home with the lilt of pure joy in my very last step. And to pit myself against the sudden steepnesses of a trail full of surprises made me laugh out loud.

At the edge of a snowbank, where it crept to the border of the trail to peep over at the brooklet far below, my little bit of heather grew——

The vast silence of the heights was such that I wouldn't have been surprised if the brave pink bells had turned toward me and tinkled! I put my hand out slowly. And drew it back again.

I'm half Scotch according to the family tree that grows so green in my grandmother's memory. But I'd never seen heather before, except one wee pressed bit of it that compassionate friends had sent out to us.

And here it was—brave, wonderful, indomitable! I didn't need to wait to ask anybody. It was heather, heather to the staunch soul of it, and it was growing right there—for me.

I picked it and fondled it. Like purple spun, right up to where the last green grass blade lifted out of the glacial coldness that met straight up, steep as the pitch of a cathedral roof, to meet the far blue blaze of the sky. And when I had it here, the wee flame on its stalk lights up the way back to all that afternoon of fine days.

I have a pottery lily vase that can work magic. It grew right up through the snow in an Alpine meadow where I sat down to a great spicy sandwich and sat on a rock! [illegible]

I have a white "heart's a-fire" silky little ball that swung in the wind that blew down from the glaciers at Lake Louise.

I have a bunch of dried grass grass that swung from itself on a day we drove to Johnston Lake under the autumn skies [illegible]

I have a little trifle that has never seen a glass case, though its worthy of one. It means a meeting of enchantment on the prairie near upland body of Mt. Stephen at Field.

Best of all perhaps I have something that nobody can name.

"You look different," said my next door neighbor, "I don't know just what it is. You weren't sick when you went away. But now—you look like a house plant that's been in the garden all summer."

PRESS COMMENT ON DRAFTING OF ALIENS

HAS DONE A SENSIBLE THING

Charleston Post:—"The Senate has done a sensible thing in passing the resolution prescribing that alien residents of the United States other than nationals of enemy countries and their allies shall be subject to draft for military service."

MUST SUPPORT CAUSE.

Brooklyn Eagle:—"This will remove one of the most inequitable features of the Selective Draft law and place upon the non-citizens of the country a part of the burden of fighting for a cause that it is incumbent upon them to support either out of loyalty to this country or their own."

IN FOR A RUDE SHOCK.

Pittsburg Sun:—"It is a fair measure. Persons who come here expecting to find an asylum and escape all duties that devolve upon a citizen or a subject, and owing to the exodus of young men fall into remunerative positions, are in for a rude shock."

OPINION WILL BE DIVIDED.

Albany Journal:—"Opinion will be divided as to the justification for the proposition, indorsed by the Senate by resolution, and expected to be likewise approved by the House, that aliens in the United States be made subject to draft from military service."

NOT TO BE A HAVEN FOR COWARDS.

Newark Ledger:—"The Chamberlain resolution makes it clear that this country is not to be a haven for the coward and the slacker, and that it is not the place for the man without a country."

PLEASING TO ENTIRE NATION

Wheeling Register:—"The entire nation will welcome the passage by the United States Senate of a joint resolution which has for its purpose the drafting of all aliens in this country excepting subjects of the Teutonic Powers and such aliens as are exempted by treaty, Italians."

OVERWHELMINGLY APPROVED

Pittsburg Press:—"The bill is overwhelmingly approved by public opinion. That aliens who have been enjoying all the privileges of American citizens should go free of military responsibility while native born youth were being forced into service has struck the entire country as an extreme injustice."

Some people are proud of their past—because it is past.

RIOTS AT STETTIN.

One of the Historic Cities of the German Empire.

In few cities of the German empire would economic unrest and industrial disturbances have a more profound effect upon the kaiser's prosecution of the war than in Stettin, where serious food riots are reported to have occurred recently. It is in a suburb of Stettin that the great Vulcan shipyards are located, where so many of the German warships are built. Even in peace times the Vulcan works, covering more than 70 acres, employed 8,000 men, and this number has, of course, been vastly augmented since the Prussians began with feverish haste to multiply the units of their sinister submarine fleets.

Stettin's importance to German arms does not end with its shipbuilding activities, however. Locomotives, boilers, and machinery of various kinds are manufactured there, while the clothing mills, employing more than 10,000 men, women, and children, are probably mobilized at this time for the production of uniforms for the Prussian soldiers.

Stettin is 85 miles by rail northeast of Berlin. It has a population of 236,000 and is built on both banks of the River Oder, about seventeen miles above its entrance into the Stettiner Haff, a landlocked arm of the Baltic. Vessels drawing as much as 23 feet of water can discharge their cargoes here, especially in the new Free Harbor, adjacent to the suburb of Lastadie, with quays having a total length of more than 14,000 feet. Next to Hamburg and Bremerhaven, more ships annually entered and cleared from Stettin before the war than at any other port in Germany. The city may be considered the seaport for Berlin. It is the capital and principal city of the province of Pomerania.

The authentic history of Stettin dates from the twelfth century when it was known at Stedyn. For several hundred years it belonged to the dukes of Pomerania, one of whom granted it municipal rights as early as the middle of the thirteenth century. The line of dukes became extinct in 1637 and 11 years later the town became a Swedish possession. It was not until the following century (1720) that it was allotted to Prussia by the treaty of Stockholm. Frederick the Great greatly strengthened its fortifications, but these did not prevent its surrender to the French without a struggle in 1806. Seven years later it was returned to Prussia. The city's defenses were raised in 1874, thereby greatly facilitating its industrial expansion.

Stettin might be likened to Hartford, Conn., for it is the home office of many of the biggest insurance companies of the German empire.

Although other cities have tried to rob it of the distinction, Stettin may rightly claim the honor of being the birthplace of one of the greatest women of history, Catherine II. of Russia. At the time of her birth her father (Christian Augustus of Anhalt-Zerbst) was military commandant of Stettin. The future ruler of Russia was baptized Sophia Augusta Frederica. She did not become 'Catherine' until she was rebaptized, at the age of 15, into the Orthodox Greek Church the day before her marriage to the son (afterward Peter III.) of the Russian Empress Elizabeth.

YOUR MENTAL MACHINE.

Shut Off Its Power at Night After a Day's Hard Work.

It is a great thing to learn—to shut off the mental steam when you quit work. What would you think of a factory manager who would leave all of his power turned on after the operators had left the factory, the delicate machinery running everywhere, pounding itself to pieces, grinding out its delicate bearings without producing anything?

Many of us do not turn off our mental power after we are through producing or creating for the day. We carry our business home, take it to bed with us, think, plan, worry and waste precious energy in all sorts of ways, in superfluous thinking, foolish worrying that produces nothing, but grinds out the exquisite mental machinery and unfits it for the next day's work.

It is a great art to learn to shut off power when through our day's work, so that we can oil our mental machinery, refresh our minds and recuperate ourselves, so that we can go to the next day's work completely reinvigorated.

Many men seem to think that they are accomplishing something if they keep their minds on business even when not at work, but they really accomplish less than nothing because they are wasting precious mental energy, the power for concentration, the vigor, the focusing of the mind, which is imperative for creating purposes.—Orison Swett Marden.

THE DRY WALL

A Beautiful Art In Stone Work That Is Passing Away.

In the American Magazine David Grayson says:

"In dry walls I think the old stone mason takes the greatest pride of all, for it is in the dry wall—I mean by that a wall laid without mortar—that the sheer art of the mason comes most into play.

"Any one can throw a wall together if he has mortar to make it stick, but a dry wall must stand out for what it is, built solid from the bottom up, each stone resting securely upon the one below it and braced and nested in by the sheer skill of the mason.

"The art of the dry wall is the ancient heritage of New England and speaks not only of the sincerity and the conscientiousness of the old Puritan spirit, but strikes the higher note of beauty.

"Many of the older walls I know are worth going far to see, for they exhibit a rare sense of form and proportion and are sometimes set in the landscape with a skill that only the master artist himself could exceed. Those old hard wrought stone fences of the Burnham hills and Crewsbury, the best of them, were honestly built and built to last a thousand years.

"A beautiful art—and one that is passing away! It is the dry wall that stands of itself that the old stonemason loves best of all."

Crawling For Penance.

A Buddhist priest who has been eight years on the way to Lassa expects to arrive there eight years hence. He started from the northeast of Peking, and when met by an English missionary he had completed over 2,000 miles, about half his journey. He does not walk, he crawls, or, rather, he combines both methods. On his hands he wears boards; on his knees he wears pads. He lies full length upon the ground; then, getting up, walks to where his fingers had reached, then prostrates himself and measures afresh. He is under a self imposed vow and believes that if he crawls in this manner to the Tibetan holy city his sins will be forgiven and honors bestowed upon him by Buddha.

Too Nervous To Sleep

NERVES WRECKED BY ACCIDENT—WAS AFRAID TO GO IN A CROWD OR TO STAY ALONE—TELLS OF HIS

London, September 19. — Much sympathy was felt in this city for Mr. Dorsey, who met with a distressing accident when his foot was smashed in an elevator.

The shock to the nervous system was so great that Mr. Dorsey was in a pitiable condition for a long time. He was like a child in that he required his mother's care nearly all the time. He feared a crowd, could not stay alone, and could not sleep because of the weakened and excited condition of his nerves.

Detroit doctors did what they could for him, but he could not get back his strength and vigor until he fortunately heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is no mere accident that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves to be exactly what is needed in so many cases of exhausted nerves. It is composed of the ingredients which naturally renew nerve force. For this reason it cannot fail and for this reason it succeeds when ordinary medicines fail.

Mr. Laurence E. Dorsey, 39 Stanley street, London, Ont., writes: — "About three years ago I got my foot smashed in an elevator in Detroit, which completely wrecked my nerves. I doctored with the doctors there, but they did not seem to be able to help me. My nerves were in such a state that I could not go down town alone, or go any place where there was a crowd. Sometimes my mother would have to sit and watch over me at night, and sometimes I could not get any sleep at all. But one day last winter I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had completely used the first box I could see a difference in my condition. I continued using these pills for some time. The result was splendid. I feel so much better, can sleep well at night, can go out on the street and attend gatherings like the rest of the people. I am so pleased to be able to tell you what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for me, and to recommend it to other people."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of six boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Sad Death In Hastings

Bread-winner of Family Removed by Death—Hastings News

HASTINGS, Sept. 19.—Mr. Alfred Parsons, a very highly respected resident of Hastings, passed away on Tuesday last. By his death three young boys are left orphans, the mother having died about four years ago. The funeral service was held on Thursday afternoon and was largely attended, as a token of respect for one who was a universal favourite. The remains were interred in Trent Valley cemetery.

Mr. Malcolm Baker is in receipt of a cablegram stating that his brother, Colin, has been missing since August 15th.

Mrs. J. Richardson also received notice that her son, Pte. Roy Richardson, was missing since the same date.

News of this kind naturally gives much anxiety to the friends, as no further notice has since been received.

We are pleased to say that Mrs. H. Collins is improving daily.

Another resident of Asphodel has passed away in the perso nof Mrs. John Preston, who died at her late residence on Thursday last after a protracted illness. Deceased was 66 years of age, and had lived to see a large family of sons and daughters grow up around her and become settled in life, and who now are left to mourn the loss of a very affectionate mother. The funeral was held on Saturday, and the large gathering was a mark of the esteem in which she was held in the vicinity in which she had spent her married life. The remains were laid to rest in Trent Valley cemetery.

Seriously Ill.

Mr. Frank Runnels has received a cable message from England, stating that his son, Reg., is seriously ill in the hospital. His many friends here are anxiously awaiting news of improvement in his condition, and wish for him a complete recovery.

Still another resident of Asphodel has been called away in the person of Mrs. Geo. English, who died in Toronto on Friday after a short illness, caused by pneumonia. The remains were brought to Hastings on Monday and taken to the Presbyterian Church where a service was held, after which interment was made in Trent Valley cemetery. Deceased had reached the age of 73 years, leaves to mourn her loss several grown-up sons and daughters, to whom the sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended. Her husband predeceased her some years ago.

Mr. R. N. Simpson has purchased the livery business of Mr. Alex. Greenley, and takes possession at once.

Mr. Greenley has almost decided to move to Toronto.

Those who attended Peterborough Exhibition report a good attendance and an interesting exhibit.

Rev. and Mrs. I. Snell have returned from a pleasant holiday, and have resumed their duties.

Mr. Duncan Fife is erecting a fine verandah which will add much to its appearance.

Mr. John Oliver and Mrs. W. Stenson attended the funeral of their father in Warkworth on Sunday last.

Misses Tilley and Ella Brooks of Brantford are guests of their sister, Mrs. Longmuir.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Warner of Toronto, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warner.

Mrs. Stott and children of Palmerston, are guests of her sister, Mrs. G. Horner.

Mrs. Alex. Greenley spent the past week with her son in Toronto.

Several of our people motored to Deseronto during the week to take in the sights.

Master Stanley Stevenson has started to Norwood High School to pursue his studies.

The funeral of the late Mr. Murphy of Percy was held on Friday morning. Service was held in the R. C. Church here, after which the remains were conveyed to the Church cemetery for interment.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood of Toronto attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John Preston on Saturday last.

GERMAN EDITORS' BAIL IS DOUBLED; TREASON CHARGED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19—Charged with treason, Louis Werner, chief editor of the Philadelphia Tageblatt, German language newspaper, and Dr. Martin Darkow, managing editor, each were to-day held in $50,000 additional bail for trial. They are already under bail on the charge of violation of the Espionage law.

In deciding to admit the men to bail, Judge Dickinson, of the Federal Court, said every one realized the gravity of the charges, but that the treasonable acts charged in the indictment were such as to entitle the defendants to bail. They were indicted last Saturday.

Both men waived the service of Bench warrants and Mr. Kane, United States Attorney, asked but did not urge that they be held without bail. Counsel for the defendants opposed the request and said he felt that the $10,000 bail, under which each of the men was held last week on charges of violating the Espionage act, was sufficient. Counsel said a hurried inspection of the articles charged to have constituted treason did not appear to him to have transgressed the laws of treason.

To show the character of the men so charged, counsel said Werner's two brothers fought through the civil war and that he had two cousins buried at Gettysburg. Werner, he said, had been a citizen of the United States for thirty years. Dr. Darkow, it was brought out by the federal attorney, applied for citizenship in 1894, but never followed up the application.

THE FLANDERS OFFENSIVE IS ON AGAIN

THE BRITISH ATTACK EAST OF YPRES

Valuable Positions Captured By The British In A New Offensive

British Infantry Went Over the Top on a Wide Front East of Ypres This Morning---Capture of Positions Is Reported by Field Marshal Haig Who States That Satisfactory Progress Has Been Made---Offensive Was Proceeded by a Terrific Bombardment.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, September 20.—Field Marshal Haig's offensive which was begun at dawn this morning on the Belgian battle front, is proceeding with marked success, especially in the crucial sector between the Ypres-Roulers railway and Hollebeke. Bitter fighting is in progress in the neighbourhood of Inverness Copse, Nuns Wood and Glencorse Wood. If the attackers maintain the positions to which they have advanced in this section they have accomplished one of the most remarkable and most important achievements in recent months.

German infantry is making most determined resistance to retain this vital ground, and the Teuton artillery is retaliating heavily against the British big guns.

To-day's offensive will be known as the battle of Menin Road. Fair weather had improved the ground but the mud still was deep and the whole territory is covered with water-filled shell holes, tangled barbed wire and shattered trees. The German defenses were composed largely of concrete redoubts, from which the enemy poured a wicked stream of bullets into the ranks of the advancing troops. Every little elevation in the woods was choked with rapid-fire guns. The British encountered hard fighting at many places, but their magnificent artillery work had done much to make the first stage of their drive easier. British barrage swept the country like a broom. The Germans knew the attack was coming but were unaware of its exact location. There was a light rain last night, but the weather cleared with morning and the visibility is improving.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 20.—Reuter's says that the Swedish Minister at Berlin had been instructed to protest to Germany against the Luxburg incident, it being confirmed that the German official seriously abused the confidence of Sweden.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Bulletin), September 20. — British forces on the Belgian front attacked the German positions at 5:40 o'clock this morning east of Ypres. Field Marshal Haig reports that satisfactory progress was made and that the British already have captured some valuable positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 20.—The attempt by the German press and officials to create an atmosphere of what is believed here to be another manoeuvre again is given prominence in morning newspapers which are of unanimous opinion that there can be no peace until Prussian militarism is crushed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 20.—Except for artillery activity which was lively at various parts of the battle front in France last night, an official statement issued this afternoon by the French War Office says there was nothing of importance to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 20.—Early this morning British infantry went "over the top" on a wide front east of Ypres, and the Flanders offensive was on again. The rush was successful at the outset for the capture of positions of value were reported by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig during the forenoon and the progress made was described as satisfactory.

The renewal of the offensive came after a long pause in which intensive preparatory work had been carried on unceasingly.

The fighting in this period indeed was such as to pile up heavy casualties on both sides, while the crushing drum-fire from the British guns has been admitted by Germans to have had a destructive effect upon their positions.

Early reports did not outline definitely the extent of the front attacked, but a clue seems to have been furnished by Berlin which yesterday reported drum-fire to be pounding the line from Houthoist Wood, some five miles South of Dixmude to the River Lys, a distance of about 15 miles.

This would indicate that the main force of the drive was directed toward Roulers and Courtrai with the probable object of driving a wedge further into the German Flanders front, and eventually compelling the German abandonment of the Belgian coast with its valuable submarine and aerial bases. The civilian population is recently reported to have been removed from towns in the German rear along a wide stretch of this front including the two cities named.

GERMAN LOSSES ARE UNUSUALLY HEAVY

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, September 20.—British troops went forward to-day in another great offensive centring over the Ypres-Menin Road.

Reports to headquarters as this is despatched declare all first objectives had been taken.

It is believed the German losses were unusually heavy. Great masses of troops concentrated for the British attack—long advertised by a drum-fire preparation—were caught under a hail of shells from the British batteries. The offensive blow of to-day was over a long front. It was timed to follow an artillery preparation of tremendous volume.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL TRUSTEES ASKED TO RESIGN

Members Dissatisfied With Action That Left the Council Unrepresented at the Trades and Labour Congress

SECRETARY STEVENS QUITS

Their refusal to provide $60.00 to cover the expenses of Mr. George L. Myland, who had been appointed delegate to the annual Trades and Labour Congress, at Ottawa, this week, returned like a boomerang against the Trustee Board of the Peterborough Trades and Labour Council, who were asked to resign in a body, at last night's meeting.

The Trustees are M, J. J. Hartley, (chairman), Messrs. Stenton, Gainey, Davis and Marchand.

As a result of their action Peterborough's Labour Council is unrepresented at the big Congress at a time, some members observed, when it was more than ever important that Labour should voice its ideas and its desires.

It developed that the action of the trustees was based on the minutes of the last regular meeting. As they were read by Secretary William Stevens last night, one motion was to the effect that a delegate be sent to the Congress, and that he be given $60.00. Members claimed that there were two separate motions passed instead of one, and that the latter authorised the trustees to provide the delegate's expenses. Mr. J. J. Hartley replied that he had carefully repeated all motions before submitting them. Secretary Stevens denied that the "trustee board" had been mentioned by the motion which he refused to alter. One member remarked that if the Secretary assumed that attitude he became a dictator.

Mr. Sevens gave the "tu quoque" without any reservation. This member, he said, was a dictator, as he had shown himself to be on more than one occasion. The member demanded the withdrawal of this statement and Chairman Hartley asked the Secretary to withdraw it. Mr. Stevens flatly refused to recall his expression and he was then asked to resign and retire. With a rather dramatic "good night, Mr. Chairman" he walked down the hall and passed out.

The criticism of the trustee board was resumed by some members, who stated that the trustees had defied the Council by their refusal to provide the delegate's expenses to Ottawa.

Mr. Davis, of the Street Railway Employees Union, interpreted the criticism as a want of confidence and tendered his resignation. This was followed by the motion, which passed with only one opposing vote, that the trustee board be asked to resign in a body.

The minutes were then amended, and passed.

The defence of the trustees was that they had not been instructed, according to the minutes, to provide the $60; but the reply to this contention was that the word "trustee" had been used at the last meeting in a separate motion. Moreover, the trustees knew that the Council desired to be represented at the Ottawa Congress, and that there were not sufficient funds in the Council treasury.

SAYS SPY CAUSED DEATH OF AVIATORS AT CAMP BORDEN

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, September 20.—Nine Canadian student aviators at Camp Borden went to their deaths recently through the work of a German spy in the camp, according to a story published to-day by the New York World.

The spy, according to the World's informant, enlisted in the corps and filed certain control wires until they were at the breaking point. He was a German, but spoke English fluently, and gained admission to the camp through a false history and a good knowledge of mechanics. The spy, it was said, was discovered. His fate is not known.

Making Arrangements For Medical Examination Of The Drafted Men

Lieut.-Col. Gardiner the A.D.M.S. of Military District No. 3 Here to Discuss Details of the Scheme---National Service Will Be the Basis of Calling Out the Men---To-day's General Military News.

Lieut.-Col. Gardiner, the A.D.M.S., for Military District No. 3, was in the city last night arranging details in connection with the work of the Medical Board who will examine the men called out in Peterborough under the Military Service Act. As already announced Majors Cameron and Eastwood will be two members of the Board. An official announcement of the third member has not yet been made. It is hoped to be in a position to begin the medical examination next week, and the members of the Board hope that men of the first class will see to it that they are examined as early as possible. The local Board will not only examine Peterborough men, but also the men from the surrounding district who will have to come to Peterborough to be examined.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—National Service will be the central idea governing appeals to local tribunals under the Military Service Act. It is unlikely that a hard and fast line will be drawn between trades or branches of trades. To lay down that certain occupations shall be exempt without consideration for the individual case or general or local conditions would, it is felt, lead to unfairness. While, therefore, tribunals will act under general regulations, each case of appeal for exemption will be considered on its merits especially in regard to its bearing on national conditions.

If a man's occupation is essential and the tribunal feels that he can render greater national service while following it, he will be exempted from the army. Again where undoubted hardship would ensue from the man being called to the colours—as in the case of an only son with a dependent widowed mother—the special circumstances will be taken into consideration.

Medical boards have now been established at pratically every mobilisation centre. Orders providing for their establishment have been sent to the G.O.C. each military district where appointments have not yet been made, the boards will be created within the next few days. The Montreal Board is scheduled to open to-day.

The boards come under the general supervision of the Medical Services Branch of the Militia Department, and it is emphasized here that there is absolutely no desire to take unfit men into the army. Under the terms of the Military Service Act, it is pointed out, not more than 100,000 can be drafted. It is in the interests of the military authorities that the best men available from the physical standpoint, shall be selected. Unfit men are not wanted.

G. W. V. A. NOW HAS 41 BRANCHES.

There are now 41 G. W. V. A. branches organized throughout Ontario. The recent additions are Aylmer, Barrie, Cobalt, Paris and North Cobalt.

Regarding the discipline of all returned soldiers it is published in administrative staff orders that all members of the C.E.F. who return to Canada or otherwise automatically come under the immediate control in matters of discipline, etc., of the military authorities in Canada.

Officers, non-commissioned officers and men who are on furlough and all others who for reasons are not attached to any particular unit in Canada are directly responsible to the general or other officers commanding the district in which they are, and he is considered for all purposes of discipline as their commanding officer.

SHIPMENTS OF CHEESE

Railways Will Not Accept Boxes That Show Any Signs of Breakage

The attention of cheese men in the Peterborough district is called to the fact that the railway companies will adhere rigidly to the freight classification decided upon last year in regard to the shipments of cheese. Factory men should understand that no box will be shipped which shows any sign of breakage, and that the cheese must fit the box or container snugly. These points are important and should be noted carefully.

IS THE GOVERNMENT PLAYING POLITICS WITH MILITARY SERVICE ACT?

Remarkable Letter Written by Deputy Speaker J. H. Rainville to His Constituents Causes Discussion in the House.

PREMIER NON-PLUSSED

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—A remarkable and significant letter written by J. H. Rainville, M.P., Deputy Speaker of the Commons, and former Nationalist, which is now being circulated in the Province of Quebec, was brought to the attention of the Commons this afternoon by Ernest Lapointe, of Kamouraska.

Liberal members of the House who have all along suspected that the Government was playing politics with the conscription issue declare that in Mr. Rainville's promise to all Quebec farmers and their sons and to "industrials"—or artisans—of complete exemption from conscription, there is illuminative testimony as to how the game is being played.

In Ontario Government candidates are making the plea that the military service bill is designed especially to get after the slackers in Quebec, and now for us in Quebec comes the semi-official declaration of Mr. Rainville that the manufacturing and agricultural classes are to be exempted as a whole.

Estimates Seem to Corroborate.

Corroborative of this idea of dealing lightly with Quebec in the actual working out of the military service act it may be noted that, according to estimates prepared for the Government in regard to the number of men affected in each Province coming under the first class of the act, it is stated only six per cent. of Quebec's population will be affected, although for the Western Provinces, which have already contributed more than their full share towards the 500,000 men, the estimate is said to be fifteen per cent.

In his circular letter promising wholesale exemption, Mr. Rainville declared, "I have at last succeeded in winning my point," and he adds: "Instructions are given according to what I now tell you." If Mr. Rainville, the former ally of Mr. Bourassa, has "won his point," the inference which may be drawn as to the covert understanding between the Government and the Nationalists is obvious.

Mr. Rainville's Letter.

Mr. Ernest Lapointe (Kamouraska) rose, on the orders of the day, and read the letter in French, which he translated as follows:

"Ottawa, Sept. 11, 1917.

"Dear Sir,—I have the pleasure to tell you that the regulations of the military law exempt the farmers, their families and industrials of good faith.

"I have, at last, succeeded to win my point, and it is only justice. You can without any fear whatever present your unmarried sons to the tribunals. Instructions are given according to what I now tell you. I hope the farmers will do the utmost in the largest production of all that is necessary to feed the population. With my best wishes, believe me, yours truly, J. H Rainville."

Mr. Lapointe asked the Prime Minister if the Deputy Speaker had been authorized by the Government to make this announcement before Parliament had been acquainted with the regulations. He asked if such regula-

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS DECEIVED BY HUNS MURDER OFFICERS

Threw the High Officers, Including Two Generals, Into the River and Then Shot at Them Until They Disappeared in Swirling Waters

A TERRIBLE STORY

(By William F. Shepperd, Copyright 1917 by the United Press.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 20. — German agents made Viborg, a city of Finland, not a hundred miles from Petrograd, a place of horror.

Loyal Russian soldiers threw ten of their officers, including two generals, into the river and then shot at them until all but one disappeared in the swirling waters. This one, a colonel, clambered up the bank, only to be brained by one of his men.

Another officer was found in his home and his head half severed. Still another was found lynched in a woods.

The German agents had spread rumours that Premier Kerensky, then "at bay because of Korniloff's successful rebellion," had requested the troops of Gen. Vassiluf, commander-general of Finland, to aid in the defence of Petrograd, and that Vassiluf had refused his appeal and his orders.

The story was absolutely untrue. But the soldiers rose in mutiny, demanding that the democracy be defended.

SCENES OF TERROR.

As the loyalty of the bulk of the army has again been demonstrated, I am able to-day to tell of the scenes of terror that accompanied last week's crisis.

Members of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council claim that Korniloff executed an entire regiment of his men at Tarnopol. During the revolt many of the troops turned the tables and executed their officers.

When it was sent to the cable office and filed by dispatch to the United Press that the Korniloff revolt had been crushed, the censor remarked: "The lives of his officers are not worth a cent if that is true."

OCCURRED A WEEK AGO.

The Viborg horror occurred one week ago to-day. The German inspired story spread like wild fire among the troops. They were moved to anger almost of insanity. They mutinied and stalked forth to seize their officers. Many were thrown instantly into prison.

Vassiluff himself, with nine others—all high army officers, including Gen. Orniloffski and Col. Karenius—were seized.

These ten the infuriated soldiers dragged to the Port Abo bridge. There they threw them into the water, and while they swam desperately for the shore, Russian soldiers fired at the helpless officers.

A great crowd gathered. Women fainted at the sickening cruelty. A panic ensued on the packed bridge and many were injured in their frantic struggles to reach the banks again.

For half an hour this target practice at the officers continued. Then most of them were either killed, overcome with their wounds or exhausted by their efforts to keep afloat.

MILITARY TRAINING IN THE SCHOOLS.

We have just entered upon a new year in educational work in our schools, and it becomes us to use measures and adapt instruction and educational training to secure the best all round results in the work of fitting pupils for the highest efficiency of citizenship in relation to all its duties.

The first considerations is health and a sound body. The motto, a sound mind in a sound body, in its expression is as old as Juvenal, the Roman satirist, who eighteen hundred years ago, said in his tenth satire: "We should pray for a sound mind in a sound body"; and in its truth as old as man himself.

Since a sound mind is the sine qua non of the best educational results, since a sound body is essential condition of a sound mind, it is well to pay much attention to physical training. Physical defect has led to the rejection of thousands of otherwise good Canadian soldiers.

Military training in our schools is one of the most desirable forms of securing physical efficiency because in addition to this desideratum, it involves other and greater advantages—moral, if not spiritual, advantages.

The chief and almost only objection to military training in the schools is that generally employed it would develop a national spirit of militarism, and militarism—of the German brand—is what we are fighting to destroy. Militarism like this is defined by the Imperial dictionary as "the system (or spirit) that leads a nation to pay excessive attention to military affairs and to keeping up great armies." There is militarism and militarism, one benignant and the other malignant. Of this kind is that of Germany, and words cannot condemn it adequately. The other is defensive and fully justified, especially in face of the menace of such malignant militarism as that of Prussia. A militaristic spirit in a people prepares it for defending itself against aggression. It can only be bad if a government in times of peace applies it to burdensome standing armies and oppressive military measures; and no Canadian government will ever do that.

If the people of Canada had been seized of the military spirit, if such a spirit had been developed generally by military training in the schools, it is probable that the call for soldiers to defend the country would have met with a larger response and that those responding would have been generally of better physical condition.

Military training in the schools tends to develop a more robust physique as well as a higher morale. Its effect is to impart moral qualities—subjection to, wholesome discipline respect for authority and obedience, qualities that enter into the composition of the highest type of citizenship.

Military training in the schools can be made the medium of a healthier national boyhood, if concurrently with the training in physical development and fitness there are incidentally imparted the rules of high living and instruction in the true meaning of citizenship.

Western Labour lobby condemns the Borden government's disfranchising franchise act.

FOOD SAVING AND SAVING.

The pressure and pinch of war conditions have led to a sort of panic, of frantic appeal to save food. The appeal is perfectly justified. The need is great. The great war drags on, and the necessity of feeding the troops of our own country and empire, and of our allies, confronts us now and will do so for some time to come; and this necessity must be met. One way of meeting it is saving food of certain kinds for export. We must do this ourselves and help others in doing it.

But there is a danger that in the effort to save food for export we may lose sight of the fact that saving is not the true thing. Saving is not a part of the national character. We have not been taught to save. We have produced abundantly, and we have wasted abundantly. It is no extreme assertion to say that in the matter of the proper use of our money and other means, we are in relation to the high art of saving and economical employment of means, a nation of spendthrifts.

We have never, as a people, been taught and trained to save, and this fact will account for the other fact that we shall not meet the urgent appeal, the clarion call of the hour, to save, as effectively as if we knew how.

We can't make over the national character, we cannot substitute habits of thrift for wasteful habits in a day. It is a matter of education; we must begin in the home, and, as we can't expect systematic and organized effort there, we must use the school as a means. We devote much attention to the education of the mind, but we, unfortunately, do not supply the important complement of mental training, practical instruction in the way of making economical and thrifty use of the means, the money, that comes into our possession as the main material object of our education.

We have in the Penny Banks not only a means of direct and actual saving, but a moulding influence in implanting, in the character of our children habits of thrift and saving such as will bring results in after life.

Eighteen years ago, the late Dr. Burnham, a member of the Board of Education, introduced the subject of school saving banks, gave great attention to it, and the Board was, as it is said to be now, convinced; but action was deferred and the project lapsed.

We cannot estimate what we have lost; for it can be safely asserted, that, if we had had for the past score of years, Penny Banks in all the schools of the nation we should now have a generation of citizens in active life impressed with the habit, and possessing the character of thrift and saving.

In that event the appeal to saving that is now being made to the country, would not to a large extent, be falling upon deaf ears, as far as character and thrift are concerned; but the national interest would have been served by the response of a people that knew how to save; but to whom now the call comes as something new and strange, if it is not regarded as a fancy, or a fad, and of doubtful necessity.

Our people would have had an appreciation of the value of saving as a principle and would have been equipped to effectively meet the demand that must now be met.

We have, however, neglected the right beginning, and we must do the best that in us lies to overcome this handicap of national unpreparedness. We must meet the call to the best of our will and ability; for food must be conserved. Our fighting forces must be fed. We must save to serve in providing food articles for export.

Canadians can't continue doing the amazing deeds they are doing on the battle front without being fed and reinforced. Conscription applied and conservation of food practised, will both help.

"WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE."

There does not seem to be a desirable unanimity of policy or opinion, action, or call to action, among the different departments of the Food Controller's staff. On this page is printed to-day an elaborate argument to controvert the objection of many people to the soundness of the Food Controller's action in barring the consumption of beef and bacon, and allowing the use of veal, which is permitted, according to the contention of some to the detriment of the future beef stock of the country—a considerable thing if the war is, as is possible, to last two or three years longer. The objection to the slaughter of calves is shared by one of the departments of the Food Controller's staff. While the educational department is advocating the killing of calves to save beef and bacon and fodder in the live stock branch, at a meeting yesterday, a resolution was adopted to promote the conservation of calves—the resolution beginning with these words:

"In the opinion of the Committee the conservation of calves, which is so urgently needed to increased production," etc.

This opinion, as well as that of Dr. J. G. Rutherford, a noted authority on cattle production, who declares there has been a great waste of beef material by the slaughter of calves," contrary to the contention of another department of the Food Controller's staff—the educational—which defends and upholds the slaughter of calves. Which are we to believe—"who shall decide when doctors disagree?" When the Food Controller or his staff issues decrees and opinions they should agree, or the public will get mixed and food conservation interests will be muddled.

The Food Controller, himself, was not very consistent when he sought to conserve food grains by forbidding the use of wheat in making whiskey, in face of the fact that last year only 27 hundred pounds of wheat were used for that purpose out of the 88 million pounds of other grains used in making whiskey. In view of this the appeal to the housewife to bake bran bread in order to save white flour for export, seems to lose a good deal of its "punch."

However, it remains the duty of the people to practise discriminatory economy of food, and that duty will be nobly met, but the performance of it would be less rasping if some attempt were made to bring the price of the inferior substitutes we must use, down to a comfortable level of price. We are told, for instance, that the miller's profit on a barrel of flour is $5.60. If that is so (and it has not been denied) the millionaire miller is not very actively sharing the sacrifice demanded and being made by those who are making wry faces over eating substitute foods to save white flour that nets the miller profits of five dollars a barrel. We want a little something like a fair deal.

All Canada, as well as the middle span of the Quebec bridge, is in suspense, and will heave a big sigh of relief when it is securely bolted in place.

THE FOOD CONTROLLER'S COMMENTARY ON CALVES

The Educational Department of the Food Controller's Office supplies the following concerning veal:

The questions have frequently been asked:

Why has not the Food Controller prohibited the use of veal?

Is it not an economic waste to kill the young animals?

These queries bring up several very debatable points. There is no doubt that it is good business to bring to maturity such calves as give promise of converting their feed into profitable beef or into profitable dairy products. But it lessens the farmer's output of milk and butter, and his supply of feed to no purpose when poor calves are kept. Very often calves give no promise of rendering returns either in milk or in beef. Thus male calves of dairy strain that cannot by any chance be expected to yield economical beef as steers, bring net profits only when slaughtered as prime veal.

To get best results from any herd, a certain amount of weeding out, particularly among the females, is essential. Only thus can the beef possibilities and the milking qualities respectively be maintained and improved. It may be remarked here, that the majority of veals slaughtered are males from dairy herds.

It is evident then that the consumption of veal could not be prohibited without entailing present loss, unprofitable feeding, and future deterioration of the herds.

Strange to say, although nearly everybody has eaten veal, and Canadian householders have bought and handled it for generations, few, very few people know even approximately how to define it.

A calf to be classed as prime veal, should not be younger than four weeks nor older than eight weeks. Also, although the beef veal calves are of beef breed; yet when well fed and well prepared, the dairy breed calf makes excellent veal. As a matter of fact, the greater part of Canadian veal is from dairy stock.

A prime dressed veal carcass weighs 65 to 70 per cent. of the live weight, whereas incidentally a good beef carcass runs only 55 to 59 per cent. Ordinarily, the weight of a veal calf lies between 120 and 160 pounds.

Veal should be eaten fresh. The best cuts come from the hindquarters. The brains, tongue, heart, liver and lights, are valuable and delicate foods." Sweetbreads, two glands, one near the base of the throat, and the other near the heart, are found only in calves that have been fed exclusively on the mother's milk. They begin to disappear as soon as the calf is put on grass or solid food.

From 150,000 to 180,000 calves are marketed in Toronto annually; and from 350,000 to 380,000 in Montreal. More than half are received during March, April, May and June. Except in decennial census years it is impracticable to determine the number of veal calves killed outside of the large stock yards.

The production of veal should be looked upon as entirely subsidiary to the output of beef and of dairy products. Veal is essentially a by-product of the beef and dairy industries. No greater mistake could be made than to regard it in any other light. To illustrate this, we may cite the fact that out of lots of 43,840 calves received at Point St. Charles, Montreal this year, 9,400 could have been matured for beef. The same was true of 8,194 head out of 34,081 calves arriving in Toronto. Taking, then, the average of 22.6 per cent., at least 113,000 calves of a total of about 540,000 arriving at Montreal and Toronto throughout the year, should not be slaughtered as veal. The problem thus narrows itself down to devising some methods of saving this 22.6 per cent. Summing up briefly, it is good business to cull out and "veal" calves of either beef-breed or dairy-breed, when it is clear that they will add nothing to the total wealth of the country.

HODGES AND TYNES IN "PRETTY BABY" COMING

One of the biggest and most costly organizations in musical comedy is Jimmie Hodges' and Jean Tynes' 1918 addition of their last season's success "Pretty Baby" that will come to the Grand next week. To the regular patrons of this form of amusement, this exceptional show promises to prove a refreshing treat out of the ordinary, offering as it does a bewildering array of lively entertainment, screaming farce, titillating musical travesty, exuberant extravaganza and scores of terpsichorean revelries upon a really high-grade scale. It is different from the ordinary run of musical comedies as can be, indeed, there is so much show, so large a company, so many varieties of entertainment, so many scenes and so many specialties, that it seems incredible that all of it can be so nicely dove-tailed together into a composite performance that speeds along at a headline pace. Hodges and Tynes, whose personality has endeared them to a vast clientele of the musical comedy state, heads their own big company. Their brilliant style of comedy has been copied by many imitators, but few can be claimed as their equal. Jimmie Hodges is a comedian in a class by himself, a recent criticism in the Philadelphia Ledger said that he was a Frank Tinney, Lew Fields, Bert Williams and several others rolled into one. Supporting these clever stars are such well known artists as Elmer Coudy, Ollie Hodges, Al. Garbelle, Georgia Fuller, Norman Coudy, Madeline Jennings, Katherine Williams and the handsomest and best trained chorus in musical comedy.

Soldier Left Fortune If He Marries Soon

Youth May Give Up Money Rather Than Be Bothered

Charles Hoffman, private in the Fifty-second infantry, U.S.A., rose with the day shift.

Hoffman stood up in the squad tent, stretched a bit and yawned. Then he suddenly remembered that he is a millionaire—and he sat down abruptly. He had forgotten for the nonce that he had come into the great wealth just before taps sounded the night before.

It wasn't the realisation of his suddenly acquired millions that made Private Hoffman sit down. He recalled that a proviso in the will of his uncle made it obligatory that he should wed within a year if he is to get the $1,500,000 his wealthy relative wanted him to have.

To Wed or Stay Broke.

"To wed or not to wed—that is the question," mused Hoffman. Then a trumpeter sounded regimental assembly. Everybody tumbled out. A top sergeant came.

"Private Hoffman, fall out!" was his order.

Hoffman was relieved from drill duty that he might cogitate on the uncertainties of his new-found position.

Then came the newspaper men.

"Is there a girl already?" bussed a reporter.

"That's my secret," answered Private Hoffman.

"Will you advertise for a wife?" another asked.

"Say, what's the big idea?" asked Hoffman. "I'm not going to be forced into anything. I'm an independent sort and if they try to make me do something I don't want to do—well, I'll just let the money go to someone else."

A Soldier of Fortune.

Hoffman has been a soldier of fortune. He is 23. He enlisted May 23, patriotism his only incentive. His father, Floyd Hoffman, is a wealthy chair manufacturer in Detroit.

"I've knocked about a lot," he says, "and I don't know that I want to get married, money or no money. I've got a year to make up my mind, and I'm not going to hurry."

Hoffman's uncle died a few weeks ago. He wanted to make his nephew settle down, and believed marriage would bring this about. But Hoffman's in the army now, and he wants to get to France.

He's a German-American—mostly American—which accounts for his independence, and he's not certain whether he'd rather have a wife and a million and a half dollars or his independence and [illegible] army.

Balk Bold Plot Of German Aid In Philippines

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 20.—Germany plotted to stir up an insurrection in the Philippine Islands, and to do it her Vice-Consul at Cebu, Conrad Andre, told the natives they could have all the white women of Cebu. This information, covering a plot hatched last April, or near that time, was obtained from official sources to-day.

Andre was arrested and taken to Manila when a mob threatened violence. He was interned there for a time, but later the authorities permitted him to go free, but under close surveillance.

Andre's plotting had been suspected a long time. It was noticed that a group of Filipinos frequented his office, and that in addition there were a number of suspicious Germans. Documentary evidence of his machinations were available later after he had gone aboard an American ship so that the British and Japanese war ships off the Islands could not have a chance to examine his trunk. This trunk is said to have contained papers, which, photographed secretly, showed that Andre was plotting for his government.

Besides plotting to cause an insurrection, Andre was under suspicion of having tried to establish a submarine base in an obscure section of the islands. The suspicion was strengthened some time afterward when a ship was overhauled containing an impromptu machine shop full of supplies.

Still another incident in Andre's career was the wrecking of his automobile as he rode over a culvert on his way into Cebu. Afterward the only thing missing was a mysterious black bag, over which Andre fretted considerably, but about which he dared not complain because of the nature of the contents.

Andre was active in furthering German interests in Cebu, Iloilo, and other islands which he represented for the Kaiser. As the youngest and perhaps the most active of the consular forces in the islands, he was regarded as a pleasant young man and had a good following among business interests.

As a result he used his popularity to overcome the British banking interests' hold on the business of the islands. He expended credit liberally in his capacity as agent for the North German Lloyd Steamship Company and a big German mercantile firm.

His aims were to capture all the business for the Germans and at the same time to make things as unpleasant as possible for the Americans. His intrigue however, became known and it was with difficulty that the authorities rescued him when a mob talked lynching.

For All We Have and Are—

To-night—under the wide canopy of Heaven, trenched in a line from the North Sea to Switzerland, pacing decks of ships, peering into darkness, that holds perils such as God's omnipotence never formed, millions of men are braving death for us.

Not one among whom but holds some woman dear (even though she be only the Dream Woman of his finer moments).

And with thoughts of "her" comes that other thought of the German Michael loosed upon the earth.

Do you wonder why our men fight hard?

Think, then, of what a privilege it is for us women to help send sufficient of the right kinds of food for the bodies of such great souls.

Think of this and then ask yourself whether you will forbear to substitute other foods for the white bread, beef and bacon you and your family now consume; and, in addition, prevent the waste of a single ounce of food in your home.

Your service of sacrifice is so small. The result will be so great—you surely cannot refuse.

Woman's Auxiliary, Organization of Resources Committee, in Cooperation with The Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller.

Practical Housekeeping Hints

HOW TO USE LEFT-OVERS

European housewives are noted for knowing how to combine left-overs in such a way as to make most savory and nourishing dishes; indeed, it is a common saying that a European family can live on what the average family in this country throws away.

If possible, buy for more than just one meal at a time; in other words, when buying plan to have something left over for another meal, particularly where the cooking takes a long time or where the food can be reheated to advantage. This will save you time, labour, fuel and money.

LEFT-OVER MEAT—Left-over beef, lamb, mutton and veal are excellent for hash, scalloped dishes, croquettes, a loaf, and salads. Left-over beef, lamb or mutton makes excellent stews, with the addition of any left-over vegetables. Any left-over meat, vegetables and gravy can be used to make a meat pie. A left-over ham bone will greatly improve the flavour of pea or bean soup. Any kind of cold meat can be chopped and used in an omelet, or combined with rice and tomatoes, used for scalloped dishes.

LEFT-OVER VEGETABLES—Vegetables are not hurt by reheating. Left-over vegetables can be used for flavouring in soups, for making cream soups, scalloped dishes, vegetable hash, filling for an omelet, and for salads. The leaves of celery and any left-over parsley are valuable in the soup pot for flavouring. They can be dried out in a lukewarm oven and kept in a covered jar until needed. The celery roots can be saved for soup stock, and the water in which stewed celery has been cooked can be saved and used for cream of celery soup. The tops of summer beets and turnips, and the outer leaves of lettuce can each be cooked as spinach. They make excellent greens.

STALE BREAD—Small bits of stale bread can be slowly dried in the oven until crisp and brittle, then ground in a meat chopper and rolled. These bread crumbs should be kept in a covered jar, and can be used for frying croquettes, etc. Larger pieces of stale bread may be eaten with soup in place of crackers, or used to make croutons for soup. (Croutons are little squares of bread fried in fat. They are usually served with pea, bean and cream soups.) Small pieces and broken slices of stale bread may be used for stuffing, for griddle cakes, bread omelet and puddings.

SOUR MILK OR CREAM—No sour milk or cream should be wasted. Put it into an earthen or glass jar, little by little, until you have half a cup or a cupful. As soon as it thickens, use it for cottage cheese, griddle cakes, or biscuits, cornbread or gingerbread.

WALL STREET SEES HUNS' COLLAPSE SOON

General Staff is Afraid to tell People The Truth.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Wall street interests believe that the strength of Germany is being rapidly sapped. They say the testimony is growing more and more convincing that an economic and military collapse cannot be long delayed.

It is true that the Germans keep up a brave show of confidence in victory. Successes in the East are magnified, while the slow-footed but inexorable advance of the Allies in the West is distorted into an advantage for the German arms.

Not the least convincing proof of Germany's failure is to be found in the refusal of the general staff to tell the truth in their war bulletins. Of the depletion of the man power of Germany, the world lacks full information; and Germans, themselves, have but an imperfect knowledge. The fact, however, that boys of the class of 1919 are already being used to fill up the gaps in attenuated divisions on the Western front is sufficiently eloquent of an exhausion which cannot be much longer concealed.

When the tremendous force of the first blow had spent itself, and one after another the foes of Germany were able to organize their superior strength, it became merely a question of time when the Central Powers would be beaten on sheer force of numbers. It has been estimated that the total cost of the War to Germany during the first twelve months was $13,875,000,000, or one and a half times the total national income and one-sixth of the national wealth. As the cost during the succeeding years was not less, Germany has already expended on the war one half of the national wealth with which she began it.

Before the war, Germany was, to an increasing extent, becoming more and more dependent on imported food; and her condition at present regarding food supplies can only be guessed at.

LAYS WAR PROPHECY TO WASHINGTON

That George Washington had a vision of the present war is the statement made in 1847 by Anthony Sherman to the Citronelle, Call, a newspaper of Citronelle, Ala.

The present editors of the newspaper have run across the interview and have given it prominence in a recent edition received by E. P. Clausen, No. 3,857 Nokomis avenue, from his family in Alabama.

Sherman said that Washington predicted two struggles for the republics, one which should unite its boundaries and then a furious foreign war.

A shadowy angel is said, in the printed story of 1847, to have appeared in Washington and called out Europe, Asia and Africa to strife, says the Minneapolis Journal. A black cloud came over to America's shores and [illegible] and controlled the United States. So far the prophecy [illegible] ity, but from here on it jumps ahead of present conditions and predicts the future in this manner:—

"From each of these countries there arose thick black clouds, which soon joined into one, and through this cloud gleamed a dark red light, by which new hordes of armed men, who, moving with the cloud, marched by land and sailed by sea to America. This cavalry [illegible] was followed by the cloud.

"And suddenly new, these vast armies devastate the country and village and burn the villages, cities and towns."

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSIC AND THE EXHIBITION.

Visitors to the Toronto Exhibition have the opportunity of hearing good bands, and usually one of special excellence. With this their musical pleasures come to an end, save on such an occasion as opening day when a children's chorus makes a pleasing novelty. Is it not time that the Directors of the Exhibition began to form plans for a broader treatment for the musical art in Canada? Let them take into consultation some professional musician of outstanding reputation. Better still, let them appoint an Honorary Committee of musicians representing all parts of the Province and even the country. Suppose that such a committee consisted of Dr. Vogt, of Toronto, Mr. Hewlett of Hamilton and Mr. Wheeler of London. That is a mere supposition, and is not even a suggestion, so far as the names are concerned. There are hundreds of distinguished musicians who would be glad to give their service in an advisory capacity, as the Canadian artists are consulted with reference to the show in the Art Gallery.

It may be said that the various World's Fairs in the United States could not make the musical side of the show a success. That is no argument, because in the majority of instances the Fairs themselves were not a success. We have in Toronto an Exhibition which has become firmly established as the most notable event of its kind in America, an event attracting nearly a million people within two weeks and continually making a surplus to be handed over to the City Treasurer. A broadening of the Musical features of the Fair could be accomplished without difficulty, and there is abundant evidence to show that good patronage for extra attractions might be secured. The attendance at the Band Concerts already provided is always satisfactory.

Those who attend the Opening ceremonies in the Dairy amphitheatre have often wondered why that place remains idle in the evenings. It seats nearly a thousand people. It might be used for choir competitions and for whatever concert programmes the Advisory Committee might suggest. Certainly the success attending the annual competitive Festival of Alberta might suggest some line of action for the benefit of Music in Ontario. Some day, no doubt, there will be a Music Building, with a pipe organ. That cannot come, however, until the Directors proceed in the right direction with the facilities they now possess. There is real cause for wonder, nevertheless, that the management could be so kind in encouraging the interest in painting by the erection of a modern Art Gallery, and could be satisfied with building an old-fashioned Band Stand as a total contribution to Music.

REPETITION A GREAT MUSICAL EDUCATOR.

The boy who had a special failing for lemon pie was not satisfied with one piece for desert at dinner, so he helped himself several times. Later in the day he became so sick he thought his earthly existence was nearing the end of its alloted span. The boy who "tried" olives for the first time couldn't go them at all. The second time they had not quite so horrid a taste. The third time he could take them without making a wry face. Persistence won, he acquired the taste and to-day a few olives are always a most enjoyable treat for him.

The lemon pie vs. olives theory operates in music, too. Catchy tunes appease the appetite quickly, but the taste does not last well. A classical number does not gain the same response from your musical taste on first hearing, but repetition embeds the music deeply in your mind. People will say they simply cannot stand what they call classical stuff but by way of exception they do appreciate such pieces as Handel's Largo, Dvorak's Humoresque, Paderwski's celebrated Minuet and Beethoven's Minuet in G.

The reason why they consider these as notable exceptions may be given in one word—repetition. They have heard them often and the full message of the composition has taken hold of them. Had the same persons heard other compositions as often they would enlarge the list of classical selections they enjoy.

Repetition is a great educator. The great influence that the talking machine and the player piano are in deepening a liking for the better class of music is just due to the ease with which those who cannot play, themselves, are able to play notable selections over and over again. For one who seizes every opportunity to hear a great pianist, symphony orchestra, band, chorus, organist, violinist, or 'cellist, there will spring up a deep appreciation for the classics that will continue to mature as repetition makes it possible.

MUSIC AS A QUALIFICATION.

A musical friend is a friend indeed. One so frequently hears it said that some young woman has a host of friends because of her music or that a certain young man is tremendously popular on account of his ability to play the piano well. It is obvious that music helps you make friends. It is also true that you appreciate having friends who are musical.

Not long since, a mother who had always been careful about her children's choice of companions, was planning in a judicious way to encourage her son in becoming intimate with some other young folks because they were musical. Going farther and into a more serious realm when a young man reaches the stage when he feels he can assume the responsibilities of taking unto himself a wife, he would do well not to be forgetful of the fact that Arcady is sweeter if the woman of his choice has had the advantages of at least some musical education. And the other way around, when a young woman is about to say "Yes" to the man of her choice, that choice will mean all the more to their enjoyment of life if he is musical.

Young people, who have musical parents will, in their years of mature judgment, never cease to thank Providence for that fact. An employer of a fairly large office staff is noted for asking every male applicant for a position two questions—one is a financial one, the other—are you fond of music?

IN IT AT LAST.

When war broke out Mr. Percy Grainger found it necessary to cancel his engagement in England and remove his mother to the less exciting air of New York. She is of nervous temperament, and, it is suspected, was afraid that her brilliant son might be in khaki before the week was out. Whatever was the cause the pianist-composer became a member of the New York musical colony and was frequently heard there and in other cities in recital. But it is presumed that his professional career was not bringing full satisfaction to him, for as soon as the United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany Mr. Grainger offered himself to American army officers. He was in San Francisco at the time, and is now attached to a regimental band as army musician. He plays the aboe. The conductor of the band will not have to complain of inadequate musicianship in the wood-wind section.

CREATIVE ABILITY IN MUSIC INFERIOR IN WOMEN

Musical Records Show Prominence of Women as Musicians, But Not as Composers.

Strange as it may seem, the statement that woman is man's inferior in the field of musical composition comes from a female pianist, Victoria Boshko. 'Where are the women's names in the world's list of celebrated composers?" Miss Boshko asks. Scan the concert programmes, books on music, look into your own collection of music or go into the music stores, and you find only the names of men. Here and there you may find a woman composer of distinction, but her work proves to be very largely imitative, Miss Boshko tells us. The opera and the concert worlds produce their full need of women, the Carrenos, Powells, Fremstads, Lilli Lehmanns, etc., but the names of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms may not be coupled as yet with any of the other sex.

'What is the cause of this comparative barrenness in a field of endeavour where woman, by virtue of her far greater emotional nature, should be supreme?" asks Miss Boshko. "In her silent struggle for emancipation from the thraldom which the ages have imposed upon her, woman's goal and ambition was to achieve the condition of man; his freedom and his opportunities as well as his culture and his attainments. Her desire to imitate her erstwhile master made her deaf to her own capabilities and to the musically potential emotions which surged in her soul."

Miss Boshko is not entirely pessimistic in her outlook upon woman's future in musical composition. She holds forth a ray of hope for her sisters, as the following shows:

'When woman becomes really free psychically and intellectually, untrammeled by centuries of imitating and not merely free to vote or enter all trades and professions, then she will penetrate her own soul and develop her own capacities. Then woman will come into her own, and the arts, especially music, will be influenced by a new power which, through its emotional intensity, should create great musical results of a novel kind. The world too, will then come into its own and a new musical literature will be created.

WHERE WE GOT OUR SCALE NAMES.

Owing to the lack of general interest in musical history not many singers are familiar with the origin of the tone names of the ordinary diatonic scale "Do-re-mi-fa-sol- la and si." Guido d'Arezzo was a monk who died sixteen years before the Norman Conquest of England. He was familiar with a Latin Hymn to St. John each line of which began with a higher note than the one preceeding. The hymn was as follows:

Ut queant laxis
Resonare fibris
Mira tuorum
Famuli gestorum
Solve polluti
Labii reatum
Sancte Johannes

Take the first syllable of the first six lines and you have Ut, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol, La. The "Si" came from the initials of the two last words in the last line, and in later years the Ut became Doh—which, as Kipling says, is another story.

AN EXAMPLE FOR SCHOOLS.

The Masten Park High School of Buffalo has a chorus of 250 voices and an orchestra of 30 players. There are a good many High Schools and Collegiate Institutes in Ontario, but one hears of none engaged in work—or play—of this sort. We have amateur dramatics frequently enough, presented half in frolic, and rarely of any enduring importance. Usually, however, the outside interest helping to maintain an esprit de corps is football for the boys, and mild flirtation by the girls. Why not try a choral society? Every town or city large enough for a collegiate institute has a musician in professional work competent to direct such an organization, and the practice could not fail to be interesting as well as profitable to the pupils. Most youths and maidens can sing if they try but too frequently in Ontario they refuse to try because of some insane modesty which never can be sufficiently deprecated. Get them started. Much can be done with a man, or a girl, if he or she is caught young.

WORK OF THE PETERBORO' RED CROSS SOCIETY

Operations Will Be Continued Throughout the Winter Months—Regular Monthly Executive Meeting—The President's Report.

That the work of the local Red Cross Society would be successfully and energetically carried on during the wintery months was practically demonstrated in the enthusiastic meeting which was held Monday afternoon in the Public Library. It was the regular monthly executive meeting of the Red Cross, to which the various societies and auxiliaries doing Red Cross work had been asked to send representatives that plans might be discussed for the winter's campaign. Every auxiliary in the city was represented and every member was deeply interested, so that one felt from the earnest tone that pervaded the meeting that in this, the fourth year of the war, the needs of our boys who are serving at the front would still, assuredly, be well looked after.

Hearty Co-operation.

In expressing the thankfulness of the local society for the success of the work of the past year, which had been due in great measure to the hearty co-operation of the various auxiliaries, and in setting forth most forcibly the need for indefatigable and continued labour in the future, the President of the local Red Cross Society, Mrs. Matthews, said in part: "We have asked representatives from the different auxiliaries and societies in the city who have helped us in Red Cross work and in providing comforts for our soldiers in the trenches, to meet with us here, so that they might realize better how much their friendliness and effort mean to our work and also that they may understand, in a very clear way, our responsibilities.

Official Channel.

The societies represented here are really our backbone. It is through the auxiliaries and different societies that our work is done. The office staff is the official channel through which the buying, planning and distribution must go in any business, and that is the relation of the executive to you.

Centralization is necessary for economic reasons. Judging from what information I picked up while in England and when visiting the Canadian Red Cross Headquarters in Toronto lately, I believe that Peterborough is making a finer concerted effort, and thus really accomplishing more that materially benefits our soldiers than many other cities equally large. I am sure we are glad that this is true, as it is good to know that we are conserving energy, while accomplishing a great deal and it also tends to advertise a greater Peterborough.

Perhaps some societies are wondering why they are asked to be represented here to-day, as they are not Red Cross and are separate organizations. All of you have contributed in some way either by contributions of work or by contributions for the prisoners of war or through our C.W.C.A. for the men in the trenches. Perhaps some of you do not know that the C.W.C.A. is a great central supply system for relieving and supplementing the needs of the tired, nerve-strained men, right up in the trenches. It cooperates with the Y.W.C.A. in their work with the contingents overseas as well as with the workers in the naval service.

Appreciation.

We want you to carry back to your auxiliaries our great appreciation for their work and to impress upon them the great need there is at the present time for more work and more sympathy. In the fourth year of war we are apt to grow a little more callous, taking for granted that all the work will go on, even if we do not share. No one will do the share of the one who neglects to do it. It will go undone. It seems a grave charge, but these are grave times and the sick are just as sick, and the wounded are suffering just as much as when our sympathies were first enlisted over three years ago. The fighting is more severe, the casualties at Lens were heavier far than at Langemark, and the casualties at Langemark heavier than at the Somme and at St. Julien. Our responsibilities increase instead of decrease, so we beseech of you to keep up your auxiliaries to the best effort and to be continually on the look-out for more workers. Do not think that our work is going back. It is not—we were almost jubilant because our auxiliaries so nobly responded to our June appeal. As a result 64 cases were sent during the summer, at an estimated value of more than $4,860.00.

It cannot be too carefully noted that all the money received is spent on materials, supplies and prisoners' relief. The Canadian Red Cross Society is the only big business that I have heard of which is run with practically no expense—97 p.c. of the funds received is spent directly for our soldiers. Of course the money is many times multiplied because the voluntary work is not counted."

The reports of the various committees on the work accomplished during the summer months tended to emphasize in a practical way, the note of thankfulness and hope sounded in the President's opening address.

Supplies Shipped.

Miss F. Davidson, convenor of the Packing committee, reported 11 cases shipped in August, containing the following:

10 dressing gowns.
101 pairs pyjamas.
144 pairs socks.
191 sheets.
609 towels.

While in June, July and August, 64 cases had been shipped, including:

53 dressing gowns.
18 bed jackets.
234 day shirts.
461 pairs pyjamas.
1,824 pairs socks—378 C.W.C.A.
545 sheets.
2,694 towels.
125 M. T. bandages.
84 amputation bandages.

The report of the Supplies committee was a cause of general satisfaction as the convenor, Miss Munro, was able to report that the Society had now on hand a sufficient quantity of pillow cotton, towelling, flannelette, flannel and wool for the winter's work.

As it has been decided to keep open the room in the Public Library every Wednesday afternoon for Red Cross work, to be supervised by Mrs. Breyfogle, it is fervently hoped that very many workers may avail themselves of this opportunity of service to the cause so dear to the hearts of all.

The Red Cross Society wish to express their appreciation of Miss Mathers' generosity in donating to the funds of the Society $24.70, being the proceeds of her very successful recital given Monday evening, September 17th, in the Collegiate Hall.

JUDGE HUYCKE SPEAKS ON FOOD CONSERVATION AT KINGSTON MEETING

The Kingston Whig says:

"It has been said that a crust of bread wasted is a bullet wasted, and it is true. A crust of bread may decide this war against us."

"In a newspaper I picked up on the train to-day, I read the following: 'Don't stuff your husband, but husband your stuff.' I think this is a most timely topic for my address here to-night." It is certainly good advice for the ladies."

"When you are asked to conserve the food, it does not mean that you are to starve your children. Give them plenty to eat. I do not think we will suffer if we are put on rations."

"There are no exemptions in this war everyone, both young and old, can do something to win the struggle. If a person refuses to do something, he is just as much a slacker as the able-bodied man who knows that it is his duty to go to the war, and does not go."

"We may be facing a world famine. The men who are fighting our battles at the front, are not in a position to help raise the food, nor can they save it. It is up to the people at home to see that the men in the trenches are provided for."

"It is the highly concentrated food that we must save — the food that can be shipped to the front in good condition."

"Is this too much to ask the people to do? Is there any sacrifice under Heaven too great to make to help the boys who are fighting our battles?"

The above are some of the pointed remarks of Judge Huycke of Peterborough, who on Tuesday night, made a stirring appeal at the public meeting held in the City Hall, on behalf of the conservation of food, in connection with the local campaign for the saving of the food supply, which is to be carried on by the special committee of Kingston women. Mayor J. M. Hughes presided at the meeting and nearly every seat in the spacious hall was filled, showing the interest the citizens of Kingston are taking in this campaign.

The ladies will start out immediately and make a canvas of all the homes in the city for the signing of the food service pledges, when every woman will have an opportunity of signing, so as to be in a position to do her "bit" to help with this titanic struggle.

In addition to the address of Judge Huycke, who was listened to with intense interest, and who is a most entertaining speaker, there was also an address by Principal Gordon of Queen's University, who set forth the importance of the campaign in a forceful address. Bishop Bidwell and Dean Starr occupied seats on the platform with the speakers.

'Miracle Girl' Gives Army Edison to 3rd Regiment.

N. G. J. N.

ASHBURY PARK, N.J.—Anna Case, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., who sings exclusively for the New Edison Recording Laboratories, on Saturday presented an Army and Navy Model to the Third New Jersey Regiment of which Colonel Thomas D. Landon is head. Miss Case motored to Sea Girt, where the regiment is in camp, and surprised the "boys of the Third" with a "war phonograph" and a number of records. She sang "Our America," a song of her own composition, arranged for by the band by Bandmaster Stark of the Edison Storage Battery Band, and the "Star Spangled Banner." She also sang in direct comparison with her own voice as recreated on the New Edison. The soldiers made it the big day of the year at Sea Girt. Colonel Landon showered praises upon Miss Case for her gift, and particularly dwelt upon her career. Being a New Jersey girl, the gift was considered more appropriate for a New Jersey Regiment said the Colonel. Then he told them of the plucky fight Miss Case made and of her being proud of her humble origin. She is the daughter of a blacksmith and he said she is not afraid to let it be known. Governor Edge introduced Miss Case to the Camp. She was taken on a tour of inspection by Colonel Landon who pointed out the camp kitchen and other interesting sights. Thursday she was the guest of Governor Edge at dinner.

Call in and hear some of the records by Miss Case on the New Edison.

ALBERT BROWN OPENS THEATRICAL SEASON IN SPLENDID NEW PLAY

Young Canadian Actor Scores Heavily in "The Love of a King" at the Grand Opera House Last Night—A Fine Company and a Fine Play.

AUDIENCE WAS LARGE

The large audience which gathered at the Grand Opera House last night for the opening attraction of the theatrical season, the romantic costume play "The Love of a King," from the pen of Paul Kester, saw a new Albert Brown. The young Canadian actor who has made thousands laugh by his effective work as a comedian in "The White Feather," and last season in "A Little Bit of Fluff," showed his versatility last night by playing a role full of dramatic possibilities in a manner that stamped him as one of America's most promising actors. It was hard to realize that the blind, trembling old King George III. of the last acts of last night's play was being delineated by the same actor, who, in "The White Feather," made the part of the Secret Service Agent such a success. The roles are as widely different as day is from night, and yet Mr. Brown added to his laurels by his stellar work last night.

Of the play itself it must be said that "The Love of a King" is unusual and gripping. Paul Kester, who dramatized "When Knighthood Was in Flower," has based the action of his new play on the love affairs of King George III. and Hannah Lightfoot, the young Quakeress, and a romantic story it is, climaxed by the disappearance of the bride when she finds that she has married the King, and that she stands in his way and in the way of England. The most touching incident of the play occurs in the last act, when the old King, blind and practically deprived of reason, comes back to the garden, where, fifty years before he had met his Hannah, and recalls the incidents of that meeting, while Hannah, unable to reveal her identity, weeps silently as she listens to him.

Unfortunately for the greater part of the audience the effect of this scene was marred by the inane laughter and audible remarks of some of the young women who occupied seats in the gallery. For some reason or other they found something to laugh at in the touching scene, and their shrill laughter not only disturbed the audience, but must have been a source of annoyance to the people on the stage. In the old days when a woman was never known in the gallery there was a constable to enforce order, but he was rarely needed as the regular gallery patrons entered into the spirit of the play. Under the new conditions two or three are apparently need to restrain the hilarity of the lady galleryites or else the offenders should be picked out and refused admission to anything heavier than a "Mutt and Jeff" performance.

Mr. Brown was surrounded by a very capable caste. Miss Lenore Phelps, as the Quaker girl, sharing the stellar honours with him. She is a newcomer to Peterborough audiences, but her work was refreshing last night. She invested the roll of Hannah Lightfoot with a quaint charm that made the winning of love of a king seem the most natural thing in the world. Other roles were in good hands and the costumes and scenic investiture were in keeping with the quality of the acting.

"The Love of a King" should have a most successful season.

The big musical comedy "Flora Bella" is the next attraction at the Grand with matinee and night performance on Saturday.

The Grand has been brightened and freshened during the summer months, and with new carpets on the floors and other improvements, will continue to keep up its reputation as one of Ontario's leading theatres.

ANNUAL LAKEFIELD FAIR WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

Last Year's Attendance Record Was Broken and a Splendid Showing Was Made in All Lines--Some of the Features of the Afternoon--The Principal Exhibitors.

With the outward smiles which betoken absolute inward satisfaction Mr. Thompson Braden, president and the Board of Directors of the annual Lakefield Fair counted up the record breaking receipts yesterday, which day saw the close of the two-day exhibition in that town. While the entries were not so large as in previous years the crowd, which attended was one of the largest which ever assembled on the Exhibition Grounds and included well over twenty-three hundred or over one hundred more than last year.

INDOOR EXHIBITS

From the point of entrance interest for every age and fancy was found The exhibits in the building, though not so numerous this year, were of a particularly fine quality with the exception of the orchard crops which are admittedly a failure Here, however such as were shown were of a fair variety. The root crops, despaired of in the Spring surpassed the hopes of the most sanguinary and potatoes beets, turnips and carrots of a larger and finer type than have been shown in many years were on exhibition Worthy of particular mention in this class were potatoes, all a perfect oval and exceptionally large, shown by Mr. Robert Garbutt and admitted by the judges to be the finest they have seen in many years. The section devoted to fancy work included a great many beautiful specimens of exquisite needle work. In this department Mrs. O. A. Sawyer, Mrs. Jamieson and Miss Lelia Burgess carried off the greater number of honours.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S WORK

The children's department, composed of some ingenious maps of Ontario and excellent specimens of penmanship proved a point of great interest and prizes were taken by Billy Hendren and Molly Thompson for maps of Ontario, Freda McIlmoyle and Beatrice Johnson for handwriting and for the best collection of wild flowers and seeds Mary Northcote, Clayton Ridpath and Elmeta Hull.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

Every breed of fowl known to the poultry fancier was shown in the poultry department of the exhibition and this one section broke practically all records for entries.

THE OUT-DOOR DEPARTMENT

In the grounds the usual number of side shows, ice cream booths and attractions did splendid business, the Kaiser and Crown Prince being the usual butt of "baseball five cents a throw" games and affording a pleasant diversion from the splendid cattle show, which circumvented the midway.

THE JUDGES.

The difficult task of judging was assigned to the following:

Horses—A. Stacey, Frankfort.
Cattle—Joseph Byers.
Shee and Pigs—Messrs. Wood, of Springville, and Nicholls, of Smith.

Orchard Roots and Garden Produce—Alex Watts, Warsaw.
Ladies' Work—Mrs. Garvey, Mrs Preston and Miss Wilmot, Toronto.
Flowers and Fine Arts, etc.—Mrs Simpson.

All are to be congratulated upon the fair and unbiased judgments given in each department.

THE RACES.

The principal attraction during the afternoon was several spirited races The unusually fine entries made some exciting moments in the finish. Even the children joined in this department of sports when an amusing dog race was run and won by Master Georgie Hendren.

SPECIAL FAIR EXHIBITS

EXHIBIT OF J. W. STUART, OF PETERBOROUGH.

A former well-known Lakefield resident, Mr. J. W. Stuart, of Peterborough, made a display in the Main Building, which received a goodly share of visitors. He showed a new model of the Standard Sewing Machine, which has won its way into many homes by its practical advantages over other machines, chief among which is the comfort and convenience it affords in setting the operator in an easier position. Mr. Stuart is also the local agent for the Willis, Knabe and Gerhard Heintzman pianos with his showrooms at No. 372 Water street. His business takes him into the country a great deal, where he has made a good connection. Sewing machine repairs is also done by Mr. Stuart, who has an expert knowledge of this class of work.

THE GROWING GILLESPIE GARAGE OF PETERBOROUGH.

"All things come to those who have the patience to wait," as well as to work. It is only a few months ago since Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the proprietor of the Gillespie Garage, Aylmer street, opened his service station as sales headquarters in Peterborough for the two popular motor cars, the Studebaker and Maxwell. Although identified in many other varied interests, Mr. Gillespie has found sufficient spare time out of his busy daily routine to have brought these two model cars and, his garage into good prominence. His judicious campaign of publicity, which only began during the past summer has given the Studebaker and Maxwell cars, such a warm welcome to Peterborough that sales of both models have reached his most sanguine expectations.

The sturdy Maxwell five passenger car shown on the grounds drew many visitors to inspect its superb points of merit. This is the kind of car a farmer's family wants. When one begins to look over its specifications, it will be found that the Maxwell has eliminated the extravagances of many cars that owners are compelled to pay for, whether they wish them or not. Then the Maxwell gives you plenty of room for five passengers. That will probably take care of your family. The seats are comfortable, because you will take several rather long trips each year, and the Maxwell gives you extra resilent springs and the upholstering is deep. The engine is powerful, yet simple, and the Maxwell will give the best service at about twenty-five miles per hour. Tire expenses are light, and the material in the car is such that your car will wear for several years without getting the "rattles" or going to the second-hand shop. The unusual durability of the Maxwell car is especially valuable because our climatic conditions make the roads often unsatisfactory for motoring, and the Maxwell has proven its efficiency on the worst kind of roads, as well as good thoroughfares.

Mr. McGill of the Gillespie Garage was in charge of the exhibit and he had many callers during the day.

OAK HALL'S STYLES IN MEN'S FALL CLOTHING.

The representatives of the Oak Hall Clothing store, Peterborough, gave an interesting display of their "Sovereign" brand suits and overcoats for men and boys. These were pictured in their palace fashion marquee where a good demonstration was made of 1917-18 new fall suits and top coats, raincoats, sweaters, hats, and caps. New loose-fitting overcoats in materials and smart tailoring effects which gave the impression of swagger garments for fall and winter wear, attracted attention.

Oak Hall suits, any season of the year, are always models which appeal to young men and good dressers. Those shown at Lakefield Fair were a reflex of the correct fashion plates, and those in charge of the display were rewarded with the personal attention of a large number who gave evidence of becoming Oak Hall patrons.

The biggest difference between a custom 'tailor-made' and a 'Sovereign Brand' garment is the difference in price. Oak Hall suits and overcoats seem so rightly cut, fitted and finished that they actually stand out like made-to-measure garments. The moral is: "Pay less and dress better," in Oak Hall clothing.

Oak Hall, George Street, Peterborough, was well represented. Mr. Geo. Wesley was in charge of the display, in the absence of Mr. Mather, and his assistants were busy giving away illustrated cards, while Oak Hall signs emblazoned many corners of the Fair Grounds.

THE DASHING "CHEVROLET" CAR.

How many of us realize that the war in Europe has made us wealthier than we were before it started—and that the "high cost of living" has been compensated in a measure by increased worth of possessions. A visitor to the Lakefield Fair could not help being surprised at the large number of automobiles that were parked in different sections of the Fair Grounds; and some wondered if the war in Europe and the "high cost of living" had anything to do with the fact. Could so many of our farmers and townspeople been in a position to afford an automobile, as has been seen at our agricultural exhibitions, if it had not been for the war in Europe and the "high cost of living." Does it not sound somewhat paradoxical when the cost of living is high one can afford more of the world's comforts and pleasures? One thing is certain, value tendencies have been, and are, moving steadily upward.

Several of the enterprising automobile dealers of Peterborough were well represented at the Lakefield Fair and the models they brought for the inspection of the visitors ranked among the best selling machines in Canada.

The Manning Garage of Water street, Peterborough sent a fine dashing model of the Chevrolet "Baby-Grand" and another of their five-passenger touring cars. These were shown in a prominent position near the entrance gate and were viewed by hundreds of visitors.

The Chevrolet models are powerful, strong running machines, as the specifications would justify its claims that, for commercial and professional use, or for pleasure, the Chevrolet for 1918 will extend its circle of patrons in this territory. The Manning Garage has been fortunate in securing many patrons for the Chevrolet The members of the firm are capable, hard workers, and expert and reliable in their business dealings.

The five passenger touring car is priced at a low figure. Such has been the phenomenal success of this car that modern methods of building and industrial expansion have been taxed to the limit to supply the demand. The Chevrolet is built in the extensive Chevrolet Works at Oshawa—one of the largest and most complete automobile factories in Canada, backed by a million-dollar corporation in which every shareholder is a Canadian.

Mr. Bert Manning and Mr. T. Appleby of the Manning Garage were personally in charge of the Chevrolet exhibit and as both are well known in Lakefield and vicinity, it is safe to say that numerous good prospects fell to their lot.

PIANO DISPLAY FROM "HEINTZMAN HALL," PETERBOROUGH.

In the main building "Ye Olde Firme" of Heintzman and Co., piano manufacturers were well represented, and music lovers had a good opportunity of inspecting the "aristocrat among pianos"—the piano that has a long string of gold medal awards of the most valuable character. This exhibit was made by Mr. H. B. Britton of "Heintzman Hall," Peterborough, the manager of the new Heintzman Piano Salon, recently opened on Hunter street, in the new Royal Bank Building.

This exhibit attracted many callers and Mr. Britton's assistants gave courteous attention to all and exemplified the numerous claims of the Heintzman piano in a practical manner. The handsome type of up-right piano, in fumed oak shown, reflected the skill of the expert piano builder. These Heintzman pianos have a double-repeating action, and have been the choice of some of the greatest musicians of the world.

"Ye Olde Firme" of Heintzman and Co., insist that their pianos are built for an enduring service, that they possess that rare tone which has held the hearts of men and women of several generations. In their handsome Peterborough warerooms—"Heintzman Hall"—the largest choosing of all good pianos under any one roof may be found in the Heintzman Piano Salon.

What better investment for part of the extra fruits of a big harvest, than a piano, a piano-player, or one of the wonderful reproducing Victor Victrolas? It would be transmuting the success of the year's crops into an uplifting influence in the home which will benefit all for years and years to come. The player-piano shown by Heintzman & Co., has had a remarkable sale. The "odd man" can play it, as it plays anything that is written without the player having a conservatory training. It opens up a whole new world of musical enjoyment to untrained fingers, and saves you from those time-worn words, "Oh, I can't play anything."

The Victor Victrola and Sonora are additional instruments of quality, carried by Heintzman & Co., which reproduce the voices of the greatest musicians "clear as a bell." They vary the tone, shading and play every record, two features well worth investigating. The elusive sprightliness of an artist's voice is brought out with exquisite sympathy and clearness by either one of these players. Convenient terms on all purchases are offered. For $5 and $10 down, Heintzman & Co., will deliver into any home any of these instruments, so that its great advantages may be yours and your children and your friends for the future.

The completeness of the Heintzman & Co., Victrola service arises from the favoured position they occupy as wholesale distributors of Victrolas, and their sound proof Victrola rooms.

You could buy an organ now at "Heintzman Hall," Peterborough for less than half what it is worth. Mr. Britton has generally on hand a number of used organs taken in exchange for new instruments, which may be purchased for from $10 up. Any of these would be suitable for a school or small church or for a beginner to learn on.

FUEL SITUATION DOES NOT PLEASE THE LABOUR COUNCIL

Citizens Advised to Buy Supplies From Municipal Depot — Coal Controller to Be Requested to Investigate Alleged Maintenance of Prices.

THE SCARCITY OF WOOD

Certain aspects of the fuel situation were discussed at length by the Trades and Labour Council last night. One of the resolutions advised all citizens to purchase their coal from the city even if the price be the same as that charged by the regular dealers. Some members called attention to the reported action of the City Council in consulting with a local dealers in regard to prices and the increase in the price of municipal coal evoked considerable dissatisfaction. It was asserted that the municipal coal yard was not being conducted as it should be, that it was being allowed to drag along, and that the "other fellow" was receiving a boost by the City Council instead of being held down. Delegates expressed the opinion that the coal dealers should not be called in by the Council when questions of prices and the operation of the municipal coal yard were discussed. There was no effort made to consult the workingmen who were the largest consumers of coal. One impression that prevailed suggested that the city was moved to increase its price in order that retail dealers might dispose of coal which they had bought at a high price.

Delegates pointed out that the price of coal at the mines had been fixed and that the freight rates to Suspension bridge had been lifted. As a result, it was considered the retail price should be lower, but the city proposed to increase the price to consumers. The secretary was instructed to write Canada's coal controller, Mr. MacGrath, requesting him to investigate the alleged maintenance of prices by the big operators as indicated by the unchanged retail prices in spite of the fixture of prices at the mines and the suspension of freight rates to the bridge. It was stated that dealers had estimated the price of coal at $7.07 at the border, that there was now a reduction of $2.00 a ton following the action of the United States, and consequently when coal is sold in Peterborough at $10.00 a ton there must be a saving to the city and to the dealers of $2.93.

In order that the workingman should be fully acquainted with the city coal yard it was suggested that a deputation should attend the next meeting of the Council and ask for the desired information.

Attending City Council Meeting.

This idea developed into the broader question of a larger attendance of workingmen at the Council meetings where, it was claimed, labour was not represented, and that seven or eight coal dealers had more influence than the entire body of workingmen.

"Mayor Duffus said he had the authority to investigate the cost of living," declared one delegate, "and that he had told Alderman Dobbin to do so, but I haven't seen much results of any action that may have been taken. Citizens are being urged to produce more than ever, but if a man wants to keep a few chickens the price of grain is so high that the fowl eat their heads off. Somebody should investigate these conditions and if the Council has any authority it should be employed in the interests of the average householder and for the cause of greater production that is directly affected."

Reverting to the coal situation some members stated that a factor in securing the municipal coal yard was the city's desire to protect the citizens against the scarcity that reached an alarming stage last winter, and that the supplies were mainly for an emergency reserve and not solely to compete with the retail dealers.

Wood Shortage.

Then the discussion turned to the shortage of wood. One member told of the failure of a certain private home in Peterborough to buy wood here last week. There was sickness in the house and it was more than necessary to secure a supply.

Another experience was that of a man who was refused wood last March. There was wood in a yard north of the Imperial Oil Company's tanks, and there is a quantity of it there yet. These and several other similar incidents left the impression that something remained to be explained, that there seemed to be a black man in the wood pile.

The abolition of the ward system in municipal elections and speed of trains entering the city were other questions introduced.

This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.

IS GRATIFYING EVIDENCE

Boston Post:—"The prompt passage in the Senate of the joint resolution compelling the service in the United States army of all aliens save Germans and others exempted by treaty, is gratifying evidence that the federal government is wake to the desirability of securing military service from these men who have obtained so much from the United States and purpose to give her nothing."

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Russian Soldiers Deceived By Huns

In some incredible manner Col. Karenius managed to reach the pier. There he climbed up. A group of infuriated soldiers confronted him. He drew his revolver and fired, killing several of his men. Then a great Russian soldier struck out his brains with an iron rod.

NUMEROUS WITNESSES.

I personally visited Viborg on my way to Stockholm. The details as written above were attested by numerous witnesses. I saw troops dragging the river underneath the bridge, seeking the bodies of the officers they had murdered. They had recovered seven bodies.

One colonel, it was told, was found at his home, dining with his family, by a group of soldiers. Half insane with anger at the German inspired report of the officers' alleged refusal to aid Kerensky, the colonel was seized and his neck half severed as he stood before his family.

Col. Dejudin, of the Cossacks, was found dead in the woods, killed by Cossacks, and a victim of German plotting against the Russians soldiers' loyalty.

STILL AT IT.

(Kansas City Journal.)

The Huns seem to be afraid that they are not living fully up to the reputation for barbarity they had established, so they are now dropping poisoned candy among the children of France.

tions excluding farmers had been made.

The Premier Nonplussed.

Deputy Speaker Rainville was not at the Chamber and Premier Borden was manifestly nonplussed. He asked an opportunity of perusing Mr. Rainville's letter and consulting with him upon it.

"My impression is," said the Premier, "that the regulations are not yet completed. Probably the Deputy Speaker was just giving his impression about what these regulations might be."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked if regulations had been passed exempting any particular class of British subjects in Canada from military service.

"The proposed regulations will come to us from the Military Service Council," replied the Premier, "with the approval of the Central Appeal Judge. They have not yet been presented to the Government, therefore I do not know whether any such regulations as suggested are to be submitted."

MISS RHODA NICKELLS and MR. RUSSELL LEONON, singing the hit of the Big Musical Comedy, "Flora Bella," entitled "Give Me All of You."

"Flora Bella," which will be the Saturday attraction at "The Grand," sounds a new note in musical comedy. It is entirely different from anything that has been seen in Peterborough in years. In the first place, "Flora Bella" has a coherent, intelligent plot which could have furnished a basis for a comedy even if it were not the backing of a musical production. Among the most popular musical numbers are "Good Day, Good Night," "It's Very Hard to Bring Up Father," "Flora Bella," "You're the Girl," "Love is a Dance," etc. A bevy of good looking girls and boys make up the charming chorus that can surely sing. The seat sale opened this morning.

SPECIAL APPEAL TO CATHOLIC CITIZENS TO HELP NEW FUND

Campaign Here Next Week to Aid Chaplains With Canadian Forces —For Spiritual Welfare of the Men.

The Knights of Columbus have arranged for a thorough canvas of the Province during the last week in September, from the 23rd to the 29th, in aid of a fund to assist the Catholic chaplains overseas. Peterborough Council has enthusiastically undertaken its share of the effort. It is planned to visit every Catholic home in the city next week to solicit contributions for this work, which was explained last Sunday in the Catholic churches, and it is understood, be again commended to the people next Sunday. A meeting of the Knights of Columbus will be held next Sunday to complete the details of campaign week. A large attendance of members is requested to ensure the success of the canvas.

The leadership in this work has been assumed by the Knights of Columbus, but every Catholic man, woman and child will be solicited for contributions.

In a letter to the Peterborough members, Mr. John K. Corkery, G. K., makes the following appeal, in part:

"As a Knight of Columbus I appeal to you personally to help to make the campaign a success. It is the greatest work ever undertaken by the Knights of Columbus in Ontario. It is the most deserving cause of the day. The war is dragging on. Much has yet to be done, and as you know, our chaplain service is going to remain till the finish. What will you do to answer the call for help? Carefully read the enclosed circular, showing in greater detail than I can relate here the needs and purposes of the campaign. Show it to your Catholic friends who may not be Knights of Columbus.

At the recent Supreme Convention a special resolution, prepared by our delegates, was passed authorizing the Canadian Councils to legally assess the Canadian membership two dollars ($2.00) per member for war purposes. By virtue of this authority the State Deputy of Ontario has declared that this tax is now due and payable, the collections to be applied altar bread and wine, candles, Catholic chaplains. However, we must not be satisfied with the amount actually collected from our membership by taxation. We want every Knight of Columbus to give willingly and generously according to his means.

Arrangements are being made for the campaign as it affects the Catholic people generally. This is a special appeal to the Knights of Columbus and you in particular. Surely you will give more than the actual tax. You no doubt have given generously and liberally to the Patriotic and other war funds in the past. This is a higher appeal to your generosity. The spiritual and moral welfare of our soldiers is now the cause for which aid is being sought.

The campaign has the endorsation and approval of the Archbishops and Bishops of Ontario. Your attention is drawn to the advertising appeals and editorial support given by The Catholic Register, The Catholic Record and The Kingston Freeman."

The Object of the Fund.

The movement has sprung from Major O'Gorman's reports of the need of accommodation for the spiritual welfare of the men on service.

In his letter, Mr. Corkery points out that there were more than fifty Catholic chaplains with the Canadian forces, and, of these, thirty-two are on the western front. They are struggling along depending upon the benevolence of others for places to celebrate the sacrifice of the mass, and generally to attend to the spiritual needs of the men. Besides they have had no huts or tents of their own, nor has there been any recreation centre where Catholic soldiers could congregate. The Chaplains have out of their own funds, supplied altar bread, and wine, candles, rosaries, prayer books and other articles of devotion. To continue to carry on this work the present fund will be collected throughout Canada and a generous response is expected in Peterborough.

NOT AFRAID TO MEET BROTHER IN BATTLE

NEW YORK.—Although he faces the prospect of meeting his brother, a soldier of the kaiser, in future battles, Jacken Wendel is a typical American. He refused to claim exemption after being drafted into the American army. When attention was called to the fact that he might meet his brother in battle, he said:

"If we meet on the firing line my brother will fight for Germany and I will lay down my life for Uncle Sam."

Wendel came from Germany nine years ago.

Belgian Aviator Leads Immense Foe To Disaster

GREAT GERMAN "RUMPLER" BUILT IN AUGUST, CRASHES TO EARTH.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—How Adjutant Maurice Medaets, of the Belgian flying corps, tricked a monster German two-man aeroplane into a fight at an altitude of 20,000 feet, riddled it with machine gun fire and sent it crashing to earth behind the Belgian lines, killing the pilot and observer, was told in a message to the Belgian legation here.

Medaets, in a swift Neuport, was cruising above Dixmude on September 11 when he saw shrapnel from the Belgian guns breaking far above him and he hastened upward to investigate. A German machine with two men was trying to escape the gun fire and Medaets gave chase, although he could not overtake his enemy.

"Finding that the German either would not fight or was endeavoring to lead him into a "trap" the legation's statement reads, "The Belgian flier decided to try a ruse. Making a half turn Medaets started slowly toward the Belgian trenches at an altitude of 20,000 feet. Medaets continued to watch him until both machines were over Dixmude. Then turning quickly, he opened fire with his machine gun. He could see that the German observer, severely wounded, had sunk down in his seat and that the German machine was evidently out of control.

"The Belgian machine was approaching the enemy at such a rate of speed that Medaets had only time to fire a few shots point blank and to make a perilous loop to avoid a collision before the German plane, riddled by bullets crashed down within the Belgian lines.

"The German airplane was found to be an enormous 'Rumpler' of the latest model, put into service at Johannisthal on August 9, propelled by a 260-horse power Mercedes motor and armed with two machine guns.

Edison Has Plan To Deflect Torpedoes

Report that Invention Succeeded During Recent Attack.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A special despatch from Washington to the Tribune says: Thomas A. Edison has contrived a mechanism to deflect torpedoes from their courses, it was said here to-day. According to report, the device has been tried with success on several destroyers and has been installed on some liners.

It is believed here that the extraordinary gyrations of a torpedo which missed a big American liner which arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port were due, not as the passengers and some of the ship's officers seemed to believe, to some new wrinkle developed in a German laboratory, but to the genius of Mr. Edison.

The futile missile was described by the passengers as a "corkscrew" or "boomerang" torpedo. One of ship's officers was quoted as saying that it was a new model of torpedo, one he had heard pursued a corkscrew course toward its mark, to make dodging difficult and if by any chance was avoided by the vessel, would turn and strike it from the opposite side.

The erratic course described by observers is said to be characteristic of the effects obtained by Mr. Edison's device in practise, and the final leap from the water or abrupt change in direction is seen as the final result when the torpedo came within range of the full strength of the diverter.

It is asserted with confidence that the American liner was one of the vessels on which the instrument had been installed The work of equipping other vessels is going on at a rapid rate.

The expense and time necessary to install the defence are said to be insignificant when the service rendered is taken into consideration.

A policeman, with more than usual avoirdupois and expanse of shoe leather, and just passed a little terrace, with a bit of garden in front, when a small boy ran after him.

"Hallos, kiddie!" said the arm of the law, genially, 'what can I do for you?"

"Mother sent me out," answered the youngster, "to ask you if you would mind walking up and down our path for a minute or two. It's just been gravelled, and we ain't got a roller."—Good Jests.

You may lead any woman to talk but you cannot necessarily compel her to think. It all depends.
